Ambassador White Assures France Tariff Bill Is Not Hostile.

President Schurman of Cornell Notes Decadence of Love of Liberty.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

PARIS, July 3.—The annual Fourth of July dinner of the American Chamber of Commerce at the Hotel Palais d'Orsay tonight was exceptionally brilliant. Laurence V. Benet, president of the chamber, presided, and covers were laid for 400, among whom were many visiting Americans.

The guests of honor included American Ambassador Henry White, M. Barthou, Minister of Public Works; Jacob G. Schurman, president of Cornell University, and Patrick Murphy.

Ambassador White delivered the principal speech. His most important utterance consisted of an official assurance, directed directly to Minister Barthou, that the American tariff revision, contrary to the idea prevailing here, was in nowise aimed at France. The Ambassador explained that the United States, like other countries, in an age of Dreadnoughts, and constantly augmenting expenses, needed additional revenue, and, like other popular governments, desired that the increased taxation should fall on those best able to pay.

He pointed out that France enjoyed a monopoly in articles of luxury exported to the United States for the use of the well-to-do, and these people would still purchase regardless of price. On the other hand, a slight augmentation in the price of necessities would reduce consumption.

"I do not claim," said the Ambassador, "that in revising the tariff our first preoccupation is to safeguard the interests of France or any other foreign country, but I do insist that the contrary is not true."

M. Barthou, after paying a tribute to the United States, and President Taft, recalled former President Roosevelt's words to M. Jusserand, the French Ambassador: "I can imagine war with any other country except France," as an expression of the friendship between the two countries.

The Minister said France could only await the consummation of the American tariff with some apprehension which, perhaps, might be equally felt on the other side, as both countries had ultra-protectionists.

President Schurman warned his hearers that there was less enthusiasm for liberty and the rights of men in the United States and Europe now than there was a generation ago. Nevertheless, he viewed with great satisfaction present conditions in the United States.

HARRIMAN PARALYZED.

Specialist at Vienna Tells Famous Railroad King That Cure Is Beyond Power.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

VIENNA, July 3.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Prof. Adolf Struempell visits E. H. Harriman every third day at Semmering, the health resort in the Austrian Alps.

At the first examination the famous specialist on nervous diseases learned that Mr. Harriman was suffering from nervous prostration, which, however, had been improved by his voyage and his journeying in Europe.

Then Prof. Struempell saw that something else than nervous fag affects Mr. Harriman, who has a slight difficulty in moving his legs and walks stiffly. So Struempell made an examination and discovered a slight paralysis of the patient's lower limbs.

Streumpell promises Mr. Harriman to cure him of nervous prostration which, of course, is the lesser of his two ailments.

Prof. Struempell tells Mr. Harriman frankly that his slight paralysis may be relieved, but not cured. Electric baths, carbonic acid gas and mineral baths will effect this relief, the professor hopes, and he assures Mr. Harriman that if the paralysis progresses it would do so very slowly and need not affect his general health.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

KANSAS CITY (Mo.) July 3.—Mary Arder, 2 months old, who was born in Tavonchesskoy, Russia, traveled the whole distance from Russia in a porcelain-lined bath tub.

"We believe in being clean," her father, a big Russian, told John Jenkins, depot interpreter. "We could not very well afford to buy both a crib and a bath tub, so we bought a tub and made it do for both purposes."

Arder has eleven other children, too. He was taking them to Hillsboro, Kan., where his brother owns a wheat farm.

Dr. Will W. Carlton, Methodist Episcopal Pastor of Mason City Visits Resorts of Gamblers and the Underworld, But Finds no One to "Pinch."

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

MASON CITY (Iowa) July 3.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Dr. Will W. Carlton, who for the last seven years has been the pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church of this city, yesterday afternoon presented himself before Mayor Fred A. Kirschman and received the appointment as special police. This was in accordance with the desire of the Mayor, the arrangement having been previously made between the two men.

The Mayor turned the keys of the city over to the keeping of the preacher, and with the badge of authority pinned upon the lapel of his coat and the regulation billy dangling by his side, he went out upon his beat. The circuit races being on, he went directly to the racing grounds and went through the hundred or more stables, finding everything in ship shape.

He entered the quarters where bets were wont to be made, but he found nothing to do whatever.

Pastor Carlton was not given any help from the police force with reference to questionable places, not desiring it. He preferred to be his own sleuth, and but a little of the time accepting the assistance of the deputy chief.

From 9 o'clock on until midnight he was after places where gambling might be found. Theaters, moving picture shows, questionable resorts were all taken in. There was not an arrest made. He will hold his position until midnight tonight.

APPEALS FOR STEW.

Lad Who Ran Away from Los Angeles Turns Up Hungry in New Orleans.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW ORLEANS, July 3.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] "I'd like to have a plate of hot stew," said a fifteen-year-old boy when he was stopped in Lafayette Square last night by Patrolman Burt of the Central Station. The youngster said he was Jesse White, son of Jesse White, a storekeeper of Los Angeles. He ran away from home several weeks ago with $25 that he had saved. His father was anxious for him to attend school and he said he was "tired of it." He was out of money and looking for a place to sleep when the policeman found him. He was turned over to the Children's Society.

"Yep, I'm hungry," said the lad, "and I'd like to have a stew, and I'm sleepy, too."

Although the youngster was fagged out he was a spunky chap. When arraigned before Judge Wilson today his appearance appealed to the court so favorably that he was not disposed to commit him to the society until he heard from the boy's parents, and while awaiting a telegram from them he ordered that the lad be placed in the charge of Janitor Joseph J. Williams and his wife, who are caring for him.

WOMEN AT WAR.

SUFFRAGETTES OUSTED IN SEATTLE SQUABBLE.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

SEATTLE (Wash.) July 3.—The fight between the factions of the Washington Equal Suffrage Association was discussed on the floor of the National Woman's Suffrage convention this afternoon, and the convention decided unanimously to unseat all the Washington delegates.

The national Executive Committee, to which the Spokane delegates, unseated by the State convention, appealed, tried for three days to effect a compromise between the factions, and, failing, referred the contest to the national convention.

During the debate this afternoon, a Washington delegate declared the national convention should mind its own business, and said that woman suffrage had been lost in Oregon through its interference.

National President Anna M. Shaw broke into the debate to say that the national body had jurisdiction. She protested hotly against "insults offered by those who denied such jurisdiction."

The vote that unseated all the combatants was then taken. The State of Washington now has no vote in the convention, and the regulars are in control of the State organization, but under censure by the national body.

Gas Explodes as Dirigible Starts and Crowd Is Stampeded.

Ohio Millionaires Spend Wild Night in Storm-Tossed Balloon.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

REDDING (Cal.) July 3.—In the presence of several thousand spectators, the dirigible balloon America suddenly exploded at a local recreation park this afternoon, fatally injuring Capt. James Moore, the aëronaut, and Milton Mygatt, a bystander.

Several spectators were knocked down and seriously hurt as the immense crowd made a rush to get away from the scene of the accident.

Mygatt, who is 80 years old, was thrown to the grown with such force by the explosion that he sustained a fractured hip.

Neither man is expected to recover.

Capt. Moore was making the first of three ascensions, or flights, that he had contracted to make here. Attached to the huge gas bag was a small basket-like framework carrying a small engine, that furnished the power for the propeller.

The dirigible was about fifty feet above the ground, and Capt. Moore had just exclaimed, "Here goes for a successful flight or a trip to hell," when the revolving propeller caught in the bag and tore a huge hole in the covering, from which volumes of gas poured out.

The aëronaut quickly realized the danger, but before he could stop the engine or drop out of the basket, the gas ignited from the motor sparker. There was a flash and a roar, the force of which threw many people to the ground.

The crowd became panic-stricken and trampled a number of people under their feet.

Moore and Mygatt were hurried to St. Caroline Hospital. On account of his age and feebleness the latter is not expected to survive, while Capt. Moore was so seriously burned that little hope is held out by the physicians.

Capt. James Moore is known in Los Angeles as the chief promoter of the Aërial Navigation Company, which concern was organized here several months ago. In that enterprise he was associated with W. A. Hall of the Signal Corps of the National Guard, and with others.

SKY PILOT IS STORM TOSSED.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CANTON (O.) July 3.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Buffeted all night in a terrific gale, their balloon, the Sky Pilot, in the grasp of a forty-five mile gale most of the time, J. H. Wade, Jr., and A. H. Morgan, millionaire amateur aëronauts of Cleveland, rode the storm safely. The balloon landed at 3 o'clock this morning a mile from St. Mary's, Elk county, Pa., 150 miles from the balloon's starting point here.

The balloon ascended at 8 o'clock last evening, the intention being to make a moonlight flight for pleasure, and for the perfection of some device expected to record phenomena in the night. The windstorm which swept over Eastern Ohio a few hours later caught the Sky Pilot in its grasp.

The balloon had run into the swift air current near Canton. It was whirled toward Youngstown, in a northeasterly path, then was sharply swung to the east by another current of air, which in reality was a gale. A landing was found impossible, though the aëronauts were finding riding in the gale dangerous.

Finally at 3 o'clock in the morning, the big gas bag was dropped in a field in Elk county. Relatives in Cleveland and officers of the Aëro Club here, of which the millionaires are members, began to fear for their safety before daylight. No word was received from them until 1 o'clock this afternoon, when a telegram was received reading: "Made rough landing, St. Marys, Pa."

The aëronauts are experienced in air journeys, having made frequent trips from this city and Massachusetts cities. They were in the recent race from Indianapolis also. This attempt was their first at night flights.

WRIGHTS DELAYED TO MAKE REPAIRS.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

WASHINGTON, July 3.—Orville Wright left for Dayton today to get the cloth necessary for replacing the lower plane of his machine, which was badly ripped in striking a tree yesterday while the aviator was gliding to earth.

There may not be another flight of the aëroplane at Fort Myer until Friday or Saturday of next week.

It seems now that the cause of the motor stopping while Orville was flying about the field, was due to the magnet, which differs from the one the Wrights had been using.

Wilbur explained, after the mishap yesterday, that the reason the machine did not glide in the accident last September which resulted in the death of Lieut. Selfridge and the serious injury of Orville Wright, was because the rear vertical rudder was crippled and ruined the balance of the machine, moving the center of balance forward and causing the aëroplane to pitch forward to the ground.

YOUNG WIFE TIRES OF MILLIONAIRE HUSBAND.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PHILADELPHIA, July 3.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Prof. James M. Munyon, who, at the age of 60 years, wedded a former actress, in April, 1908—his third wife—is now being sued for divorce. His wife, Mrs. Pauline Louise Neff Munyon, has filed preliminary papers in the common pleas court.

Mrs. Munyon, who is 25 years old, is not seeking absolute divorce. She wants a legal separation with alimony, and the reason stated in the libel filed by her attorney, P. F. Rothermel, Jr., is that her husband "locked her out of their Overbrook mansion."

It is evident that in all "Dr." Munyon's remedies, there isn't one which can effectually cure a matrimonial breach

Mrs. Munyon charges, among other things, that she was ordered from the place on June 12, a date within two months and three days of the first anniversary of their marriage.

Mrs. Munyon is the daughter of Col. D. J. Neff, dean of the Blair county bar, and was formerly an actress. "Dr." Munyon has two married sons.

UNCOVERED.

ARRESTS REVEAL BIG GANG OF SMUGGLERS.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

EL PASO (Tex.) July 3.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] A great smuggling ring has been discovered operating on Mexican frontier, whereby large quantities of merchandise are taken into the sister republic. The custom officers report the arrest of Francisco Duran and many others in the rings, as well as the confiscation of a large consignment of merchandise at Lapasta, a small hamlet on the Sonora-Arizona border.

From all accounts this office has been in operation many months and the Mexican revenue laws defrauded of thousands of dollars. The officials are reserved regarding the details as apprehensions are expected to be made elsewhere.

A number of important papers and letters were taken. They implicate many agents in various parts of the country.

The revenue officials of United States will be asked to help make the case complete, as it is said the band has operated both in Mexico and the United States.

TARIFF BILL.

BREAKFAST IS SAFE

Tea and Coffee Tax Stricken Out.

Maximum and Minimum Provision Is Adopted by Two to One.

Senate Also Agrees to Vote on Income Tax Amendment, Monday.

Senator Bailey Says Census Appointments Are Made for Politics.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

WASHINGTON, July 3.—The maximum and minimum provisions of the tariff bill were adopted today by the Senate by a vote of 36 to 18.

The measure is to go into effect March 11, 1910, and 90 days must elapse before a President's proclamation applying the maximum duty of 25 per cent. ad valorem in addition to other duties provided for in the tariff bill will be operative.

The duty on tea and coffee, as provided for in the amendment originally reported by the committee, was stricken out by the Senate Finance Committee.

The Senate also agreed to vote on the submission of an income tax amendment to the Constitution to the several States for ratification, this vote to be taken next Monday at 1 o'clock.

Mr. Heyburn offered and Mr. Aldrich accepted, on behalf of the Finance Committee, the amendment requiring ninety days' notice for the application for the maximum rate after the minimum rate has been in force. In presenting the amendment Mr. Heyburn expressed apprehension that as it stood the provision would cause unrest.

This criticism brought Mr. Aldrich to his feet with a recital of discriminations that have been practiced by foreign governments against the United States. France, he said, had imposed her maximum tariff against the United States and against no one else. Germany had imposed various restrictions upon American meat and other products, and about a dozen other nations had maximum and minimum laws. It was to protect the American producers of farm and other products that this provision had been framed.

RETALIATION APPROVED.

Senator Bacon, approving the idea of a retaliatory provision, said he thought the method employed should be reversed. The duties should be fixed, he said, with the power of the President to increase a rate, if this country is discriminated against.

Mr. Cummins suggested a substitute, fixing a penalty of 25 per cent. of the existing duty instead of 25 per cent. ad valorem, on countries discriminating against the United States, but it was voted down, viva voce.

The vote being taken on the maximum and minimum proposition it was adopted, 36 to 18.

The income tax question was brought up promptly, and an agreement was reached to vote at 1 o'clock next Monday afternoon on Senator Brown's resolution, providing for the submission to the States of an amendment to the Constitution authorizing the imposition of an income tax.

The agreement to vote on the income tax is equivalent to a declaration that the Senate will proceed with its business on the fifth of July, despite the observance of the holiday everywhere else. The Senators were slow in gathering today. Senator Aldrich was in his seat at the beginning of the session, and as soon as the routine business permitted, he called up the tariff bill.

IMMEDIATE VOTE ASKED.

But before any progress could be made, Senator Brown took the floor to press his income tax proposition. He asked that a vote be taken immediately, but encountered opposition from various quarters, Senator McLaurin being especially antagonistic. After much debate the Nebraska Senator agreed to postpone action and presented the proposition for a vote on Monday. There was no especial objection, and the vote was accordingly ordered.

As soon as the agreement to vote was made the tariff bill was taken up and Mr. Aldrich presented his maximum and minimum rate amendment. Mr. Aldrich immediately proceeded to explain the Senate's substitute for the original maximum and minimum provision of the bill as it passed the House. The House provided for a specified increase of the rates of duty on numerous articles fixed by the bill, in case of the failure of the country from which any given article should come, to grant to the imports of the United States the same terms given to importations from the most favored nations.

The Senate Committee on Finance presented o complete substitute providing for an increase of 25 per cent. over the rates of the Payne-Aldrich bill against countries which, by export bounty or otherwise, discriminate against the United States. The amendment provided that the additional rate should go into effect immediately unless the President should, after March 31, 1910, issue a proclamation that no such discrimination exists.

The amendment also provided a duty

School Superintendent Accuses Society.

Home Influence Responsible, He Declares.

Causes Sensation in Denver Teachers' Meeting.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

DENVER (Colo.) July 3.—Asserting that American homes and society are responsible for the influences that make the teacher's life a burden and in the end corrupt the morals of children, and pave the way for a criminal career in children, I. C. McNeill, superintendent of schools of Memphis, Tenn., created a mild sensation before the National Council of Education today.

The meeting of the council is the only gathering preliminary to the sessions of the National Educational Association, which begins Monday.

The principal subject before the council during the day was the care of delinquents, tactfully referred to as "Exceptional Children."

The introductory statement in the discussion of delinquents was made by James H. Van Sickle, superintendent of Schools of Baltimore, and he was followed by Mr. McNeill, who said:

"Some teaching is so unscientific and consequently so spiritless that it would make most any child delinquent. Parents and teachers often make delinquents of children by failing to observe the fundamental things and processes incident to growth and development. Permanent aversion to school is the legitimate result of putting children at work on studies they are not mature enough to comprehend."

The speaker condemned the attempt to put high-school branches into grammar grades or intermediate studies into primary grades, and said that educational agencies must look continuously to the care of the physical and emotional, as well as to the intellectual side of education.

Miss Olive M. Jones of New York City was of the opinion that the care of delinquents is a civic duty rather than a school problem.

F. C. Bruner of the Chicago schools urged physical training in goodly proportions as an aid to mental training for the "exceptional child."

An entertainment was provided for the visiting teachers tonight, when "Hiawatha" dramatized, was produced at the Denver Auditorium, under the auspices of the Haskell Indian School. Every part in the play was taken by a full-blooded Indian.

The first work of the association will be taken up Monday evening, when a general session will be held in the Auditorium. Nearly 20,000 teachers are in the city.

LOYALLY SAVES HUSBAND.

Loving and Faithful Wife Wins His Release from Penitentiary and Life Imprisonment.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CINCINNATI, July 3.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The triumph of a wife and mother over seemingly insurmountable obstacles is the story of the devotion of Mrs. Vincent Labono, No. 918 Baymiller street, to her husband. That devotion has just won the release of her husband from the Louisiana State penitentiary, and he will return to a happy home tomorrow. Labono was twice sentenced in New Orleans to be hanged for the murder of Peter Genovese, a New Orleans fruit dealer and his rival in business. The wife managed to get stays of execution each time and a commutation of the death sentence to life imprisonment.

Genovese, it seems, became jealous of his rival's success. They met in the peach market and Genovese bumped into Labono while the latter was carrying a basket of peaches on his shoulder and caused him to spill the fruit in the street. Another altercation followed the next day. The next time Genovese annoyed Labono he was killed. The wife sold the store to pay attorneys' fees.

She returned here and interested prominent men of the city and State to lend their money and influence to her cause.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

NEW YORK, July 3.—Fire in a five-story building at Eleventh street and Broadway today drove the guests of the Hotel Bradford into the streets, and imperiled the Hotel St. Denis, across the way.

The damage was confined to the building, and is estimated at $750,000.

The fire destroyed Fleischman's bakery, the scene of one of New York's most picturesque charities, the bread line.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BARTLESVILLE (Okla.) July 3.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] When Arlie Powell, convicted of horse stealing, was brought into court at Nowata today to receive a sentence of one year in prison, Judge Thomas Brown said to him:

"You are too good a boy to be sent to prison. I'm going to allow Rufe Riley, the Sheriff, to make a man out of you. In three months I will return to Nowata. Instead of sending you to prison I am going to instruct Rufe to keep you here in jail. If, when I come back, you have learned by heart the Ten Commandments, the Lord's Prayer and two of the psalms, and come into court and repeat them, I will turn you out again. If you cannot do these things you must then go to prison."

Ella Gingles on Witness Stand Says Two Women Lured Her to Wellington Hotel, Stripped Her of Clothing and Told Her She Was to Go to French Lick Springs as Chattel of Wealthy Man.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, July 3.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Ella Gingles, the girl accused of stealing laces from Agnes Barrette, gave testimony today before Judge Brentano involving the reputations of her accuser and the late Mrs. Cecelia Kenyon. Her story on direct examination, under the coaching of P. H. O'Donnell, her chief counsel, was replete with sensational charges, but the story was slightly twisted under the cross-examination of Assistant State's Attorney Benedict J. Short. The prosecutor states flatly that the story is an invention and hopes to shatter it when the case is resumed on Tuesday morning.

One of its weak points appeared to be that she neither could name nor identify a man who is supposed to have attacked her, after the encounter with Miss Barrette and Mrs. Kenyon, and who was expected to be the chief corroborative witness.

The story not only astonished, but also amused Mr. Short, Capt. O'Brien and the detectives who have worked on the case. They all unite in declaring they never have heard it before. Part of it deals with the alleged intention of Miss Barrette and the late Mrs. Kenyon to send to a man at French Lick Springs, who was to make a "white slave" of her.

MYSTERIOUS VOICE.

After court had adjourned for the day a sensation developed while the newspapermen were waiting for a talk with Attorney O'Donnell. A woman's voice called over the telephone for Mr. O'Donnell, saying that she had certain evidence that the Gingles girl's story on the stand was true. The newspapermen were allowed to listen as she talked. She said that she would not give her name. She said that she knew of the assault at the Wellington Hotel and of the attempts to make it appear that Miss Gingles had stolen the lace. O'Donnell expects to produce her in court.

"That Ella Gingles was a victim of a conspiracy.

"That she was bound, gagged and left for dead, tied in a bathroom in the Wellington Hotel, February 16."

In resuming the case in the morning, Mr. O'Donnell took the defendant back to the occurrence in the hotel on the night of January 4.

STRIPPED OF CLOTHING.

"What did they do to you?"

"Locked the door and stripped me of all my clothing except my stockings and lingerie."

"And next?"

"Miss Barrette undressed and Mrs. Kenyon removed most of her clothing, too."

"What did they say?"

"Miss Barrette said: 'I have a gentleman you can live with.' I said: 'I don't want to get married.' She answered: 'You do not have to get married.'"

With a visible effort Miss Gingles, her face flushed and tears streaming down her cheeks, managed to go on.

"I began to cry then," she continued, sobbing. "Miss Barrette said: 'I am going to send you to French Lick Springs. You will get lots of money and will wear fine clothes; besides, you won't have to work."

"And next?"

"They threw me on the bed——"

The girl broke down again, but finished the sentence. The jury and other spectators in the crowded room leaned forward and listened.

"What did you say?"

"I was frightened, and, crying, said: 'You are dirty beasts.'"

"What happened next?"

STRANGE MAN ENTERS.

"Some one knocked and Miss Barrette put on a night dress and opened the door. A strange man came into the room.

"'What kept you?' asked Miss Barrette, and the man said: 'I could not come any sooner,' and continued: 'Is she here?'

"'Miss Barrette said: 'Yes.'"

"What else?"

The witness said she was offered money by the man. Here the girl again began to weep.

"I said: 'No, sir,' and when I refused to take the money Miss Barrette said: 'You take it,' and I said: 'I want my clothes.'

"They would not give me my clothing. They both grabbed me and put me on the bed. I screamed, and the man put a pillow on my face.

"I was crying and then the 'phone rang. Mrs. Kenyon arose and they called the man. He went to the 'phone and said: 'That you, Charley?'

"I don't know what was said at the other end, but the man said: 'Yes, she is here.'

"He said: 'Can you come soon?' and he said, 'Right away,' and the man said, 'All right,' and hung up the 'phone."

"What else?"

FORCED TO SIGN PAPERS.

"Miss Barrette said to Miss Kenyon: 'Keep her there six months,' and Miss Barrette handed me two papers. The man went away then. Miss Barrette told me to sign the papers.

"When I refused she pushed me over against the door and said, 'I'll bring that man back in here.' I cried for my clothes and they made me sign the paper. They said I was to stay in the hotel at French Lick Springs three months. A man would call for me the next day.

"When I said I wanted my clothes and also the laces and things they had taken from my room, Miss Barrette said, 'Come back tomorrow at 9 o'clock and we will give you your things.'

"I did not have car fare and when I asked Miss Barrette for a nickel to ride home, she said, 'Walk; that will do you good.' I got on my clothes and ran out of the hotel.

"I tried to find a policeman but was too frightened to stay on the street. On Thursday I went to the home of Capt. O'Brien."

This ended the direct examination.

KEEPS MURDER PACT.

Ocean Liner Lucania Reaches Port With Strange Tale of Death of Two Women.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, July 3.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] That Margaret Clarke and Helen Miller carried out a murder and suicide pact because of financial distress is the belief that officers of the Cunard line steamship Lucania expressed today when the vessel arrived from Liverpool. The double suicide was committed on the voyage from New York to Liverpool.

"Outside the names they gave in booking," said an officer of the ship today, "we have been unable to establish the identity of the two women. After the tragedy we made the most careful analysis of the case, and this is what we learned:

"We sailed on Wednesday. Miss Clarke and Miss Miller shared the same stateroom, by chance only. Miss Clarke had secured her berth several days before sailing, and Miss Miller booked at the last moment. The second morning out the Clarke girl was found dead in her berth.

"She was shot through the head. Miss Miller was lying awake in her berth, and said that she did not know that her companion was dead, and that she did not hear any shot. She declared that she did not know the other woman until sailing. Miss Miller was given another stateroom. Three days later she shot and killed herself. In Miss Clarke's effects were found very few clothes, and only $3. Miss Miller had only 25 cents. Therefore, we think poverty caused the tragedy."

ANARCHIST.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

WOONSOCKET (R. I.) July 3.—A dynamite bomb, thrown into the midst of a crowd surrounding a street vender tonight injured nine persons, one of whom will die.

Five persons were severely hurt. A boy was partly disemboweled, and will die.

The police have no clew to the outrage. The injured men were in a crowd which surrounded a street vender, John Harrison, who was selling neckties.

The bomb was thrown without warning, apparently from the outer edge of the crowd. It struck close to Harrison's feet, bounded past him, and exploded. Pieces of iron and glass were hurled in every direction, but Harrison escaped, although the bomb apparently was aimed at him. He told the police he had no suspicion as to the bomb-thrower's identity.

The police are inclined to attribute the outrage to an anarchist, who chose the eve of the fourth of July for his murderous demonstration.

FOURTH CLAIMS VICTIM.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

KANSAS CITY (Mo.) July 3.—The Fourth of July toll of death in Kansas City began yesterday, when Mrs. Thelma A. Hogan, aged 26, died of lockjaw, the result of the discharge of a toy pistol.

Wilbur, Mrs. Hogan's six-year-old son, bought the toy which caused his mother's death. He shot some of the "blanks," and the pistol became clogged. He took it to his mother, and while she was attempting to clean it the pistol went off, shooting a bit of paper wadding into her left hand. This brought on the fatal malady.

"Thousands of fathers in Kansas City will say that this thing could not happen to any of their loved ones," Mr. Hogan said. "I would have said that the other day. My boy and I have made a costly sacrifice to this mistaught, mis-called patriotism. I shall devote the rest of my life to fighting the criminal greed which lies at the bottom of this traffic in murder."

ADVERTISING FOLLOWS CIRCULATION.

TO BE SURE! This is the basis upon which discerning business men apportion their yearly financial appropriation. It is not haphazard guess, but scientific investigation, careful and painstaking research, close watching of the source from which the biggest results are derived, and the most minute watchfulness which influence the latter-day business man in the expenditure of his hard-earned dollars for publicity. He studies the pulse of the people; he knows, it might be said, better than any other reader the literature that appeals.

So it is, without fear or favor, and without personal feelings entering into the subject, he distributes his advertising among the different publications which have their existence in the field of his operations.

Circulation begets advertising. Advertising follows circulation. The Times has the circulation, and hence the advertising follows:

In the first six months of 1909 The Times published a total of 26,694 columns, or 3813 pages, of paid advertising matter; for the same period of 1908, 24,387 columns, showing a gain of 2307 columns in the last six months' time. The aggregate for the first six months of 1909 is over 60 per cent. more than was printed by any other local newspaper, and the gain exceeds that of any contemporary by more than 400 columns.

A complete record of the advertising figures of all the Los Angeles papers for each of the six months last past, compared with the like period of 1908, has been kept, and is contained in the following condensed statement:

NEAR RIOT.

DISPUTE HALTS SHIP AT DOCK.

Tricked Declares Party of Californians.

Stranded in Seattle Without Any Coin.

Say the Steamer They Were to Sail on Unfit.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SEATTLE (Wash.) July 3.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Because they claimed they were buncoed by a mining company, which had agreed to provide transportation to Alaska for them aboard the steamer Jeanie, 175 men and fourteen women, nearly all from Los Angeles and other parts of Southern California, created a near riot today. The party is stranded, and almost to a man is broke.

Today two score of the men found out that the company had been delayed in sailing the ship, because the bond for a safe return of the steamer, amounting to approximately $25,000, had not been put up. This afternoon it was stated that Capt. Omar J. Humphrey had come forward, and would put up the bond.

They have found out that Capt. Humphrey intends to clear up a little deal, whereby he will ship 1000 tons of coal on the Jeanie to some northern port, and also release the mining company by taking the money the laborers have deposited, and the latter do not know where they will get off.

The laborers have also learned that the Jeanie has accommodations for only sixty-five passengers, and that there are 189 booked.

A deckhouse has been built for the accommodation of passengers, but the laborers say the first wave that ever strikes the craft will wash the structure overboard, taking the occupants with it. It has also been learned that the customs officials have not given a permit, and will not allow the Jeanie to sail unless better accommodations are provided and more life-saving apparatus placed aboard.

HOTEL BURNS.

BUT PARTLY INSURED.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

SAN JOSE, July 2.—Shortly before 8 o'clock this morning the large and handsome El Monte Hotel at Los Gatos was discovered to be afire, and in spite of the efforts of the fire department, it was a heap of ashes within an hour. The fire originated from a defective flue, and when the flames were discovered the inner side of the entire roof was ablaze. The manager, S. H. Johnson and the guests managed to save the most of their personal belongings and the furniture. The owner of the hotel, W. W. Gray of this city, had left only an hour before for his office here. The loss is $25,000, partly covered by insurance.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

SACRAMENTO, July 3.—W. W. Mackie, chief of the bureau of soils for the Pacific Coast which is under the United States Department of the Interior, has resigned his government position and accepted a position with the Rindge syndicate near Stockton. In his capacity as manager and general overseer of the syndicate, Mackie will have charge of 21,000 acres of rich farming land in the island district. His successor has not been named; but it is announced that a man will be sent to this coast from the East. Mackie was an authority on soils and had made soil maps of all districts in the Sacramento Valley.

CHASES HAT.

TROLLEY RUNS HIM DOWN.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

SAN FRANCISCO, July 3.—A small-sized riot occurred at Sixth and Market this afternoon when Leo Schaefer was run over by a McAllister-street car while chasing his hat, which the wind had blown off his head. Schaefer was jammed under the car in such a manner that it necessitated the calling out of the fire department to remove him.

In the meantime angry bystanders attacked the motorman for not applying his brakes quicker, and a hurry call was sent in for a patrol wagon full of police to drive off the mob. Schaefer was probably fatally injured.

OFF ON CRUISE.

CITIZEN JACKIES SAIL.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

SAN FRANCISCO, July 3.—The gunboat Alert, with 150 members of the Naval Militia from this city and Eureka, will weigh anchor for a cruise along the southern coast tonight. Additional companies of the militia will be picked up at Santa Cruz, Santa Barbara, San Pedro and San Diego. The amateur bluejackets finally will muster 250 strong. They are to be instructed in navigation and gunnery by officers of the navy.

GUNBOAT AT FAIR.

YORKTOWN REACHES SEATTLE.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

SEATTLE, July 3.—The gunboat Yorktown, the "mother ship" of the torpedo-boat-destroyer fleet, arrived today from San Francisco. The destroyer Hull, which arrived last night, has gone to the navy yard. The destroyers Paul Jones, Perry, Whipple and Truxton are in port receiving visitors. The destroyer Hopkins will arrive from Mare Island next week, and the Stewart and Preble are expected to join the little fleet later. The destroyers will remain on Puget Sound all summer.

HEAT CAUSED DEATH.

SECOND INQUEST ON BARONET.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

YUMA (Ariz.) July 3.—A second Coroner's inquest was held this morning over the remains of Sir Arthur Cowell Stepney of London, who died suddenly at the Southern Pacific station here yesterday. It was proven that he suffered greatly from the heat after arriving here, and that this, coupled with a weak heart action, had caused his sudden end.

No replies have yet been received to cables sent yesterday to the dead man's London solicitors. The body is held at a local undertaker establishment.

DEAD IN LAUNCH.

RANCHERS' GREWSOME FIND.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

TACOMA (Wash.) July 3.—A. Olson dead and E. E. Shelgreen in a half-conscious condition at the helm of a launch with the craft stranded by the low tide and the propeller still grinding away in the beach, was the grewsome find made last night by a party of ranchers on the north end of Anderson Island.

Shelgreen was revived. He said they left Tacoma for home yesterday afternoon. On the the way he saw his partner becoming stupefied and finally drop to the bottom of the boat, but he was getting sick himself and was powerless to aid him.

Shelgreen says they had several drinks before leaving, but were not drunk. The launch with Olson's body was towed to Steilacoom at 3 o'clock this morning by a launch from the Federal prison on McNeill's Island. Ptomaine poisoning from some source is suspected.

WALLS FALL ON FIREMEN.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

SEATTLE (Wash.) July 3.—Fire which broke out in a large three-story frame rooming-house this morning completely destroyed the building and gutted two adjoining structures.

Three firemen, Lieut. Boyle and Pipemen Taylor and Cook, were imprisoned under falling walls, and were rescued with difficulty by their comrades who had to work under the protection of several streams of water. The men were badly hurt and the body of an unidentified man was found.

Occupants of several cheap hotels near-by were forced to rush out in their night clothes. The occupants of the burned rooming-house lost all their effects, as they barely had time to get out of the building, without stopping to dress.

DELEGATES NAMED.

ANTI-DREDGE MINERS MEET.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SACRAMENTO, July 3.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Mayor Clinton L. White today named twenty-six additional delegates to the anti-dredge mining convention to be held in this city July 21.

Among the new delegates named are State Engineer Ellery and his assistant, Paul M. Narboe. Narboe recently made a survey of the Feather River, and is well qualified to speak on the injuries to the river from dredge mining. Dr. N. K. Foster, former secretary of the State Board of Health, and Judge E. A. Bridgeford of San Francisco are also named.

The city of Biggs, Butte county, which has suffered from dredge mining, will be represented by eighteen delegates, headed by Mayor Walker.

DEATH TELLS SECRET.

WOMAN WANTS HER LETTERS.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICO, June 3.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Certain events in the life of F. D. Amos, a brakeman, whose body was incinerated in a fatal wreck on the Butte County Railroad at Paradise, have come to the knowledge of his widow through a visit to this city of Mrs. Ray Roberts. Several days ago Mrs. Amos arrived from Los Angeles and awaited the funeral, which was held yesterday afternoon and the settlement of the estate.

Yesterday Mrs. Roberts arrived from Los Angeles and sought out Coroner Wallace with a request for a bundle of letters written by her to Amos. This has been refused until the estate is settled. The letters are said to be most affectionate.

GUN IN COURT.

DECLARES HE NEEDS IT.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

SAN JOSE, July 3.—In the Morrell-Weiland controversy in Justice Wallace's court this morning, James W. Rea, one of the parties interested, entered the courthroom with a huge pistol bulging out of his pocket. Upon his attention being called to it by the District Attorney, Rea declared he was compelled to carry a "gun" to protect certain records he had with him, which he feared would be stolen. In response to a demand by the court he placed the pistol on the court's desk. The case in which Weiland, a wealthy Pennsylvanian, is the defendant on a charge of embezzling stock, was submitted this afternoon.

LEASE OIL LANDS.

GET TEN THOUSAND ACRES.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

RED BLUFF, July 3.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Ten thousand acres of land in the Pine Creek district, ten miles west of Red Bluff have been leased by the Beacon Oil and Gas Company from G. C. McCoy for oil that may be found in the ground. J. B. Reese, manager of the company, will begin sinking a fourteen-inch well as soon as machinery that has been ordered reaches here.

The first work will be done on the Gooch lands near Rawson Switch.

CLOSE THING.

HENEY'S AUTO TURNS TURTLE.

CAR SKIDS IN SOFT SAND AND IS WRECKED.

Prosecutor Saves Himself by Jumping at the First Sign of Danger, But His Physician, Detective and Chauffeur Are All Hurt, the Latter Very Seriously.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CASTLE ROCK (Wash.) July 3.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Francis J. Heney's automobile skidded in the loose sand at a sharp curve in the road, a mile and a half north of here, today, went over, turned two complete somersaults and brought up, wheels in the air, a complete wreck. Heney saved himself by jumping. With him in the automobile, besides his physician, his private detective and the chauffeur, who were en route with him from San Francisco to Seattle, was former United States Senator F. W. Mulhey of Oregon.

Mr. Mulhey was caught as the machine went over, and when it lodged bottom up he was beneath it, together with Dr. S. O. Beasley, the physician; Jesse McLaughlin, the chauffeur, and John McCarthy, the detective.

Heney tried vainly to release his companions and then ran here for aid. By the time he returned Mulhey had succeeded in digging himself out, and beyond severe bruises was uninjured. Dr. Beasley was found unconscious and badly bruised. McCarthy had susta....d serious internal burns by inhaling steam from the engines, and McLaughlin had a badly-sprained ankle. Dr. Beasley soon recovered and he and Heney started on the first train for Seattle with the injured McCarthy, whose condition was grave. McLaughlin remained here.

"The accident was unavoidable," said Heney, "and I do not blame the chauffeur. Loose sand in the road caused the car to skid over the bank. We shall proceed to Seattle by rail, and there have the car repaired or buy a new one in which to return to San Francisco."

Mrs. Heney was not with the party, having gone north from Portland by rail.

BIG PLANT BURNS.

OTHER BUSINESS DESTROYED.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

OLYMPIA (Wash.) July 3.—Fire that broke out at 7 o'clock this evening in the plant of the National Wood Pipe Company, completely destroyed the buildings and storage yard, as well as four residences and grocery stores. The latter buildings, which were across the bay half a mile away, were set on fire by burning brands carried by the wind.

After burning two hours the fire was under control.

The loss, which is practically on the plant of the National Wood Pipe Company, is estimated at $200,000, covered by insurance of $40,000.

Eighty men are thrown out of employment by the fire.

While E. J. Berneche was fighting the fire in the residence district, he was struck on the head by bricks from a falling chimney and badly injured. Long distance telephone communication with Tacoma and Seattle has been cut off by the fire.

FOURTH'S VICTIMS.

FIRST OF LONG LIST.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

OAKLAND, July 3.—Fourth of July fireworks claimed numerous victims today.

Miss Edith Ehgoff, aged 21, may lose the sight of both eyes as a result of a large firecracker, thrown by some unknown person, exploding within a few inches of her face, as she stood on Eighth street.

"Backfire" of a toy cannon made Lain Lawrence, aged 13, blind in one eye as well as seriously burning his face.

Henry Benson, aged 12, put too much powder in a toy cannon, which exploded, a piece of the cannon nearly tearing out one of his eyes, and injuring him about the head.

Numerous other, but less serious, cases were treated at the Emergency Hospital.

LIFE'S SEAMY SIDE.

SIX VICTIMS HAS DESPERADO

Ex-Convict Runs Amuck in Oregon Town.

Steals Shotgun and Shoots All He Sees.

By Mistake Posse Wounds an Old Man.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

IONE (Or.) July 3.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Enraged because he had been ejected from a saloon, T. G. Earhart, a paroled convict, broke into a store here and stole a shotgun last night, and then ran amuck through the town shooting everybody he saw. Six men were hit by his shots, but none will die, because Earharts' shells were loaded with bird shot.

As soon as a posse was found and pursuit became too hot for him, Earhart took refuge under a warehouse, where he stood at bay all night, shooting whenever one of the posse showed himself. When daylight came preparations were made to set fire to the warehouse, and then Earhart came forth and surrendered himself.

Earhart's victims are William Clark, shot in the shoulder; John Johnson, shot in the leg, serious; Postmaster E. T. Perkins, right foot shattered by shot; Walter Cason, deputy sheriff, shot in the back; Charles Ritchie, right leg wounded; Joseph Beezley, wounded in face, back and legs, serious.

It was some time after Earhart began shooting up the town that Deputy Cason arrived and organized resistance to the terrorist. Some twenty men, all heavily armed, were deputized. Earhart opened fire on them without hesitation. It was only when fifty shots had been fired at him and he had received a bullet in the arm that he took refuge under the warehouse. Even then he kept up an active resistance, deriding the posse's efforts to dislodge him and shooting at all who approached.

It was only when he saw the preparations under way to burn the warehouse that he surrendered.

W. H. Escue, an aged man, said to be of Portland, was shot by members of the posse by mistake, and Earhart was shot in the back. None of the victims, with the exception of Escue, is dangerously injured.

Earhart surrendered to the posse after his ammunition was exhausted and he was taken to Heppner.

REGISTER SAVES HIM.

HELPS PROVE ALIBI.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

REDDING, July 3.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] James A. Roberts, who was arrested in Fruitvale Thursday, on suspicion that he was connected with the murder of Wells-Fargo messenger, Dan Haskell, has proven an alibi and has been liberated from the county jail.

Roberts had Sheriff Montgomery telephone to Sheriff Walker at Nevada City, and ask him to look over the register at the Antler's Hotel, and see if his name was not on the register on October 9, 1905. Sheriff Walker searched the register and found that Roberts was a guest at the hotel on the ninth, tenth and eleventh of that month. The Delamar stage hold-up, and the killing of Haskell occurred on October 9, 1905. Roberts strengthened his alibi with a bank check on the Bank of Shasta county, which he cashed in Nevada City on October 9, 1905.

HAS AMBITIONS.

PRIMARY LAW PINCHES.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SACRAMENTO, July 3.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Chief of Police John E. Sullivan consented today to make the race for the Republican nomination for Mayor at the August primaries. He will have no opposition in his own party. Former Mayor Beard will be his Democratic opponent. Clinton L. White, present Mayor, refused to run as soon as the Supreme Court upheld the primary law. Another nomination was conceded to him, but he would not make a four months campaign. This is the first effect of the new primary law upon politics here. Mayor White will act as verification deputy for Sullivan, his own appointee and solicit the names on Sullivan's petition.

HELPING PRISONERS.

AT ONE DOLLAR A DAY.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PORTLAND (Or.) July 3.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] A helping hand for rock pile prisoners who are "broke" at the end of their sentence, will be extended to them through an order by the county court, allowing them to work for five days at $1 per day, and thus go out from the place with money in their pockets.

County Commissioner W. L. Lightner declared the order will be made at an early date. The suggestion has come from members of the grand jury, and he thinks it worth trying.

The county would not be loser by such an arrangement as the rock is worth what would be paid them. The privilege of working for wages will only be extended to first termers.

EXPECT BIG CROP.

GREEN FRUIT LOOKS GOOD.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

FRESNO, July 3.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Indications are that the green fruit shipments from this State this year will be the largest in many years, and in some lines the largest shipments recorded are looked for. A bumper crop of malaga grapes is on the vines, and probably 1000 cars of this variety will be shipped East, against about two-thirds of that amount last season. A local shipper states that 5000 cars of peaches will probably be shipped from California this year, against 1500 last season.

Conditions in the valley have been favorable for good crops, and have had their effects on many fruits. Thompson's seedless and tokay grape crops are both reported large. Reports show one of the largest crops of figs yet raised in the State now on the trees. Shippers have bought peaches this season on speculation, paying $20 to $25 per ton for them in the field, and procuring considerable amounts. A total of about 300 acres of watermelons is being handled, with good opening prices.

GEYSER SPOUTS ON THE PIKE.

BOARD WALK IS TORN UP AND OTHER DAMAGE DONE.

Ocean End of Bath-house Conduit Becomes Clogged With Sand and Water Bursts Forth at Weakest Point—Angeleno Applies for Saloon License—Boy Brutally Beaten.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

LONG BEACH, July 3.—Following yesterday's election, the result of which seems to have given general satisfaction to the business men of the city, a portion of the Pike "went wet" in earnest. The wetness was the result of the overflowing of the conduit by which the waters of the plunge are emptied into the ocean. The ocean end of the conduit became choked with sand and when the waters of the plunge were released, there suddenly appeared a geyser. It tore up board walk and flooded several stands, spoiling supplies laid in for the Fourth.

The Superior Court, yesterday, decided to defer action on the petition to reopen the Citizens' Savings Bank until August 14, when State Bank Superintendent Anderson will make a statement relative to the proposed plan to assess the stockholders. It is said that he does not oppose this.

—ONE-ARMED BOY ATTACKED.

Wilbur Counts, a lad 14 years old, with only one arm, was brutally attacked on the Pike, last night. His assailant escaped. The assault was due to the fellow applying to himself a remark made by Counts about another man.

R. M. Campbell of No. 547 South Broadway, Los Angeles, is under the impression that the result of yesterday's liquor election means the removal of the lid, and has made application to the City Council for a wholesale and retail saloon and restaurant license, including a beer garden.

In her haste to alight from a Willows car after discovering that she had dropped her purse, Mrs. Emma Lamb, wife of a motorman, fell, last night, and her left wrist was broken.

John G. R. Stingerland, a veteran of the Civil War, died, this morning, of paralysis. He was 79 years old and had resided here three years. He leaves three children.

The general repair shops of the Union Home Telephone Company have been removed from Riverside to this city.

The bath-house company, today, announced that hereafter the life boat, with a guard, will be kept outside of the breakers from 9 to 5 o'clock.

REVOLTING STORY.

Redlands Man Confesses That He Was Guilty of Incest—Sobs in Court.

REDLANDS, July 3.—R. Sherman Caudell, charged with having committed rape, his own daughter being the subject of his lust, was given his hearing this morning, before Justice Gifford, behind closed doors. The testimony was of such revolting nature that the courtroom was cleared to relieve the chief witness of unnecessary embarrassment.

The little daughter, Ola, aged 11, testified that the heinous crime had been hundreds of times during the past three or four years, beginning at a time so early in her young life that she could not recall her age. The witness told the story plainly, a female relative sitting beside her that she might not be too embarrassed to speak to the District Attorney and the court.

The only other witness was Deputy Sheriff J. J. Arbois, of San Bernardino, who was present, with others, when the prisoner made a partial confession. This corroborated the testimony of the child, except as to period during which the crime has been committed, and its frequency.

Defendant had no attorney and would not take the stand in his own behalf. He sat cringing, shaking and sobbing during the forty minutes during which the examination took place. While he would not be sworn he repeatedly said: "There must have been something wrong with me to make me do it. My mind must have been wrong."

Caudell was held to answer to the charge of rape before the Superior Court, with cash bail bond fixed at $10,000. Failing to get the bond he was returned to the county jail.

FOOTPAD GENTEEL.

COMPARED TO SOULE.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

SAN FRANCISCO, July 3.—Benjamin Wellington Soule, who sent threatening letters to Rudolph Spreckels and others, demanding $3000 under threat to kill them by means of a subtle poison, pleaded guilty today, and was sentenced to four years in San Quent....

Counsel for Soule pleaded with the court to be lenient with the guilty man on the ground that he sent the letters only as a "joke."

Judge Dunne, however, declared that the only difference between Soule and a footpad was that the former pursued more genteel methods.

STRIKE BITTER.

MAY SETTLE SOON.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

ELY (Nev.) July 3.—With four hundred miners formerly employed at the Veteran mine of Cumberland, this county, out on strike, there has been little change in the situation. It is believed that an agreement will be reached at an early date. Up to this time there has been no violence and no disorder.

Ninety per cent. of the strikers are Austrians and Greeks. The Americans profess to be able to make more money under the system which was made the basis of the strike.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

At that time Barton arrested a man named Gaskell for disturbing the peace. An effort was made to rescue the prisoner, and in the mix-up that followed Barton was roughly handled. Flying Fish Endangers Boat.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 3.—The first flying fish ever seen in Northern California waters very nearly caused the fishing steamer Henrietta to go on the rocks off the Farallon Islands yesterday, when its short flight terminated in the face of the man at the wheel. Capt. Alexander was so astounded by the blow that he let go the helm, and the steamer narrowly missed a reef before she was pulled back on her course. The tropical visitant weighed two pounds, and measured eighteen inches across its extended wings.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, July 3.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] A spectacular raid on a colony of goats on the northwest side was engineered today by W. F. Stuart, poundmaster, in person. As a result of several desperate encounters between the "dog catchers," and the police on the one hand and the owners of the quadrupeds on the other, the latter aided and abetted by the animals themselves, two men are under arrest at the West Chicago Avenue Station and Policeman Elliott is nursing a number of bruises on various parts of his person. Twelve of the frolicsome creatures are being held in solitary confinement at the dog pound, and numerous little foreign girls and boys are mourning the loss of their pet "nannies" and "billies."

AN OLD TIMER
Has Had Experiences.

A woman who has used Postum since it came upon the market knows from experience the wisdom of using Postum in place of coffee if one values health and a clear brain. She says:

"At the time Postum was first put on the market I was suffering from nervous dyspepsia, and my physician had repeatedly told me not to use tea or coffee. Finally I decided to take his advice and try Postum. I got a package and had it carefully prepared, finding it delicious to the taste. So I continued its use and very soon its beneficial effects convinced me of its value, for I got well of my nervousness and dyspepsia.

"My husband had been drinking coffee all his life until it had affected his nerves terribly, and I persuaded him to shift to Postum. It was easy to get him to make the change for the Postum is so delicious. It certainly worked wonders for him.

"We soon learned that Postum does not exhilarate or depress and does not stimulate, but steadily and honestly strengthens the nerves and the stomach.

"To make a long story short, our entire family continued to use Postum with satisfying results as shown in our fine condition of health and we have noticed a rather unexpected improvement in brain and nerve power."

Increased brain and nerve power always follows the use of Postum in place of coffee, sometimes in a very marked manner. "There's a Reason."

SAFETY BOX RIFLED.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

IRONWOOD (Mich.) July 3.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The affairs of the defunct Ironwood National Bank become more hopelessly tangled as checking up of securities progresses. Private safety deposit boxes are found to have been opened, the contents rifled and added to funds of the institution to swell the assets while the bank examiner was checking up. Dummy notes have been found for approximately $100,000, bearing the names of scrubwomen, teamsters, clerks and men around town financially irresponsible. Public sentiment is greatly stirred up over the disclosures of what is alleged to be mismanagement and bungling of depositors' money. The creditors say they will not be satisfied with only three prosecutions and allege that the directors are to blame. One of the heaviest losers is Dr. Whiteside, head physician of the Norrie mines, who had $36,000 in bonds locked in a safety deposit box, together with other securities. This box is found to have been opened and all except $4000 in non-negotiable paper taken.

WIFE LURED BY STAGE.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, July 3.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Judge Ball today granted a decree in divorce to Henry D. Baker, son of the late William T. Baker, from Edna Woollen Baker, who left him a few months after their marriage to return to the stage. Mrs. Baker did not oppose the divorce nor was she represented by counsel at the hearing and whatever settlement of alimony there was does not appear in the decree. The grounds for the divorce were given in the bill as desertion. Mr. Baker and Miss Woollen were married in Boston. They came to Chicago and started housekeeping in the apartment-house at No. 5000 Drexel boulevard. Mr. Baker is now United States Consul at Hobart, Tasmania.

QUEER CHICAGO CHILDREN.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

CHICAGO, July 3.—There are about 10,000 school children in the city who will have exactly ten days' summer vacation. Having left school last Friday, they will return next Tuesday morning, in many cases to the very building where they spent the winter term. And they are doing it of their own free will. The Board of Education this year begins its first experiment with a municipal "all the year round" school system. In seventeen buildings in various parts of the city vacation school classes will be opened on Tuesday under the direction of the board, and at five more free classes will be maintained by private agencies, with teachers from the regular system in charge.

WOMAN NOT "JUDICIAL."

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

DETROIT, July 3.—"That a judicial trust is no function for a woman to exercise, she being fundamentally incapacitated by nature therefrom," is one of the points made by Attorney James H. Pound in proceedings which he has begun to challenge the right of Miss Carrie Davison to act as extradition commissioner under appointment of the local United States Court. Attorney Pound represents William Kinsley, who was ordered extradited to Canada by Miss Davison on a charge of stealing timber. The attorney contends that Miss Davison is not lawfully an official of extradition, nor can she be one either under the Michigan laws, or the United States and that Kinsley is illegally held in jail."

DRY WAVE CUTS REVENUE.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

MILWAUKEE, July 3.—The enormous loss of business to brewers and distillers through the "dry wave" is shown indirectly in the report of the local internal revenue office for the year ended June 30, 1909. This report shows a reduction of the internal revenue amounting to $322,000 for the year. Practically the entire loss is due to the falling off in the output of beer. This year's receipts were $3,852,840 for beer alone, as against $4,174,104 for the preceding year.

COMING TO TERMS.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

CHICAGO, July 3.—The officers of twelve bonding surety companies doing business in the United States, have offered to revise their rates on public officials, provided Chairman Tawney of the House Committee on Appropriations, will withdraw his bill providing for the establishment of a fund by the government for carrying the bonds of its employés. The government claimed that rates on public officials had been very materially increased during the past year, and without any justification in the way of experience. The surety officials combatted this statement, but were unable to produce the statistics upon which their increase was based, and finally admitted the advance was largely guesswork.

TOO MUCH SOCIETY.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

CHICAGO, July 3.—The tendency to overemphasize the social side of university life is criticised by President Judson of the University of Chicago, in a report on the condition of the university, made public yesterday. "The problem before a great number of American universities today, is the excessive social distractions on the one hand, and the exercising of intellectual activity in order to provide larger attainment on the other," says President Judson. "The attempt to grow a great number of social activities accounts for the lack in the intellectual life of the students. I am convinced that a new attitude toward this must grow up in the colleges if they are to render their best services to society."

QUARTER-BILLION IN MINES.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

BERLIN, July 3.—Colonial Secretary Dernburg today informed a deputation of members of the Reichstag, which called on him to inquire regarding the newly-discovered diamond fields in Southwest Africa, that these mines are valued at $250,000,000.

Continuing, he explained that the significance of his recently-formed coalition of the diamond interests in German Southwest Africa was indicated by the fact that a representative of the De Beers Company, which controls the diamond market, had offered to make a reciprocal selling agreement in order to keep up the prices of diamonds. This was rejected by the Colonial Secretary.

HIS CREED.

MAKES APPEAL TO BLOOD LUST.

Hindoo Socialist Editor Unmoved by Murder.

Declares Assassination Is Necessary.

Rants of British Brutality as His Excuse.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PARIS (France) July 3.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The Indian editor, Krishnavarma, whose writings in the Indian Sociologist are held largely responsible for the murder of Lieut.-Col. Sir William Hutt Curzon Wyllie and Dr. Lalcaca in London, ridiculed he idea that he was at all to blame when interviewed this morning. He said that no such name as Madar Lelof Dhinagri existed on the books of any Indian Society and that the murderer acted on his own initiative.

"In India killing because of British oppression I may have declared is not murder, but merely the logical consequence of a racial juxtaposition with brutality on the one side and unconquerable pride on the other.

"Every patriot of whatever country admires the action of the American colonies in 1778, amid conditions which in principle were much the same as those now confronting the Indians under British dominion. On our own ground I counsel anything and everything looking toward deliverance from this intolerable yoke—the knife and the rifle, if necessary.

"But on British soil I have never advised bloodshed. The assertions of the British press against our patriotic Indian journals will fall to the ground, if they are investigated.

"One certain consequence of this assassination will be the limiting of the privileges of Indian students in London. It may stop their studying altogether and it may provoke still sterner measures in India. If so, then I see a real reign of bloodshep in the near future. Indian backs have borne all burdens and they are able to stand British laws all right at home, for Britain is a free country, but the native Indian will support no further oppression from foreign tyrants."

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

ST. PETERSBURG, July 3.—The Novoe Vremya today published an editorial article on Russo-Chinese relations, in which it urges an understanding with the United States in far eastern affairs and close coöperation of the powers interested in maintaining the independence and territorial integrity of China. Attention is called to the success of the Russian policy in Korea prior to 1896, while working with America for the defense and independence of Korea.

FIRE PANIC FATAL.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

DETROIT, July 3.—About twenty women and children were severely injured today when a cry of "fire" caused a panic in a ten-cent store at Woodward avenue and State street while the place was jammed with people. One child is dying.

The store was having its opening day and the five-story building was literally jammed with people, principally womn and children. It is estimated that 600 women were busy searching for bargains on the second floor when the panic started. Two women are said to have reached simultaneously for the same article and to have begun scuffling over it. This caused a little excitement in their immediate neighborhood and attracted the attention of those nearby. The onlookers pressed about them and suddenly the cry of "fire" was heard.

It turned the hundreds of shoppers into a maddened, fighting mob, intent only on reaching the stairway at the rear of the building. They surged down the aisles and packed themselves into such a solid mass on the stairs that the guard rails gave way, precipitating many of the struggling women to the floor below. In a moment the stairway, the floor below and the second floor above were one mass of screaming women and children. Clothes were torn, hats were ripped off and those who were unfortunate enough to lose their footing were trampled upon.

Employés of the store, assisted by policemen, finally convinced the mob that the building was not afire and succeeded in calming them. Ambulances were summoned and the injured were taken to hospitals.

ENGLAND ENCROACHES.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

NEW YORK, July 3.—The American commission which has investigated the affairs of the black republic, Liberia, has prepared a report that Great Britain has encroached on and occupied 300 square miles of Liberian territory, according to a cablegram from Free Town, Sierra Leone.

Assurances were given the commission by British authorities, however, that the English occupation of the disputed territory would cease on the proper diplomatic representation by this country.

Investigation conducted by the commission at Monrovia, the capital of Liberia, and at Free Town, the dispatch says, showed that the English forces occupying and administering Sierra Leone had overstepped the border which was surveyed in 1903, and had encroached on Liberian ground for a distance of twenty-five miles from the established border line.

The Liberians submitted to the commission proof that the British forces had, by various means, induced the Liberian border officers to retire inland, and had then placed the original

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

DETROIT, July 3.—About twenty women and children were severely injured today when a cry of "fire" caused a panic in a ten-cent store at Woodward avenue and State street while the place was jammed with people. One child is dying.

The store was having its opening day and the five-story building was literally jammed with people, principally women and children. It is estimated that 600 women were busy searching for bargains on the second floor when the panic started. Two women are said to have reached simultaneously for the same article and to have begun scuffling over it. This caused a little excitement in their immediate neighborhood and attracted the attention of those nearby. The onlookers pressed about them and suddenly the cry of "fire" was heard.

It turned the hundreds of shoppers into a maddened, fighting mob, intent only on reaching the stairway at the rear of the building. They surged down the aisles and packed themselves into such a solid mass on the stairs that the guard rails gave way, precipitating many of the struggling women to the floor below. In a moment the stairway, the floor below and the second floor above were one mass of screaming women and children. Clothes were torn, hats were ripped off and those who were unfortunate enough to lose their footing were trampled upon.

Employés of the store, assisted by policemen, finally convinced the mob that the building was not afire and succeeded in calming them. Ambulances were summoned and the injured were taken to hospitals.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

NEW YORK, July 3.—The American commission which has investigated the affairs of the black republic, Liberia, has prepared a report that Great Britain has encroached on and occupied 200 square miles of Liberian territory, according to a cablegram from Free Town, Sierra Leone.

Assurances were given the commission by British authorities, however, that the English occupation of the disputed territory would cease on the proper diplomatic representation by this country.

Investigation conducted by the commission at Monrovia, the capital of Liberia, and at Free Town, the dispatch says, showed that the English forces occupying and administering Sierra Leone had overstepped the border which was surveyed in 1903, and had encroached on Liberian ground for a distance of twenty-five miles from the established border line.

The Liberians submitted to the commission proof that the British forces had, by various means, induced the Liberian border officers to retire inland, and had then placed the original Liberian territory under the Sierra Leone government.

British officials appeared before the commission and did not dispute these assertions, but gave assurances that the English were ready to retire as soon as the Washington government passed on the matter and brought the case to the attention of the Colonial Office in London.

PROGRESS IN THE ORIENT.

CHINESE ARMY BECOMING POWERFUL MILITARY FACTOR.

Dr. William Geil, Explorer, Tells of Remarkable Development Witnessed by Him on Trip Along the Great Wall—Methods in Use Are Those of Most Modern and Best Trained Troops in the World.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, July 3.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Those who are inclined to scoff at China as a coming factor in international affairs are blind to the remarkable development that is going on within the mysterious country across the Pacific, according to the stories of Dr. William Geil, an explorer, who has recently returned.

The awakening of the Chinese army, according to what he saw in his explorations along the Great Wall, has reached an extent undreamed of by the average American and hardly suspected in the best informed government circles, where watchful eyes are continually upon foreign military movements.

Nothing could be more convincing of what is going on in the interior of China than photographs of military operations secured and brought back to this country. They show a cosmopolitan training that has been gained from the employment of skilled American, European and Japanese officers and engineers.

Some of the problems carried out by the army of the Flowery Kingdom would stagger the personnel of European armies. For instance, one of the photographs shows a signal service balloon and reserve pieces transported thousands of miles on almost impassable roads. Ask any European or American engineering officer to construct a bridge of bamboo over a mile long, without the use of iron or steel, not even nails being used, and to have it strong enough to transport an entire army corps, including the artillery, and he will balk. The photographs of the army indicate that China's new army is up to date in every particular and well worthy of being classed as "one of the armies of the world."

Dr. Geil described his experiences in the Far East in glowing terms. He said it was the first time a white man had traveled the entire distance of the wall.

"I had been to China about six years ago, but on this trip I made extensive search throughout the entire country. I found that the empire has made wonderful progress. Men are being given a military training in every little town, and some day China may be able to put in the field at short notice a well trained army of three million men."

NEW KIND OF PERIL.

WARNS EUROPEANS AGAINST GREAT AMERICAN DANGER.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BERLIN, July 3.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Judge Schwarze, a prominent member of the Reichstag and the Prussian Diet, seizes upon America's "eleventh hour use of force" in the Chinese railway scheme as a pretext for warning Europe afresh of the "American danger."

Writing to Der Tag, under the heading, "Europe for Europeans," he urges England and Germany to abandon their mutual suspicions, trade competition and naval rivalries, and league themselves without further delay of action against their "common enemy across the Atlantic."

"America," he says, "is a peril not only for England and Germany, but for all Europe, to which the yellow peril is altogether secondary. Our imperial cousins in America are the greatest danger. As the dollar grows bigger it will annihilate the shilling and the mark, unless Europe sets up its own Monroe doctrine."

He says the powers must eventually form an economic alliance of all Europe, including England, otherwise America will emerge as the conqueror of the world in the battle, and simply exhaust Europe.

"It is high time," he adds, "to explode the cry that England and Germany are the chief rivals for trade dominion, and that whoever defeats the other will attain it. America is not only a competitor of England and Germany individually, but both of them together. If England and Germany fight, they fly at each others' throats exclusively for the benefit of the United States."

GULF COAST MENACED.

NEW YORK, July 3.—Yellow fever is again prevalent in Cuba, according to the Medical Review, which censures the island authorities for its recurrence, saying they have concealed the fact by claiming that the fever is pernicious malaria, or malignant jaundice.

The publication says further that the gulf coast of the United States is menaced, that politicians on the island have monopolized the appropriations to fight the disease, and that the proper step will be for the United States Marine Hospital Service to take charge of affairs.

JULY FOURTH IN LONDON.

LONDON, July 3.—The first of a series of Fourth of July celebrations took the form of a dinner at the Hotel Savoy tonight, at which about seventy Americans were present. C. S. Colson presided and a number of American music-hall artists entertained. The annual dinner of the American Society and the Independence Day reception at the embassy will be held Monday.

TRAGEDY.

TO SAVE EACH OTHER, ALL DIE.

SIX MEMBERS OF FAMILY OF EIGHT DROWN.

Young Girl Falls in Reservoir as Bank Crumbles; Sister Plunges in to Rescue, Mother, Son and Father Follow in Turn—Small Boy Alone Escapes.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WELLINGTON (Colo.) July 3.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Five members of the Fuller family of eight were drowned this afternoon in Reservoir No. 5, one member of the family after the other attempting to rescue the other until the death list numbered five.

The dead are: George Fuller, aged 45; Mrs. George Fuller, aged 44; Ella Fuller, aged 14; Gladys Fuller, aged 12; John Fuller, aged 10.

Five of the Fullers were fishing from the bank of the reservoir this afternoon, and the father was working in a field a quarter of a mile away. Gladys, the younger girl, fell into the reservoir when the bank caved in. Ella jumped into the water to rescue her sister. Then Mrs. Fuller jumped into the water to get both of them and John, the 10-year-old boy, followed to help those already in the water.

The father, in the field, hearing the shrieks of his family, ran to the bank and jumped in. Everett Fuller, an 8-year-old boy, also jumped into the water, but in some manner he was able to extricate himself and carried the news of the drowning to neighbors four miles away.

The bodies were recovered two hours after the drowning.

NEW TRIAL FOR RAIDERS.

Supreme Court of Tennessee Reverses Finding of Lower Tribunal in Case of Night Riders.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

JACKSON (Tenn.) July 3.—The cases of the eight night riders, six of whom are under the death sentence, charged with the murder of Capt. Quentin Rankin at Walnut Lodge, on Reelfoot Lake, October 29 last, were reversed by the Supreme Court today and they were remanded for new trials.

The six men who were under death sentence are Garrett Johnson, alleged leader of the night-rider organization in Obion county; Arthur Cloar, Fred Pinion, Sam Applewhite, Tid Burton and Roy Ransom. The other two, Bud Morris and Bob Huffman, were convicted of murder in the second degree.

In reversing the case the court assigned the two principal reasons. The first was that the grand jury which found the indictments against the alleged night riders, was not selected in a proper manner. The grand jury was selected out of a panel named by Judge J. E. Jones, the trial judge, whereas, the law provides the panel must be chosen by at least three members of the county court.

The second error was that the State did not allow the defendants a sufficient number of challenges.

The eight men were tried on a joint indictment and the trial court upheld the State's contention that the eight defendants were only entitled to the legal number of challenges, twenty-four, which would apply if one man is on trial.

The prisoners will be taken back to Union City and an effort will be made to obtain their release on bail pending a second trial of their cases.

BAKERSFIELD, July 3.—J. H. Egan, a prominent pioneer of this city, was fatally crushed while attempting to board a moving street car last night, dying shortly afterward in a hospital. He leaves a widow, two children and five step-children. His daughter, Miss Beulah, who is on her way from Linns Valley, will not learn of her father's tragic death until she reaches here tonight.

ANXIOUS SEAT.

MAY SUCCEED VON BUELOW.

German Minister to United States Mentioned.

He Would Be Acceptable to European Powers.

England and France Fear Von Bieberstein.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, July 3.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Not only in this capital but in the Foreign Offices of France and Spain, to say nothing of Russia and Italy, is the question of the successor to Prince Von Buelow, the all-absorbing topic. Count Johann Heinrich von Bernstorff, at present Ambassador to the United States, is one of those men high up in the favor of the Kaiser, whose names are being most frequently mentioned by those who are supposed to be keeping in touch with German national and international politics.

His success with his work in Washington, and his known ability, as well as the fact that he would be persona grata with almost all, if not all, of the European powers, lends color to the rumor that has him slated for the place in the Foreign Office at Berlin.

There are of course others mentioned. Not the least among these are Dr. Von Bethmann-Hollweg, Baron Marschal von Bieberstein, Wedel, Lowenfeldt and Rheinbaben.

It is thought in London and Paris that if Prince Von Buelow retires from the German Chancellorship, Emperor William will take a firmer grasp than ever before of the reins of the Berlin Foreign Office.

Should the successor to the Prince be Dr. Von Bethmann-Hollweg, such a development seems a logical necessity in the judgment of some shrewd observers, because of the conceded unfamiliarity of that statesman with the atmosphere of "Weltpolitik."

Dr. Von Bethmann's advancement to the Foreign Office would be much more acceptable to France and England than the promotion of Baron Marschal von Bieberstein.

The former is by temperament and conviction a friend of peace, and though a man of exceptionally adroit methods, has little use for the Bismarckian traditions. He has Prince Von Buelow's sense of humor and faculty for repartee and epigram. Of all the public men in Germany, Dr. Von Bethmann is the most popular among the French politicians.

Baron Marschal von Bieberstein's elevation to the Chancellorship would be deplored by London and Paris as an international misfortune. He is the most truculent and aggressive of German public men. The American delegates to the second Hague conference found in him their most masterful opponent; and it was the attitude of Bieberstein that brought the proceedings to their lame and impotent conclusion.

He is disliked and derided in Paris. But there is no question of his extraordinary force and talent. Men like Wedel, Lowenfeldt and Rheinbaben are tyros in comparison.

Colonel Shot Dead.

NIKOISKOYE (Siberia) July 3.—Colonel Ivomik of the quartermaster department was shot and killed here today, by an attendant of the military canteen. The colonel stopped two soldiers on the street and rebuked them for failing to salute him properly. The attendant, who noticed the incident, drew a revolver and shot the colonel dead.

Leave for Consul.

Kaiser Takes Vacation.

BERLIN, July 3.—In spite of the internal political situation Emperor William has decided to take his customary summer cruise in northern waters, which it was recently reported he would forego. There is nothing in the situation with which he cannot deal by telegraph. He will leave for the north after meeting the King of Sweden at Sassnitz, July 6, where the two monarchs will inaugurate a new steamship line between Sweden and Germany.

Sign Protective Agreement.

BERLIN, July 3.—With the exception of one man, the members of the potash syndicate and fifteen others have signed a new mutual protective agreement. The exception is Waldemar Schmittman, proprietor of the Zollestedt and Ashelerben mines, who, in 1907, made contracts to supply various American fertilizer concerns with potash for ten years. The American agents here have been offered various potash mines, but the prices are unsatisfactory.

Echoes of '76

THE great name of LaFayette awakens echoes of '76 when the roar of cannon was heard in the land, and, with the near approach of the enemy, the gentlefolk hastened to bury their valuables.

Chief among such treasures were the plain, old-fashioned spoons and forks—the pride of every Colonial dame! With dashing officers to be entertained, and perchance a visit from that fascinating personage, the great Marquis de LaFayette, no wonder Colonial women had a care for their silver.

ATE MASSAGE CREAM

Drug Store Patron Thought It Was T'other Kind—Cream "Vanished" Just as Sign Declared It Would.

Upon the glass counter in the store of Lowe Brothers, Druggists, of 336 Fulton Street, Jamaica, there is a pot of cream. Upon the pot of cream is a cover, while a long-handled ladle sticks from it like the handle of a mustard spoon.

An innocent-appearing sign reads as follows:

"VANISHING CREAM FREE. HELP YOURSELF."

While waiting for a prescription to be filled, a man, whose name is not known, saw the jar and saw the sign. He removed the cover of the jar and with the ladle that he found inside he scooped up fully half of the contents and ate it. An hour later the fellow rushed back into the store, his eyes slightly in advance of his face and figure.

"Tell me quick," he gasped, "is there any poison in that Vanishing Cream?"

The druggist nearly fell behind the counter with laughter when he realized what the man had done.

"That is massage cream," said he. "It has no poison in it, but naturally it was never meant to eat for dessert."—[Brooklyn Daily Eagle.

TOO MAGNETIC.

WINS HIS WIFE BY HYPNOTISM?

MOTHER-IN-LAW ACCUSES MAN ARRESTED IN NORTH.

Says He Made Young Woman Ask Employers to Cash Forged Check. Doctor and Grocer Complain of "Burned Fingers"—Police Supposed Couple Safe in Mexico.

E. Allan Shouse, whose mother-in-law, Mrs. Florence McCarthy of No. 1065 South Hill street, says he hypnotized her daughter and thus compelled her to marry him and later to cash a forged check for $150 at the Boston Store, was arrested, last evening in San Francisco, together with his wife. Constable Rice will go North, tomorrow, to bring back the prisoners.

Shouse first met his wife (formerly Nellie McCarthy,) about four years ago in Louisville, where the families of both the young people resided. The girl was then only 16 years old, and her mother objected strenuously to a wedding. Two years ago, the McCarthys moved to Los Angeles. They had not been living here long before Mrs. McCarthy discovered that Shouse had followed them.

Nellie worked at the Boston Store and the young man met her often on her way to and from work. Finally the girl disappeared for two days. When she returned to her home, she was accompanied by Shouse and told her mother they had been married. Forgiveness was asked and accorded.

Shouse had been conducting a collection agency business, using letter heads which gave the name and address of the "Sunset Protective Association, Room 614 Bumiller building, No. 430 South Broadway." He had previously been employed as a novelty salesman for the Auto Sheet Metal Company of No. 2004 South Main street, but had been dismissed when, as is alleged, it was discovered that some of the orders on which he had received commissions were fictitious.

After his disappearance, the police found that the room indicated on his collection agency letterhead was occupied by the Employers' Protective Association, the officers of which stated that a young man named "Soule" had worked for them some weeks before and had left owing the concern about $300.

April 17, Shouse induced his wife to ask for a leave of absence from the Boston Store, which was granted. On her last day at the store, Shouse gave her a check for $150 on the Bank of Southern California, signed "R. A. McKee," and asked her to cash it.

The young woman was highly esteemed by her employers, and when she presented the check, Cashier Byron Campbell of the Boston Store, honored it without hesitation. Two days later, it was returned to him marked "No funds." Dr. W. T. McArthur of this city is another of Shouse's alleged victims. The young man, to pay for a professional charge of $2, gave him a check for $12, which the doctor cashed. S. A. Barbour, a grocer, is another complainant.

After the disappearance of Shouse and his young wife, detectives were detailed on the case but they finally concluded the couple had escaped to Mexico. Constable Rice was put on the case later and now holds the warrant charging Shouse with forgery.

Mrs. McCarthy is confident that her daughter is held under a hypnotic spell by Shouse and that so long as she is with him, she can never deny any wish of his.

Detailed arrangements for the national large and small stock car races that are to be held over the Merrimac Valley course at Worcester, Mass., during Labor Day week, will now be perfected, the final agreement with the contest board of the A.A.A. having been concluded. It has been decided to recover the same ten-mile circuit that was used last fall, and the city of Lowell and the local automobile club are prepared to spend about $12,000 to put the course in shape.

The city of Fitzgerald, Ga., has offered $500 for the two cars making the best time during its projected run to Atlanta, just before the automobile show there, in November. The county offering the best roads for the run will also receive $500. Other cities that will have runs to Atlanta in November, are: Albany, McRea, Dublin and Savannah. Savannah has already offered $1000 in cash prizes, and it is possible that each of the other cities will offer the same amount.

The road race to be held tomorrow under the management of the Denver Motor Club will be run over the Brighton circuit and the distance will be 290 miles. This is the same course that was used last year on Labor Day, and after investigating several available circuits adjacent to Denver, the Motor Club's committee decided that the Brighton circuit is the safest and fastest.

RAILROAD RECORD.

TO BUILD HUGE WORLD'S MART.

New York Roads Projecting Gigantic Scheme.

Twin Twelve-story Structure to House Market.

Merchants of the Globe to Be Benefited.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, July 3.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The New York Central and New York, New Haven and Hartford railroads have just closed a real estate and building deal that involves an expenditure of more than $3,500,000, and by which the manufacturers and merchants throughout the world are expected to benefit.

The railroads have contracted to build twin twelve-story office buildings covering the entire blocks from Forty-sixth to Forty-eighth streets and Lexington avenue to Depew Place, under which will extend the tracks leading into the new $20,000,000 Grand Central Station. These buildings are to be leased to the newly-organized Merchants' and Manufacturers' Exchange for a term of years at a total rental of $4,000,000.

The primary object of the Merchants' and Manufacturers' Exchange will be to provide manufacturers of this country and Europe with a centralized salesroom. The building, as planned, will offer thirty acres of floor space for the display of wares, and will afford the buyers for the big American merchants the best possible opportunity to transact business with the producers of all lines of goods.

One of the two buildings will be largely occupied by the New York Furniture Exchange, which is made up of the wholesale salesrooms of about 300 furniture manufacturers from all parts of this country. The second of the two buildings will be controlled by the new exchange.

Floor space will be sold to manufacturers, and the officers of the organization say that already nearly half of the space has been applied for. Applications for space have already been received from many European manufacturers.

A feature of the building will be the club rooms occupying the upper floor. These will be for the free use of visiting merchants, and will provide offices, consultation and reading rooms, and every facility and comfort that can be provided. This feature will be augmented by a restaurant and roof garden for use in summer.

HAS RIGHT OF WAY.

RUSHING SIERRA ROAD WORK.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SACRAMENTO, July 3.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] During the past week a number of deeds have been filed in the Recorder's office transferring to the Sacramento and Sierra Railway rights of way for its line from this city to Lake Tahoe. Most of the rights of way were in Orangevale Colony, through which the line is to pass.

The company now has secured practically all rights of way from this city to Georgetown, Eldorado county. Grading at Orangevale Bluffs is progressing rapidly, and already more than a mile has been completed. This work will be pushed with more vigor after August 1, when F. A. Warner, representative of S. A. Smith, the Minneapolis capitalist who is behind the road, arrives here from a tour of Europe. It is understood the line will be in operation by January.

Will Check Baggage.

CHICAGO, July 3.—The passenger officials of the western railroads, now in session here for the purpose of considering a large docket of questions relating to passenger traffic, have decided not to discontinue the practice of checking baggage to and from hotels and residences. This question has aroused a great amount of discussion among the railroad men, and it was recently decided to abandon the practice on July 1.

Thousands Work on Roadbed.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 3.—The Western Pacific Railroad will be completed and ready for operation between Ogden and Oakland by October 1, according to H. M. McCartney, first assistant to the chief engineer. The company has 6000 men at work on the 200-mile gap that remains to be closed. McCartney says thede is no rolling stock at this end but if cars and engines were provided trains could be run into the Feather River country at once.

PLAYS TUNES TO ZOO.

Animal Keeper in Chicago Celebrates Fourth One Day Early to Avoid the Crowds.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, July 3.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Chicago's most novel "sane Fourth" celebration was held this morning at Lincoln Park. Cy de Vry, animal keeper, gave each beast an individual graphophone concert of patriotic airs. The lion roared and the tiger growled, the cinnamon bears danced, and the Polar bruins yowled and paced nervously back and forth. The elephant delivered her trunk in the trumpet, the bison bellowed and snorted, the monkeys ran in circles, the lion cubs put their ears to the ground, as if hearing the call of a far-off hunter, and every animal took the celebration to heart in his own peculiar style.

De Vry has strong opinions of the intelligence of animals. He says they are connoisseurs in music. Others have said that before in quotations which have become antique. His idea of the novel July 4 celebration came from the region of the South Pole. Shackleton on his return to England from the regiodn of the South Pole, that the penguins came out nightly to hear a graphophone squeak out "Waltz Me Around Again, Willie."

Lincoln Park animals all are intensely patriotic, De Vry says. The celebration was a day early to avoid the crowd.

of 5 cents a pound on coffee and 10 cents a pound on tea coming from the countries thus discriminating against the products of the United States. On motion of Senator Daniel this provision was struck from the amendment.

The measure as previously reported by the Finance Committee was further amended to except the islands of Guam and Tutilla, as well as the Philippines, from its operation.

Stating that he regarded this provision as the most important part of the tariff bill, Mr. Aldrich read a statement showing the maximum and minimum laws of other countries. Since that statement was prepared, he said, France had adopted rates of tariff that varied on an average of 50 per cent.

Mr. Daniel criticised the proposed legislation as authorizing the President to make treaties with foreign powers without submitting them to the Senate.

"When this amendment is agreed to," he said, "the Senate is eliminated as a treaty-making power, so far as these commercial matters are concerned. It is becoming more and more common to eliminate the Senate from the exercise of its powers."

Senator Culberson offered an amendment to make non-partisan the appointment of the Tariff Commission and to pay the members salaries of $7500 annually. Mr. Aldrich said experts were to be selected, and he did not believe politics would be considered by the President in that connection.

POLITICS IN CENSUS.

"From the morning papers," said Mr. Bailey, "the director of the census is making his appointments for partisan reasons. If that is true it is the first time it has been done in the hitory of this country." In view of the report, he said he would not trust the executive authority to make the appointments without some restriction. Mr. Aldrich said he did not believe census appointments were being made for political reasons.

"I know the President of the United States too well," he said, "to believe he would permit anything of the kind."

Declaring the trend of the times was toward non-partisanship, Mr. Root said the very purpose sought by the Texas Senator would be defeated by dividing these appointments between Republicans and Democrats. He pointed to the record of the President as a guarantee that he would not be influenced by partisan motives.

By a vote of 17 to 43 the amendment offered by Mr. Culberson was rejected, Mr. La Follette being the only Republican who voted with the Democrats. The amendment limited to four the number of members of any one party who might be appointed as experts to advise the President in the matter of discrimination by other countries. An amendment by Mr. Gore substituting the provision of the Dingley act, authorizing the negotiation of reciprocity treaties for the maximum and minimum clause was defeated, 16 to 39.

TOBACCO DISCUSSED.

The tobacco free leaf question was taken up today by subcommittee of the Senate Committee on Finance and a number of tobacco manufacturers were heard in opposition to the removal of any of the restrictions governing the sale of tobacco in the leaf. The hearing was upon the Bradley amendment which would permit the first purchaser to sell the leaf without the payment of a tax and all subsequent purchasers to make similar transfers so long as the tobacco was not manufactured in any form.

Tobacco manufacturers contended today that this would open the whole subject to possibility of great fraud and also that it would materially reduce revenues.

The proposition to increase the rates of tax upon smoking and plug tobacco, cigars, cigarettes and snuff also was discussed.

MR. TAFT COMING.

President Tells Congressman Kahn That He Will Visit California in the Fall.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, July 3.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Congressman Kahn was assured today that President Taft would visit California in the fall. It was on the occasion of the presentation of the invitation, engraved on a gold plate, to attend the festival of Schuetzen Verein.

"The President told me," said Mr. Kahn, "that he would be in San Francisco, but he could not tell on just what date. He will probably not leave Beverly for the West before September 15."

As soon as Congress adjourns, which is now expected to be on July 20 or 25, the President will join his family, and will remain with them until September 1 or September 15, more probably the latter date. This is the latest change in Mr. Taft's plans.

He had intended to start west sooner, but the long session of Congress will cause delay, as he feels that he requires a good rest. Mrs. Taft is improving so rapidly now that it's believed she will be able to take part in the social activities planned for next season at the White House. She will do nothing at Beverly but rest and gain strength.

PREPARE FOR "WET" FOURTH.

Indiana "Dry" Towns Are Plentifully Supplied With the Stuff That Cheers.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

TERRE HAUTE (Ind.) July 3.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Though deprived of the pleasure of going up to the Walnut and wetting their whistles in the good old way, the residents in the dry spots in Indiana will have plenty of the brew to infuse patroitism in their Fourth of July celebration.

Casey, Robinson, Marshall and all the towns in the oil belt have been supplied, and convivial ones will not have to lay in wait for the evasive bootlegger. This morning both the Big Four and Vandalia roads were compelled to send an extra car. These cars were filled to the roofs with beer, consigned to the dry towns of Eastern Illinois. The forces of the breweries were required to work overtime to get the orders packed, ready for shipment.

Some of the orders were not under cover, but many were. Bottles were packed in barrels and labelled "sugar." Cases were packed in ordinary boxes and marked "sundries," and, in fact, all sorts of labels were used to fool the "drys" at the little towns, where a yatch is kept on the depots. The beer was about equally divided between bottles and kegs.

SHY AT LANTERN.

BOGEY SCHEME CAUSES SPLIT.

"Good Government" Talkers Fail to Agree.

Diogenes Plan vs. Ownership by Municipality.

Programme Out for Chasing the Corporations.

What kind of a bogey to invent for the next municipal campaign divided the seventy-five members of the "Good Government Organization," which held its initial meeting at Symphony Hall last night.

Richard Plant, near-candidate for Mayor, proposed that the corporations be chased off the face of the earth with a programme of municipal ownership.

John D. Works proposed that they eventually be subdued, but that the coming campaign front be only an assurance of honest candidates.

As they were the first speakers called by Chairman S. C. Graham (who is also chairman of the "Good Government Fund" representing the money bags of the Earl-Lissner bosses) they presented both horns of the bosses' dilemma.

Plant said the officers to be elected in December will have to say whether Los Angeles shall build a municipally-owned railroad to San Pedro, makes consolidation effective and use the 90,000 horse-power to be developed from the Owens River to put all the light and power companies out of business with municipally-owned utilities. Because of this he felt that the campaign should be opened and conducted with that end in view. Plant is the man who recently attacked the aqueduct scheme through the Democratic League and found his foolish attempt scorned by public sentiment. He is a member of the recall park board and is believed to rank eleventh among the eleven members of the silk-stocking Democratic League.

"I see we will disagree among ourselves and we will disagree now," said "Judge" Works. "We must not think we have settled the whole thing because we have the direct primary law. It may prove to be our undoing. It takes only 100 men to nominate candidates and the good citizens may nominate a dozen while the machine will concentrate on one and the good citizens will scatter and lose. We want to do just what Walter Parker does—concentrate, work, organize and get out our vote."

Then Works took a punch at Plant. "Our candidates are not to be elected to build a sea coast railroad or to take over all the public utilities. We know what a burden of debt is facing Los Angeles and if we go into that kind of a campaign see what a burden we will carry. All we want to do is to advocate competent, intelligent, honest men and they will take care of the rest. If we fail in this election it will be a long time before we may redeem ourselves and we can't lay defeat to Walter Parker if we don't win, for the good citizens are in preponderance."

Chairman Graham said organization is necessary. "I would rather let ten precincts downtown go without organization," said he, "than to miss one in the residence wards. We will win by the proportion of our total vote we get out and we must organize effectively where that vote is."

Others present were divided, some agreeing that Plant's bogey looked "good" and others agreeing that it would be smoother to play Diogenes. One man wanted the declaration of principles of the G.G.O. to include a pledge for governmental ownership of all public utilities.

The Mayor was not present in person, but most of his administration, from the strenuous Dr. Sherwin Gibbons to the placid Richard Molony, was there; and that permanent olfactory nerve of his administration, Alfred Trident, was also tugging at the leash.

It was decided to organize precinct clubs and go into practical politics with all the skill of a boss.

None of the real, for-sure bosses, except Graham, was present; but the meeting was only preliminary, and in a sense a politico-social affair.

SHE BATHES IN PUBLIC.

"Benchers" in Madison Square Garden Surprised by Actions of Fair and Frisky Dame.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, July 3.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] An attractive young woman drew her gown around her, vaulted nimbly over the three-foot fence inclosing the fountain in Madison Square Park and dived beneath the cooling waters at 6:30 o'clock tonight. Park loungers upset benches in their efforts to reach the fountain, and pedestrians ran for front-row places.

When the fair bather stood up in her clinging garments, uncorroborated report had it that the chaste Diana, looking down on the fountain from the tower of Madison Square Garden, screamed in jealous rage.

The bather frolicked around the shallow pool with the grace of a mermaid. Policeman Fitzgerald coaxed the bather toward the fence and seized her when she came within reach. She was taken to Bellevue Hospital, where she said she was Mrs. Clara Clinton, 24, living at No. 231 West Forty-second street with her husband, William Clinton. She said she had been suffering from the heat.

"When I return to New York Tuesday I will lose no time in beginning the effort to make good my losses."

BUSY DOCTOR
Sometimes Overlooks a Point.

The physician is such a busy man that he sometimes overlooks a valuable point to which his attention may be called by an intelligent patient who is a thinker.

"About a year ago my attention was called to Grape-Nuts by one of my patients," says a physician of Cincinnati.

"At the time my own health was bad and I was pretty well run down, but I saw at once that the theories behind Grape-Nuts were sound and that if the food was all that was claimed, it was a perfect food.

"So I commenced to use Grape-Nuts with cream twice a day, and in a short time I began to improve in every way and I am now much stronger, feel better and weigh more than ever before in my life.

"I know that all of this good is due to Grape-Nuts, and I am firmly convinced that the claims made for the food are true.

"I have recommended, and still recommend, Grape-Nuts to a great many of my patients with splendid results, and in some cases the improvement of patients on this fine food has been wonderful.

"As a brain and nerve food, in fact, as a general food, Grape-Nuts stands alone."

Etiwanda Vineyards

Grape Growing Pays Big

A Government report on the Grape Industry says: "The profits from an acre vary from $50 to $500, a fair average being from $125 to $150." Experienced growers at Etiwanda say that a net profit of 20 per cent. or more can be reasonably relied upon each year from a matured vineyard there. There's money in grape growing. You can profit by it, if you will, by our plan, without leaving your present occupation.

$2½ Per Acre Down, $2½ Per Acre Monthly

We Cultivate and Care for Your Vineyard Free of Charge for Three Years

Our plan in brief is this: Select your vineyard, five acres or more, either from the 640 acres now planted to Muscat Grapes or from land not planted, which we will set out to the variety of grapes you prefer. Pay us $2.50 per acre cash and $2.50 per acre monthly—the price of the land being $200 to $250 per acre, or you can pay one-fifth cash and balance on or before one, two, three and four years. We will cultivate and care for your vines free of charge for three years, guaranteeing you a full stand of vines. After that we will go on caring for your vineyard for three more years, if you wish, for 10 per cent. of its net income.

The Muscat is considered the most profitable grape for table or raisins, with excellent wine qualities. But if you prefer some other variety you can have it. Remember, Etiwanda is located in that part of the San Gabriel Valley best adapted to grapes. Several thousand acres of splendidly successful vineyards are in the immediate vicinity of our property. The land is level; water, under heavy pressure, is piped to every five acres; streets are graded. The property is a developed one. Etiwanda is on the main line of the Santa Fe Railroad, in the beautiful San Gabriel Valley, surrounded by prosperous towns. Join our daily excursions and see it for yourself.

DR. TOM SHEE BIN CO.
So. Main St.

"GIVE THE CHINAMAN A CHANCE"

"It was recently mentioned in The Times that Dr. Tom She Bin, one of the best known Chinese physicians in the United States, had been charged with practicing without a license. The doctor is a graduate of one of the leading colleges of medicine in China. He came to this country many years ago. En route plague broke out on the ship. The vessel's physician was unable to cope with it, but it is said that Dr. Tom saved every case. He was retained by the steamship company and served on Oriental lines for several years. He then began to practice among his countrymen in San Francisco, but after the earthquake, came to Los Angeles. In view of the fact that a majority of the plague cases in San Francisco have proved fatal under the care of white physicians, it might not be a bad idea to get Dr. Bin to go up there and see what he can do."

Dr. Tom She Bin can be seen at the Chinese Tea and Herb Sanitarium, 711 S. Main st. Established 1870.

Treats rheumatism, catarrh, asthma, consumption, appendicitis, kidney, liver and all female troubles and other diseases. Call and investigate. Testimonials and consultation free. Open day and night.

Send 35 cents postage or money order for a package of Dr. Tom She Bin's "Ginger Compound," a pure herb preparation, recommended for throat, lung and stomach troubles.

Dottie Dimple Proves Winner in Straight Heats.

Hal B. Comes to Life in Fast Quarter-Mile Dash.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PORTLAND, July 3. — [Exclusive Dispatch.] Thomas W. Murphy's Atlas, formerly owned by Dave Honeyman, and now 18 years old, furnished the feature performance at the second day's card at the annual meet of the Portland Fair Association, when she won the 2:30 pacing event. The veteran mare not only won both heats of her race against G. K. Howitt's Zoe, O. J. Brown's Miss Alteiena and Al Powell's Crochet, but she proved the most consistent entry in keeping her stride of any on the track.

Driven by her owner, Tom Murphy, Atlas got away to a good start each time, and while headed by Zoe or Miss Alteiena for the first quarter in each heat, she rapidly overtook each competitor, and once off in front, she was never headed, though Zoe gave her a hard race into the stretch in the second heat. Atlas crossed under the wire just a half-length ahead of Zoe, and, having won the first heat, was the winner.

Quite as exciting as the pacing event was the 2:26 trot. Howitt's Dottie Dimple proved winner in two straight heats. In the first she was pressed har by Harry Tillman's Padisha, and in the second by Belle H., but the latter entry broke in the stretch and finished last. W. A. Laidlaw's Rastus proved an erratic performer, and each time put himself out of the race by breaking badly and losing his stride.

In the three-quarter-mile running event Judge Connerton was substituted for Kamsack at the last minute, and was left at the post. Leash won this event pulled up, beating Nordente by several lengths. Hal B., a celebrity on the Grand Circuit for years, gave an exhibition race for a quarter of a mile, paced by a running horse. Hal B.'s time for the quarter was 0:29½.

Another pacing and another trotting event which had been carded was scratched.

MISCREANT BUSY.

Unknown Person Throws Broken Glass Over Road Race Course—Will Be Prosecuted If Caught.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

SANTA MONICA, July 3.—The act of a vandal in scattering broken glass over the automobile race course has convinced the officials in charge of the races that the only way to prevent a repetition of the deed will be to patrol every foot of the course throughout the night and during the early morning hours of the day of the race. This morning at three different places along the track were found numerous bits of heavy plate glass. These had evidently been carried to the track and there hammered into ragged fragments, with points so sharp that contact with the rubber tires would mean great injury if not accident. The identity of the perpetrator of the job is a mystery. The work is looked upon as being the act of some fiend. It cannot be explained as an accident. A close watch is being kept over the eight miles of oiled roadway, and should any one be detected in scattering anything on th road that might interfere with the races or the practice, arrests and prosecution will follow.

It has been agreed that there shall be no speeding over the course Sunday. The usual speed-limit ordinance will be in effect tomorrow, and should it be violated there will be arrests. During the entire week the track will be at the service of the racing cars from 5 o'clock in the morning until 10 at night. There will be no limit to the number of cars or the speed, so far as city ordinances are concerned.

HARVARD PUT OUT.

DROPS TEN-INNING GAME.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

NEW YORK, July 3.—In a rousing ten-inning finish Yale defeated Harvard today in a hotly-contested ball game, which carried with it the college baseball supremacy for 1909, each club having won a game.

The score was 5 to 2, and when the last Harvard player had gone out on a high fly to the outfield, there was a hurricane of cheers from the 10,000 spectators at the Polo grounds, and a rush of students to carry off triumphantly on their shoulders Van Vleck, the Yale pitcher, and right fielder, who tied the score, 2 to 2, in the eighth inning with a home run to the back fence, and snuffed out Harvard's hopes of scoring in the same inning by two dazzling catches in the outer garden.

In the tenth inning Hicks's wild pitch brought in a run for Yale, and an error by McLaughlin let two more runs over the plate. Score:

Yale, 5; hits, 10; errors, 0.
Harvard, 2; hits; 11; errors, 3.
Batteries—Van Vleck, Merritt and Philbin; Hartford, Hicks and Currier.

PAPKE MONEY APPEARS.

GAMBLERS LOWER ODDS.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, July 3.—[Exclusive. Dispatch.] So much Papke money was called out by the heavy odds of 10 to 4 in favor of Ketchel that this afternoon the poolroom managers cut the odds to 2 to 1. At this figure there was heavy wagering on Monday's fight for the middleweight championship.

Both men are in perfect condition. Papke is reducing by road work and counts on reaching the required weight Monday morning. Ketchel is already about at weight

Both men will give boxing exhibitions tomorrow afternoon to please large crowds.

BUICK WHITE STREAK.

The new model of the Buick "White Streak" known as the "White Streak" toy tonneau is attaining popularity in Los Angeles. This car has a full tonneau, and like the other members of the "White Streak" family, is finished in Buick white. The Howard Automobile Company delivered three of these models during the week. E. Avery McCarthy purchased one, making his third "White Streak." Deliveries weer also made to F. G. Johannsen and A. Workman.

AUTO HAND-CAR.

The automobile hand-car has been adopted by the Canadian Pacific Railway. Several have been purchased and put into active service. The cars are so small and light that a few men can lift them onto or off the track and are useful for close inspecting work.

BEST ROUTE TO ROAD RACE.

Travel to Venice, Ocean Park and Santa Monica is at high-water mark. There are several routes which can be followed by autoists who seek the ocean and the road race course. One by way of West Washington street has become badly cut up, and is at present almost unfit for travel because of the condition of the roads. Thoroughfares should be repaired if cars are to chug over this two miles of city streets.

At present the best route is by way of Pico street to Crenshaw boulevard. That means that cars can follow the Pico pavement to the rougher road, then turn south toward Washington street and proceed by way of the hill near the Hauser slaughter-house. This route takes the cars over a road fourteen miles long to Venice. Two miles beyond Venice over the speedway is the Santa Monica road race course.

NEW GAME.

LACROSSE GAME BETWEEN RACES.

FIESTA STADIUM MANAGEMENT STARTS INNOVATION.

Mitchell and Lingenfelder Are to Go After Mile Record for Five-Lap Track on Motorcycles—Duer and Agraz in Motor-Paced Race of Fifteen Miles.

A lacrosse game between the Los Angeles Club and the Shamrocks, and bicycle and motorcycle races are to be held at Fiesta Stadium this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

Arthur Mitchell and Eddie Lingenfelder are going after a record for the mile and also will meet in a ten-mile match race. The best amateur motor riders in the city are to make an attempt to lower the mile record.

Ray Duer, who established several new world's records at the Coliseum last Sunday, is to meet Emil Agraz in a fifteen-mile motor-paced race. This event should be closely contested and interesting as both men are capable of maintaining a high rate of speed and are absolutely fearless in tearing around the track.

The bicycle races will include professional and amateur events. The racing colony has dwindled somewhat in size, but there are some good riders left and the competitions promise to be interesting.

Lacrosse has never been played extensively in the West and it has been many years since a regulation match was played in this city. The teams that are to meet today have been practicing for some time and as most of the players are old-timers at the game a good exhibition should result. The Canadian game is exciting when properly played.

The lacrosse game will be played in four fifteen-minute sections, which will be interspersed among the track events. The teams are to line up as follows:

Los Angeles.		Shamrocks.
Young	goal	Porter
Brennan	point	McNaughton
Black	cover point	Calster
Moffatt	1st defense	Hayer
Longevan	2d defense	Seymour
McIntosh	3d defense	Minto

Hoctor	3d home	Price
Minshall	2d home	Campbell
Rennie	1st home	Longevan

YELLOWTAIL RUN AT THE BEACHES.

WEEK'S SPORT HAS BEEN BEST OF THE SEASON.

Fishermen Snag Big Fish Under Wharves—Bass Caught in Large Numbers in Favored Places—Surf Casters Have Had Good Luck. Regulars Have Good Sport.

The period of continued warm weather has been accompanied by the appearance of yellowtail, and at Del Rey, Redondo, Port Los Angeles and Newport the handliners have taken quite a few of the big fellows. The small fry fishing has improved also during the last week, pompano, yellowfin and mackerel running strong all along the west coast.

Newport has been the favored place for the yellowtail, and last Sunday six big fellows were taken off the pier. Two of the fish were snagged by spear fishermen. The water at this point is unusually clear, the beach is a white sand, and the yellowtail can be seen at a depth of several fathoms. Fishermen watch the big fellows darting about the piles in search of small fry, and it is only a matter of practice to send the barbed s eel into the back of the fish.

Eight yellowtail were taken in three days at Port Los Angeles, and the fish averaged betwen fourteen and eighteen pounds. The largest caught was a twenty-one pounder taken Tuesday morning by Harry McCord from the end of the pier. Joe Wellington hooked two yellowtail Wednesday, using smelt for bait. Three more were caught Thursday by G. N. Vaughn and F. P. Lewis.

Redondo has entertained a happy crowd of regulars all week, and the fishermen netted many baskets of small fry. Mackerel, sea trout, and surf have been the most plentiful, while several good-sized yellowtail and halibut were taken earlier in the week. The surf ran strong all along the coast from Manhattan to Cliffton, and several good baskets were taken. Cliffton was the favorite point, and the casters caught many nice messes there last Sunday.

A new fishing point has been opened to the fishermen at North Beach, where the new concrete pier under construction is nearing completion. Beach casters have had good luck near the pier, and the location seems to be a good fishing point.

Halibut have been quite numerous at Port Los Angeles, Del Rey and Balboa. Bay City has been visited by several regulars and the catches of surf have been good. Chester Gordan caught a seven and a half pound surf Tuesday, and twenty-five smaller ones. W. E. Strobridge made a good catch of striped bass, bringing in the string in two hours last Sunday. S. Simons caught a seven and one-half-pound surf and twenty-five smaller ones at Bay City.

An eight-pound surf was hooked by H. L. Corson at Balboa last Sunday. Corson also took a seven-pound bass. Over two hundred pounds of bass were taken in the bay in the same day. Sheepshead have been plentiful and yellowtail were numerous.

A heavy run of yellowfin was on at Manhattan early in the week, and the handful of regulars enjoyed good sport. Eighty pounds were taken last Sunday and Monday.

THE first week of the ninth annual scholarship contest of The Times came to a close yesterday evening with a rush of business almost unprecedented in Times contests at so early a stage of the campaign. The amount of money cashed in for subscriptions yesterday was more than double that of any preceding day of the contest, except the opening day. The total number of points scored was 200,175.

Miss Constance Hood, daughter of Milk Inspector George W. Hood, made the record score of the day, 36,330, and advanced to the head of the procession, being the fifth contestant to occupy that place of honor in the seven days that the contest has been open.

Miss Anna Bloom was the first "queen" of the contest, and wore the crown for two days; then came "Princess Alice" Capron, who reigned just one day; she was succeeded by Frank Maine, the Italio-American, for one brief day; he was superseded by Raymond Austin, the Pasadena prince of fiddlers, who held on for two days. The reign of "Queen" Constance begins today. How long she will be able to hold the exalted place remains to be seen.

CHURCH BACKING HER.

If there is one place above another where the news of Miss Hood's good fortune will be received with satisfaction, it will be at the Magnolia-Avenue Baptist Church, with which the Hood family has been prominently identified ever since its establishment. Constance and her sister have been leading spirits in the Sunday-school and young people's meetings of the church, and she is at the present time president of the intermediate Christian Endeavor Society of the church. Last year Miss Grace Franklin represented the Magnolia Avenue Christian Church in the contest, and received such warm support that she won second prize. Miss Hood bids fair to be even a more popular candidate. Her pastor last Sunday announced her candidacy for one of The Times scholarships from the pulpit and urged the members of the congregation to show their appreciation of Miss Hood's good work in behalf of the church, by helping her to win the scholarship she is striving for.

There probably is not a more popular man in the public service in Los Angeles than Milk Inspector Hood, and his many friends in official and private life are rallying to the support of his ambitious young daughter in a most gratifying manner. If Miss Constance can win the $500 cash prize which she is aiming at, it will go a long way toward completing her education. Her friends in the Los Angeles High School, in which she is a pupil, will also rejoice in her victory if she wins, especially if she triumphs over a "Poly High" student.

Sterling and Stella Scheck, twin brother and sister who are making a strenuous joint campaign to win a scholarship.

THE first week of the ninth annual scholarship contest of The Times came to a close yesterday evening with a rush of business almost unprecedented in Times contests at so early a stage of the campaign. The amount of money cashed in for subscriptions yesterday was more than double that of any preceding day of the contest, except the opening day. The total number of points scored was 209,175.

Miss Constance Hood, daughter of Milk Inspector George W. Hood, made the record score of the day, 36,320, and advanced to the head of the procession, being the fifth contestant to occupy that place of honor in the seven days that the contest has been open.

Miss Anna Bloom was the first "queen" of the contest, and wore the crown for two days; then came "Princess Alice" Capron, who reigned just one day; she was succeeded by Frank Maine, the Italio-American, for one brief day; he was superseded by Raymond Austin, the Pasadena prince of fiddlers, who held on for two days. The reign of "Queen" Constance begins today. How long she will be able to hold the exalted place remains to be seen.

CHURCH BACKING HER.

If there is one place above another where the news of Miss Hood's good fortune will be received with satisfaction, it will be at the Magnolia-Avenue Baptist Church, with which the Hood family has been prominently identified ever since its establishment. Constance and her sister have been leading spirits in the Sunday-school and young people's meetings of the church, and she is at the present time president of the intermediate Christian Endeavor Society of the church. Last year Miss Grace Franklin represented the Magnolia Avenue Christian Church in the contest, and received such warm support that she won second prize. Miss Hood bids fair to be even a more popular candidate. Her pastor last Sunday announced her candidacy for one of The Times scholarships from the pulpit and urged the members of the congregation to show their appreciation of Miss Hood's good work in behalf of the church, by helping her to win the scholarship she is striving for.

There probably is not a more popular man in the public service in Los Angeles than Milk Inspector Hood, and his many friends in official and private life are rallying to the support of his ambitious young daughter in a most gratifying manner. Her friends in the Los Angeles High School, in which she is a pupil, will also rejoice in her victory if she wins, especially if she triumphs over a "Poly High" student.

'RAH FOR REDLANDS RUSTLER.

Redlands has no resident representative in the contest this year, but a former Redlands boy is representing it by proxy. Murrey Royar won a scholarship last year largely through Redlands support, and he is meeting with equally generous support from his Redlands friends this year. Master Royar has kept pretty well to the front ever since the beginning of the present contest. For several days he did not show up at contest headquarters, and the contest manager was beginning to think he had fallen by the wayside and was billed for a long toboggan ride. But he reappeared with smiling face yesterday, and no wonder he smiled, for he plunked in 27,940 points, nearly all of which he gathered in at Redlands during a hasty trip to his old home town. When a boy leaves a place and can go back and get such results from his old friends and neighbors, it is a pretty good sign that he is well thought of. Murrey won a scholarship in the Yale English and Classical School last year and made such good use of it that he is anxious to win it for another term. What's the matter with the "Redlands Rustler?" He's all right! His gain of 27,940 points took him up from tenth to eighth place.

Mary Pearl Pottol,
foothill favorite who is striving for second term in Huntington Hall.

MAINE MOVES UP AGAIN.

Frank Maine, the brilliant Italio-American campaigner, is on the upgrade again. He registered a gain of 19,439 yesterday and moved up from third to second place. Frank's cousin, Joe Pagliano, one of the most prominent business men in the Italian colony, who numbers his friends by the hundred, has taken up the cudgels for him, much to Frank's delight. Any one who knows Sig. Pagliano is aware that he never does things by halves. To have Pagliano for an ally is pretty nearly as good as having the battle won. Is it any wonder that Frank Maine thinks he can already hear the jingle of that $500 in gold coin in his pocket?

HUNTINGTON HALL RIVALS.

Fourth largest gainer of the day was Mary Pearl Pottol, the favorite of the Monrovia-Duarte foothills citrus belt. Miss Pottol entered the contest about three weeks late last year, but made such a lively campaign that she was one of the honor prize-winners at the finish. No young lady stands higher in public esteem in her home town than Miss Pottol does at Monrovia. She is equally popular at Duarte, where she secured many points during the past week. Miss Pottol received as her reward for her good work in last year's contest a scholarship good for one year's tuition in Huntington Hall, besides a large cash prize. She is eager to win the Huntington Hall scholarship again, but will encounter strenuous competition for this desirable prize.

Miss Helen Carolyn Wilson of Whittier won the Huntington Hall scholarship in the contest of 1907, and, like Miss Pottol, she thinks there is no scholarship to be had that suits her quite so well. She and Miss Pottol both were favorite pupils at Huntington Hall during the year just closed, and each is determined to win the free scholarship offered by The Times in that popular institution during the coming year. Which of them will get it?

Miss Wilson began her campaign late this year. She scored her first points yesterday, 7300, which gives her fifteenth place in the score list. Miss Pottol, who took time by the forelock, has a lead of 33,360 over her rival. She has already worked a good part of her territory, while Miss Wilson has just begun to call on her friends. Whittier, with its wealth of orchards, fields and oil wells, will hardly stand to be outdone by the classic foothill towns at the base of the Sierra Madre. But it all depends on the energy and popularity of the rival contestants. Miss Wilson will make a whirlwind campaign, and the "Foothills Favorite" will find it quite a task to withstand the onslaught of the "Whittier Whirlwind."

ANNA SMILES AGAIN.

Little Anna Bloom is gradually recovering her smiles, which began to fade away several days ago. Starting at the very top of the column, which made her smile all over, she began to go down the line until she got as low as seventh place. That diminished her smile very considerably. But on Friday she got back to sixth place, and yesterday she went up another notch by registering a gain of 14,546 points. She is once more one of the "High Five," and by persevering she hopes to remain a member of that distinguished quintette. Miss Anna mourns the tragic death of Mr. I. L. Lowman probably as sincerely as any one. He was her friend and had promised her a year's subscription. Since other contestants are gaining votes on account of their nationality and the fraternal affiliations of their fathers, brothers, etc., Miss Anna would like to have it known that both her father and her brother are Masons. She also takes pride in belonging to the race known as "God's chosen people," since the earliest dawn of human history—a race that has made its power felt in every civilized nation of the world.

Helen Carolyn Wilson,
accomplished Whittier girl, who will make whirlwind campaign to continue her education.

DAUGHTER OF POMONA.

Miss Florence Pedley of Pomona added 6950 points to her score and advanced from eleventh to tenth place. A gentleman from the Fruit City who called at contest headquarters yesterday stated that Miss Pedley is a sure winner, as she has the active sympathy and support of all of the best people of Pomona who will not stand to see her lose. Besides her personal popularity she has the prestige of her father behind her and his host of loyal friends who will go the limit to help her win. Mr. Pedley is prominent among the Elks and Foresters as well as in the National Guard, and other organizations. Miss Pedley is a Forester, too, an Epworth Leaguer and a J.O.C.

OTHER GAINERS.

STERLING AND STELLA.

As nice a pair of little workers as ever engaged in any contest are Sterling and Stella Scheck, a twin brother and sister. Stella is the larger of the two and she is determined to help her brother to win the scholarship he covets. Their father has for many years been connected with the Anchor Laundry. He has a large family to support and is bringing up his children to be useful men and women. All, from the eldest to the least, are helping Sterling in his scholarship campaign, and if ambition and energy count for anything, this fine little chap should prove to be a winner. The contest manager is convinced that there is no more deserving boy in the contest. He came into the contest highly recommended and his conduct since the contest began fully justifies all the good reports that have come to The Times concerning him. A vote for him is also a vote for his bright little twin sister. It is hoped these interesting twins will not be left out of the list of prize-winners.

NOTICE TO CONTESTANTS.

Contest headquarters will be closed on Monday on account of the Fourth of July holiday.

Clip the coupon from the pink sheet today. It is good for five votes.

BEDLAM BREAKS LOOSE IN CITY.

NOISY START OF THREE DAYS OF FOURTH OF JULY.

Boy Eats Deadly Nightshade and Narrowly Escapes Death—Man Asserts Has Solved Problem Successful Flying Machine—Immorality Said to Exist at High School. But Superintendent Denies.

Office of The Times, No. 26 S. Raymond Ave

PASADENA, July 4.—At 7 o'clock last night bedlam broke loose in Pasadena, and on every hand there banged and boomed huge firecrackers and cannon, the heavy discharge punctuated by the staccato crackle of wee sma' ones let off singly and in bunches.

Three days of Fourth of July may prove the mettle of the fire department. At any rate, its members are constantly on guard and the force is redoubled during the two periods of official celebration allowed by Chief Clifford. From 7 to 10 o'clock last night the amount of fireworks burned was scandalous. Three hours were allowed by Chief Clifford for Saturday night. When 10 o'clock came, however, there was little cessation in the firing all over the city, and many rockets went skyward after the hour when absolute quiet was supposed to reign. Peace did not come till shortly after midnight, but a sane Fourth will be enjoyed today.

Monday morning the small boys are not expected to awaken all the neighbors, but at 4 o'clock in the afternoon they may start things going right merrily and keep up the pace until the hour of 10.

Because of the Fourth falling on Sunday, the business houses, under the Merchants' Association ruling, are taking a lay-off on Monday, and the double holiday will be observed by an evacuation of hundreds to the beaches and mountains.

A band concert will be given in Central Park Monday night for the benefit of the stay-at-homes. A number of picnic parties, including two hayricks of United States Spanish War Veterans, are planning to spend the holiday camping out in the Arroyo Seco. The veterans, with their ladies, will leave this morning, to return Monday evening.

Pasadena Welsh-Americans will go to Sycamore Grove, and New Englanders will journey to Eastlake Park. Concordia, Kan., residents of Pasadena will hold jinks of their own at Sycamore Grove.

EATS DEADLY NIGHTSHADE.

The young son of Mr. and Mrs. Adams, Orange Grove and Wilson avenues, ate a number of berries of the deadly nightshade after dinner last evening and narrowly escaped death as a consequence. Two physicians worked all night to save his life. It was the most pronounced case of beladona poisoning ever experienced in this city. The lad was unable to tell where he procured the berries, but a nightshade bush near the residence probably explains the source of the poison. Stimulants and restoratives were used in profusion to save the young life.

WILL BUILD SHORT CUT.

After talking over the proposed short cut line from Alhambra to Pasadena with H. E. Huntington in a conference lasting nearly two hours, the Pasadena and Alhambra committees returned home yesterday satisfied that the extension asked will be granted. The line, it is estimated, will cost approximately $100,000, and provision will be made to assess the route and provide a bonus.

BOASTS OF AIRSHIP.

L. C. Van Rieper, who has invented a new kind of air machine, and who has just completed a model in conjunction with J. E. Morehart, today said, after testing his apparatus, that the world need look no further for a successful flying apparatus. Patents will be applied fc and a large machine built, which, it is hoped, will fly as well as the model.

CHARGE IMMORALITY.

After addresses had been made by M. F. Curtis, L. E. Sherman, A. J. Toolen, William Easterbrook and John Pope, and a running fire of comment on the serious question involved had absorbed several minutes more of the meeting, the members of the North Lincoln City and County Improvement Association passed resolutions last evening deploring present conditions in the High School and demanding an investigation of the moral status of the school. The meeting recommends segregation of the sexes. Some specific instances were quoted at the meeting, but the men preferring the charges refuse to repeat them unless called upon by the investigating board.

The resolution was adopted soon after Superintendent A. L. Hamilton had strenuously denied the existence of immoral conditions in the High School. The Board of Education may take action in the matter during the week.

GOING SOME.

A. Sommers, a negro, in the trial of Arthur E. Litts, on the charge of speeding, yesterday morning, said the machine was going so fast that he said "Here it comes," and found he was mistaken, so said "There she goes." He qualified his statement by saying the machine was going fifty miles an hour. Litts was fined $25.

THROWN BY ANIMAL.

Charles Madison of Kenyon street was butted by a vicious cow and dragged fifty feet by the leading rope yesterday morning. He suffered badly bruised arms, fingers and hip, and will be laid up several days as a result of his injuries.

ELKS PUBLISH PROGRAMME.

The Elks' programme at Tournament Park, July 12, was made public yesterday. It contains over two hours of thrills. Following the barbecue which will be open at 10:30 o'clock and close at 1:30, the following will be the order of the afternoon: 1:30 p.m., novelty race; 1:45 p.m., first heat Roman chariot race, $1000 first prize and $500 second prize, E. J. Livingood driving four trained steeds against Frank Williams, who has a quartette of fire eaters waiting for a wild romp; 1:55 p.m., first half of pushball contest between Circle Stars and Black Cross teams, both teams contested before the Tournament of Roses throngs, January 1; 2:30 p.m., burro chariot race; 2:35 p.m., umbrella race; 2:50 p.m., second heat Roman chariot race; 3:00 p.m., second half pushball contest; 3:25 p.m., relay change race; 3:45 p.m., third heat Roman chariot race.

PASADENA BREVITIES.

In the park budget submitted to the Commissioners, today, an item of $2500 for band concerts to be given during the ensuing year is being considered and will probably be granted.

E. C. Bradley, vice-president and general manager of the Sunset Telephone and Telegraph Company, in a public letter to the Mayor, explains that his company is fighting the city because the loss of the suit would mean the annual loss of $500,000 to the company, necessitating a raise in tolls.

Guy Findley, the lad who lost his right eye in a powder explosion a few days ago, was yesterday assured his left eye would retain its sight.

The trial of Joe Hill, alias Sheeney Benny, the New York crook caught while attempting to pick the pocket of a Civil War veteran, will be held October 21.

The Board of Commissioners, today, recommended to the Council the acceptance of the new fire house at Hurlbut avenue.

"Truck" Wacob, formerly a Pasadena ball player, has given his release from the Springfield, Ct., team on account of a broken hand received early in the season. He was one of the best players in the league.

John Snell, the lad who shot Ignatious Lechert of Linda Vista several weeks ago, will be tried, Thursday afternoon, in the Juvenile Court.

This afternoon, at Liberty Park there will be a religious rally and "Stainless Flag Day" programme under the auspices of the Pasadena Federation of the W.C.T.U. The services will open at 3 o'clock and will be attended by the children of the South Pasadena Orphan's Home in a body.

Dr. James H. McLaren, formerly of Riverside, will deliver an address, this afternoon at 4 o'clock, on "Patriotism and Religion," at the First Baptist Church.

RECLAIMED.

REDEEMED FROM SALT MARSHES.

VENICE OF AMERICA IS FOUR YEARS OLD TODAY.

Celebration Will Have Twofold Meaning — Elaborate Decorations. Heroic Head of Elk Is Feature. Steady Demand for Cottages and Bungalows at Pleasure Resort.

VENICE, July 3.—Although Venice of America will be four years old tomorrow, the anniversary will not be celebrated until Monday. There will be a patriotic demonstration in honor of the passage of the Declaration of Independence, but the celebration will have another meaning. It will serve to direct attention to the fact that all there is of Venice today was builded in four years, and that the $3,000,000 pleasure ground of today has but recently been redeemed from the tides and salt marshes.

Four and a half years ago it was announced that Abbot Kinney had dreamed of the creation of a modern pleasure place by the sea, to be fashioned after the Venice of old, with arcaded streets, canals running with salt water, and bearing pleasure boats. It was to be called San Carlos Mission, and the building of the city was to be accomplished in a short space of time. One by one the contracts were let, and soon a vast army of laborers and artisans were shoveling and hewing and hammering away. First came the dredging for the canals, and the filling in of the low places. The golden stream of Sweet Caporal dollars that was poured upon the sand gave employment during the winter and spring months to a force of 2000 men.

The pile drivers were pegging away at the pier, the ship carpenters were whipping the Cabrillo into shape, the Pavilion was assuming graceful lines and the Auditorium was a forest of hewn timbers. Then came the storm of March. A hundred thousand dollars' worth of improvements were swept into the sea during a gale that lasted scarce half an hour.

Next day the forces were doubled, to the end that the entire conception might be ready for dedication by July 4. The task was an immense one. Night was the same as day, and Sunday saw no rest. In twenty-eight days from the commencement of work on the auditorium that structure was turned over completed, furnished and ready for occupancy. The other attractions and features followed closely, and from month to month and year to year additions and improvements were made.

First came the breakwater, then the dancing pavilion, the bath-house, the aquarium, Midway Pleasance, other bath-houses, the miniature railway, the esplanade, and building after building, until Venice assumed such proportions that it is no unusual thing to be called upon to provide entertainment and accommodations for 60,000 people in one day. There was the largest skating rink in the West while that craze was at its height, and in the auditorium there is an immense pipe organ. By the pier there is a United States life-saving station. At night Venice is one blaze of electric energy, the number of lamps being adequate for the entire lighting of a city several times the population of Venice.

ELABORATE DECORATION.

The most elaborate of the bayside Elk decorations is the heroic head of an elk. It stands over the entrance to the pier and is more than twenty feet high. At night he figure will be outlined in a blaze of electric energy, it having been surrounded by a hundred incandescent bulbs. The residences, public buildings and business houses, from end to end of the bay, are being handsomely decorated, the colors combining for the Fourth of July, the automobile races and the Elks. The next two weeks promise to be about as lively as any this district has ever experienced. Every preparation is being made for the entertainment of vast crowds, and that they are coming is evidenced by the steady demand for cottages, bungalows and residences of the larger sort.

AZUSA.

AZUSA, June 3.—Forest Ranger R. H. Hiett announces that no fireworks will be permitted on any of the government forest reserves.

Dana C. King, for seven years connected with the Azusa-Covina-Glendora Fruit Exchange, has resigned, and as soon as his successor is appointed will move to Los Angeles. He is to be sales manager of the California Fruit Growers' Exchange.

The faculty of Citrus Union High School for the coming year is new, with the exception of Miss Ran, who has taught here one year. Edward Solomon of Los Angeles, for four years principal of the Huntington Beach High Schol, will be principal. Verne Ross, of Donnelson, Ill., teacher of sciences; Miss Sura Ran of Pasadena, teacher of Latin and German; Miss Nain Taylor of Los Angeles, teacher of English; Miss Kate Darling of Pasadena will assist in Latin, history, music and girls' athletics; Miss Edna Osborn of Watsonville will have charge of the art department; G. W. Sawyer of Riverside is head of the commercial school.

FIRST CARS HUM TO THE PARK.

PACIFIC ELECTRIC'S LINE IS NOW IN OPERATION.

Opening of Road to Be Celebrated This Afternoon by Concert by the Seventh Regiment Band—Local Composer's Two-Step to Be Played. Passing of Veterans.

POMONA, July 3. — The Pacific Electric will run cars for the first time tomorrow over its local line up Huntington boulevard, through the Ganesha Park tract to the park.

The Seventh Regiment Band will give a concert in the park at 2:30 p. m. The first number on the programme will be the two-step, "The Seventh Regiment," composed by Miss Stella M. Ford of this city.

A. J. Clogston, a Civil War veteran, died at his home on East San Francisco avenue yesterday afternoon, after a long illness. He was 65 years old and leaves a widow and four sons.

NO FORMAL CELEBRATION.

There will be no formal celebration of the Fourth of July here, and many Pomonans are planning trips to the mountains or the beaches.

The postoffice Monday will be closed at 10:30 a.m. City carriers will make the usual forenoon collections and deliveries. Rural carriers will make no deliveries, but will serve patrons at carriers' windows from 8 to 10:30 a.m.

The funeral of W. H. Conrad, who died Thursday at the Pomona Valley Hospital, as the result of a runaway accident, will be held at the family home, No. 725 South Park avenue, at 2 o'clock this afternoon. Mr. Conrad was a veteran of the Civil War, and 67 years old. He leaves two sons, L. W. and L. C. Conrad, who reside here.

BUYS GROCERY BUSINESS.

Karl J. Cole, who was formerly engaged in the grocery business here, has bought out the grocery firm of Bowyer, Steffa & Paige. Mr. Steffa retires on account of ill health; Mr. Paige is now city park superintendent, and Mr. Bowyer will assist Mr. Cole in the business.

Douglas Doty has purchased the transfer business of T. J. Dowling, who plans to raise alfalfa on a large scale.

Miss Mabel L. Adams, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Adams, has gone to Angola, Ind. She will stop at Minneapolis and Seattle on her way home.

Mmes. J. W. Cowdery, Luella Clark and Messrs. Ivor Pendleton and K. K. Fritz of the Fraternal Brotherhood lodge, have secured free trips to the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition as a result of successful competition in securing new lodge members.

RETURNS TO CATALINA.

Ex-Senator S. N. Androus returned to Catalina today after a business trip here. He is spending the summer with his family on the island, and has purchased a steam launch.

D. R. Kelsey is enjoying an eastern trip.

"Hotel del Coronado" leads all.

DRILL AT COVINA.

Evolutions of Patriarchs Militant a Feature of Independence Day Celebration.

COVINA, July 3.—A competitive drill by several cantons of the Patriarchs Militant was a feature of the Independence Day celebration here today. Col. H. S. Brown of Los Angeles and staff acted as judges. Judgment was reserved till the end of the season. Cantons from Los Angeles, Pasadena, Santa Ana and Covina participated.

Jackson of Azusa defeated Wallace Reed of the University of Southern California in the relay running race between Azusa and Covina, and gave the Independence Day celebration its most exciting feature. Reed gained steadily on Azusa's star runner, but his team was slower than the well-drilled Azusa relay. In the 100-yard dash Reed defeated Jackson easily by five yards, time 10 2-5 sec. King of Covina won the mile and a half bicycle race handily, defeating Wilkins of San Dimas, time 3 min. flat. The running high jump was taken by Douglas of Berkeley against Sam Allison of Covina, height 5 ft. 4½ in. The races for boys and girls were entered into with spirit, and the sport programme was an interesting one throughout.

In a ten inning game of ball, Long Beach defeated Covina by a score of 6 to 4. The Covina team will seek revenge on Monday at a return game at Long Beach.

The exercises in the Woman's clubhouse were given before a big audience Will A. Knighten of Los Angeles, an old soldier and patriotic clergyman, delivered a stirring address. The Grand Army Drum Corps, fifteen in number from Los Angeles, awoke the entire town to a high pitch of enthusiasm with old-time war melodies.

The introduction of a number consisting of the long drum call to arms by Philo L. Case, who sounded the famous alarm at the Battle of Shiloh, caused wild enthusiasm, and the aged veteran was obliged to respond. Case's prompt obedience to orders at the Shiloh engagement, while under furious fire, turned the tide of the battle. Veteran "Bob" Bain of the corps gave talk on the history of his drum, which was captured by his great grandfather from the Hessians during the Revolutionary war, was carried by his grandfather in the Mexican War, in the New York Militia by his father, and by his brother and himself through the four years of the Civil War.

Coronado Tent City is the best.

TO HAVE NEW SCHOOLS.

Demanded by South Pasadena's Growth—Services in Tent—Night Watchman Appointed.

SOUTH PASADENA, July 3.—The school trustees have selected the northeast corner of Mission and Elm streets as a site for a new building. The price is $12,500. The property, which is owned by C. A. Dodge, has a frontage of 300 feet on Mission street, and 390 feet on Elm and Montrose avenues.

Another site is to be chosen, and it will probably be in the Oneonta Park district. Only one building will be erected this year.

The services of the Christian Church will be held in the tent on the Library block Sunday. They will be conducted by Rev. Dr. S. M. Martin, and the singing will be led by Prof. C. H. Hoggatt. A lecture to men only will be given at 3 o'clock in the afternoon.

BUTTS-SWARTZ WEDDING.

The marriage of Miss Lyla Katherine Butts, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Butts of Dayton, O., to John C. Swartz, son of Mrs. M. E. Swartz, of No. 1011 Park street, took place today at the residence of Rev. Malcolm James McLeod, No. 969 San Pasqual street, Pasadena. The bride wore a dainty gown of French lawn, elaborately trimmed with lace, and a picture hat, and carried an arm bouquet of white Shasta daisies and ferns. The ceremony was witnessed only by relatives. After a short trip the young couple will be at home to their friends at No. 1011 Park street, this city.

Miss Mildred Sherry, daughter of Dr. Henry Sherry, of No. 221 Fremont avenue, has returned from the University of Illinois for her vacation. Her brother, LeRoy, remained to take the summer course, and will not return until August.

John Lillich of No. 1130 Oxley street has been appointed night watchman at a salary of $75 a month.

TO ORGANIZE COMPANY.

Efforts are being made by some of the prominent young business men of this city and Pasadena to organize a new company of the National Guard. Sixty men will be required and it is believed that this city will furnish at least one-third of this number.

At the meeting of the Y's at the home of Miss Dora Raab of No. 107 Buena Visa street, Thursday evening, the programme was in charge of Miss Mary Gillies. Mrs. Mills, field secretary of the Anti-Saloon League, delivered an address; Miss Mabel Bisop rendered a piano solo, Miss Helen Stockman sang, and Mrs. Ada Farrell gave a reading.

Miss Elizabeth Barrows and Gregg Horton, who were married in Pasadena Wednesday evening, will be at home to their friends in this city after September 1 at No. 1034 Stratford avenue.

A waiting room for the patrons of the Pacific Electric lines will be built at the southeast corner of Fair Oaks avenue and Mission street.

AVALON PLANS BIG DAY.

Summer Girl Arrives in Force to Take Part in the Island Festivities.

AVALON, July 3.—Over $500 will be given Monday in prizes to the winners of events planned by the Freeholders' Improvement Association.

The decorations are elaborate. Commencing at 8:30 o'clock in the morning, the programme will open with a motor boat race. Swimming contests, water fencing, polo and a duck race will follow. Plans have also been made for several exhibitions of fancy diving and swimming. To be thrown from the wharf tied in a sack will be the "stunt" of Capt. Jack Williams, the only man who beat Webb, the famous English swimmer.

The afternoon will be devoted to a series of sports to take place on Crescent avenue. At dusk there will be "an eruption of Sugarloaf Island." The programme will include a sham battle, fireworks display on Sugar Loaf and Abalone Point, and a grand illumination of the entire bay. Two concerts will be given by Porter's Catalina Band.

TROPICO.

TROPICO, July 3.—The Thursday Afternoon Club met at G.A.R. Hall, with Mrs. Ernest J. Morgan and Mrs. George Howe as hostesses. Mrs. Wm W. The ladies enjoyed the punch and wafers in the banquet hall, which was cool and pleasant, with its decorations of greenery and scarlet geraniums.

Profits—Security

THERE is no other business in Los Angeles combining, to such a marked degree, the large earnings, and, at the same time, the absolute safety of an investment, as a well managed building company.

NEWS REPORTS FROM CORRESPONDENTS OF THE TIMES.

RIVERSIDE.

COUNTY PROUD OF ITS GROWTH.

MILLION AND QUARTER GAIN IN ASSESSABLE PROPERTY.

All Records for a Year Broken. City's Increase More Than Hundred and Thirty Thousand—Woman Swears Husband Forced Confession of Unfaithfulness at Pistol's Point.

RIVERSIDE, July 3.—Riverside county has made a gain of more than 1,250,000 in assessable property in the past year. The new assessment rolls will be turned over to the Board of Equalization Tuesday.

The books reveal a total of $17,918,160 worth of assessable property in the county, exclusive of personal property, which will probably add another 1,000,000 to this amount. The total valuation last year was $16,666,446.

In the city there has been a gain of 130,270. The increase in Corona is 112,510; in San Jacinto, $8856, and in Elsinore, $14,730.

The growth made in the past year by the unincorporated sections of Riverside county is shown by a gain of 985,148. This is the largest ratio of increase made in a year in the history of the county.

CONFESSES AT GUN'S POINT?

Affirming that her husband forced a confession of unfaithfulness from her at the point of a pistol, Rose Marie Forgit, on the witness stand yesterday, denied his charge of infidelity. Louis Pierre Forgit was suing for divoce.

In the course of the trial, Judge Densmore stated that one of the parties in the suit was a candidate for the penitentiary, because of perjury.

Owing to the direct contradiction in the evidence, the court threw out all testimony in support of the charge of unfaithfulness. An interlocutory decree was granted the husband on the ground of desertion, and he was given the custody of the older child.

PACKING-HOUSE BURNS.

Fire destroyed the packing-house on the ranch of W. D. Merickel, near Arlington, last night. Because of the lack of water, nothing could be done to check the flames. The loss is about 7000, practically covered by insurance. The origin of the fire is unknown.

CUPID'S VICTORIES.

Marriage licenses were issued by the County Clerk today to Charles P. Topliff, aged 44, a native of New York and resident of Los Angeles, and Kathryn G. Carney, aged 30, a native of Pennsylvania and resident of Salt Lake City, and to George B. Currier, aged 21, a native of Illinois, and Pearl E. Tucker, aged 18, a native of Oregon, both residents of Riverside.

GAS FOR ONTARIO.

New Company Will Immediately Start to Supply Three Hundred Customers.

ONTARIO, July 3.—Next Tuesday Ontario will, for the first time, be able to light her gas connections. On that day the Ontario-Upland Gas Company will have its plant and connections here completed. It will make gas for the first time and start immediate delivery to 300 consumers. The plant is located south of town well away from the residence district. It represents an expenditure of $60,000. A local canning company will probably use 100,000 cubic feet per month. The lemon-curing houses of the two towns believe that by sweating the fruit with gas a much better grade of cured fruit will result.

The plant is equipped with a double set of generators, so that should there at any time be a breakdown of one set the other can be pressed into service.

In speaking of the general prosperity of the district, President J. R. Anderson said he found it impossible to find suitable rooms to rent in Upland for headquarters and display rooms, owing to the demand for such accommodations, and the company will therefore erect a large tent to house the headquarters of construction work.

There will be no such rousing celebration of July 4 in town as there was last year. The business houses will all close. A large number of people have already started for trips to the resorts in the mountains and to the beaches.

ELSINORE.

ELSINORE, July 3.—J. P. Macy and C. S. Merrifield, who lost heavily by the fire of Tuesday, will both rebuild of concrete.

Apricot drying has begun in earnest. There is a large crop of fine fruit.

Mock, Glendale.

HEMET.

HEMET, July 3.—There is great activity in the apricot orchards and dryers now. The fruit is ripening rapidly, and there is work for all who want it. Many of the school children are taking advantage of this opportunity to make money during the vacation. The crop is large, and the fruit of excellent quality.

The merchants are busy putting finishing touches to the decorations for the celebration here Monday. The streets are hung with bunting and pennants, and the stores are gay with the national colors. All eating-houses are laying in supplies to feed a big crowd.

Rev. Arthur L. Walters, who will take charge of the Episcopal Mission here, arrived last evening. Holy Communion will be celebrated tomorrow morning at the operahouse, where the services will be held.

BUSY DAY AT COLTON.

COLTON, July 3.—The Gregory Fruit Company's cannery is now a veritable beehive of industry, about three hundred men, women and children being employed in caring for the fruit. The cannery was opened about a week ago with Frank Crane as manager. All the cherries have been cared for and the hands are now working on apricots, the output since the opening having averaged about 30,000 cans a day. The company expects to put up during the season 150 cars of deciduous fruit.

The Pastor's Aid Society of the Presbyterian Church enjoyed a social session day before yesterday, in the church parlors, the hostesses being Mrs. A. Leedom and Mrs. W. F. Jones.

UNFORTUNATE.

DRIVEN INSANE BY BAD BURNS.

MINING COMPANY'S SECRETARY BECOMES DEMENTED.

Severe Shock Unbalances Him—Assessed Value of San Bernardino County Shows Gain of Four Million Dollars Over Last Year. Sheep Herder Bitten by Rattler.

SAN BERNARDINO, July 3.—Word was received here today that A. B. Crawford, secretary of the Searchlight-Midas Mining Company, who was badly burned last week by an explosion at the company's property, has become demented as a result of his injuries.

At the time of the accident the secretary was witnessing the tryout of a new hoist. By some mishap the gasoline tank went into fragments, and Crawford was saturated with oil over his hands and face. By presence of mind he was able to extinguish the flames himself, but not before considerable injury had resulted.

The severe shock has evidently unbalanced him, as the doctors can give no other reason for his dementia.

The assessed valuation of San Bernardino county is $36,946,300. These are the figures shown today by the compilation of the assessment rolls by County Assessor Wilson. They show a gain of over $4,000,000 over last year, with a possibility that the increase will be even more substantial after this year's assessment of the railroads is announced by the State Board of Railroad Commissioners. The Assessor's report for the principal towns in the county shows: San Bernardino, $4,-034,975; Redlands, $4,677,325; Ontario, $1,370,065; Upland, $751,015; Colton, $828,050; Chino, $1,237,470; Rialto and West Rialto, $785,100; Highland, $689,-828; Cucamonga, $415,610; Mission, $1,094,485; Etiwanda, $463,315; Cram, $413,305; Needles, $422,675.

Segregated, the assessment for the county shows: Real estate, $13,882,-970; improvements, $8,584,620; personal property, $1,989,450; moneys and credits, $145,300; total, $24,602,340, and with last year's railroad assessment added, the total reaches $36,946,300.

BITTEN BY RATTLER.

Joseph Garare, a Basque sheep herder, was severely bitten by a rattlesnake last night while trudging through the brush north of town, near the Severance ranch. He had the presence of mind to incise the wound, suck out as much of the poison as possible, and then bind a strong piece of twine about the leg, above the wound, which was inflicted on top of the instep. He walked to camp, and was brought to town in a wagon at 2 o'clock this morning. Symptoms of lockjaw have developed, and there is little chance that he can recover.

At the next meeting of the Supervisors, an appointment to the position of superintendent of the County Hospital will be made. Dr. D. C. Strong, the present incumbent, and Dr. G. R. Owen are in line for the appointment.

County Clerk Post has issued notice that no licenses are required for those desiring to fish. This notice is made necessary by constant applications, coming from all over the county, for "fishing licenses."

FIRST ANNUAL TOURNAMENT OF MILITARY BAND.

Glorious Fourth Anticipated—Concerts, Races, Parade, Fireworks and Dance Make Occasion Memorable. Mayor's Patriotic Address Precedes Business Men's Barbecue.

FULLERTON, July 3.—A grand Fourth of July celebration was given here today, it being the first annual tournament of the Fullerton Military Band, which was assisted by outside talent. The celebration was a great success, the attendance being at least 2000.

In the forenoon there was the firing of 100 guns, cannons and anvils; band concert and raising of flag; parade, bicycle, auto and horse races, and a successful balloon ascension by Miss Effie Hill. In the afternoon there were drill and contest by the Fullerton fire department; patriotic address by Mayor Coulter; band concert, fire works and social hop.

During the day there were also a number of other attractions, such as live wire performances, in a large tent, under auspices of the band.

At noon a barbecue was given by the business men.

Fullerton is proud of its military band and the people always turn out when it fathers any entertainment. The organization will give the tournament annually on July 4.

SANTA ANA.

TO PROSECUTE WATER WASTERS.

SOCIETY FILES ITS ARTICLES OF INCORPORATION.

Orange, Riverside and San Bernardino Counties Are Represented in Association—School Board Prepares for Additions to High and Grade Facilities.

SANTA ANA, July 3.—Articles of incorporation have been filed here by the Water Conservation Association, made up of representatives of San Bernardino, Riverside and Orange counties. The purpose is to spread storm waters over gravel beds and by underground storage keep it for summer use. Those who waste water by allowing wells to flow regardless of use will be prosecuted. The incorporators are H. H. Garstin of Redlands, G. M. Cooley of San Bernardino, and Kenneth MacRae of Rialto, representing San Bernardino county; W. G. Fraser, E. O. Rickard and Francis Cuttle, all of Riverside, representing Riverside county; William McLaughlin of Anaheim, M. Nisson and E. E. Keech of Santa Ana, representing Orange county.

The city school board last night gave a contract to J. C. Austin of Los Angeles for preparing architect's plans for an addition to the High School and a new domestic science and manual training school. Dennis & Farwell of Los Angeles will furnish architects' plans for two new grade schools of eight rooms each.

A deed transferring twenty acres in the duck-lands to the Los Patos Gun Club was recorded today. It bears the date of June 2. The grantor is the Sunset Developing Land and Water Company. The consideration named is $4000.

VALUABLE PRESENT.

Miss Beulah McClay, by her eighteenth birthday on Tuesday, came into possession of two valuable pieces of property in Santa Ana. One piece is the northeast corner of Third and Main streets, opposite the City Hall. The property was deeded her by her father, W. C. McClay, on March 22, 1902, and has been held in trust by her mother, Mrs. Amy E. Lucey.

G. W. Moore, manager of the Orange County Celery Growers' Association, said today that the celery is being planted and that about 3000 acres would be set out. The plants are in healthy condition, no blight having shown upon them. It takes an acre and a half to produce a carload of celery. The 3000 acres ought to produce 2000 carloads.

An interlocutory decree of divorce was given yesterday to John H. Pope, a well-known Talbert farmer, from Alice Pope. Desertion was the charge. Property interests were settled out of court.

EYES AND FOREHEAD BURNED.

Willie Brookbank, 12 years old, son of Mrs. Virginia Brookbank of Tustin, is suffering with badly burned eyes and forehead as the result of a pre-fourth celebration by himself and a playmate, this afternoon. The boys had some loose powder in an old muzzle-loading shotgun. A cap was snapped while Willie stood with his face close to the muzzle. His burns are severe, but his eyesight will not be permanently impaired.

County Assessor Scott today completed footing the year's assessments. The county made a gain of $1,946,295 over last year, this year's total being $19,-508,575.

VENTURA.

GREWSOME MAIL FOR CORONER.

HAND THAT WROTE IT IS NOW COLD IN DEATH.

County Bee Inspector Takes His Own Life in Little Hut in Casitas Pass—Ranch Foreman Severely Injured When Dragged Across Field by Frightened Horses.

VENTURA, July 3.—A grewsome letter that came in the mail to Coroner Beckley late last night led to the discovery that Al. Edmondson, county bee inspector, took his own life some time yesterday afternoon in the little hut where he lived alone in the Casitas Pass, just beyond the boundary line of Foster Memorial Park. The letter read:

"Mr. Beckley: Doubtless, before this reaches you, my spirit will have passed to the great beyond. Tell Allan and St. Fraser good-by, and forgive me if you can. You will find $20 in my pants pocket. Al. Edmondson."

Greatly puzzled, Coroner Beckley communicated with the Sheriff, and a swift trip to the Casitas in the county auto showed that Edmondson, who was a bachelor well known in town and about 60 years of age, had blown out his brains with a shotgun, the stick with which he had pushed the trigger lying broken beside the gun on the floor in front of the bed where he had killed himself. An open Bible lay on the bed beside the body. Edmondson had no relatives here. A sister is said to live somewhere in Illinois.

RANCH FOREMAN HURT.

While hitching a pair of spirited grays to a cultivator this morning, Harvey Reed, foreman of the Chrisman & Sifford bean ranch, east of town, was badly hurt. The horses became frightened before their harness was adjusted, and, starting to run, knocked Reed down and dragged man and cultivator together out across the bean field. Reed had no bones broken, but his body was bruised all over and he is thought to have sustained serious internal injuries. He was brought into town and taken to the Bard Hospital.

GET SOME MORE.

In the Superior Court yesterday Judge Clark authorized the payment of a 10 per cent. dividend to the depositors of the insolvent bank of William Collins & Sons. This makes 50 per cent. that has been paid, and there seems good prospect they will get still more before the affairs of the concern are settled. J. C. Daly, receiver for William Collins & Sons, stated to the court, in asking authorization for the payment of the dividend, that he had in his hands $40,000 in cash, enough to pay this dividend and the expenses of the receivership to date, and that the assets unrealized upon would suffice to pay 50 per cent. of the claims now pending against the bank on the part of northern creditors and still unsettled. The depositors have had two previous dividends of 20 per cent. each.

EARTHQUAKE SHOCK.

A very heavy shock of earthquake was felt in this town at 11:15 o'clock last night. So far as heard from, however, there was no damage done.

LABOR UNION FIGHTS CHILD.

YOUNGSTER AND SISTER DEFY BULLYING AGITATORS.

Lad Plays Cornet in Cafe Orchestra and Will Continue to Do So. Millionaire Gives Dinner to Business Men and Boosts Goods Roads. Chicago Loses Poet.

SAN DIEGO, July 3.—Labor unions seek to deprive 12-year-old Willie Schiller of his place in an orchestra that plays in a fashionable café. The leader, Miss Helen Schiller, is a member of the Musicians' Union. Recently she employed her brother to toot the cornet.

As soon as union agitators heard of this, notice was served on Miss Schiller that she must appear before her union and explain why she violates its rules by allowing the boy, who is ineligible to join the union, to play in her orchestra.

At a meeting of the board, Wednesday night, it is said, Miss Schiller defied the union and the café proprietor backed her up by refusing to discharge the lad. The unions now threaten to destroy the restaurant man's business, but he says he is not worried.

ROAD ENTHUSIAST.

E. W. Scripps, County Highway Commissioner, is lending his influence in support of the proposed million-and-a-quarter-dollar-bond issue in a manner that tells. Tonight, he entertained at dinner the Monday Night Club, composed of prominent business and professional men, at his country home at Miramar and made a speech in behalf of the good roads movement in this county. The club members were transported to and from the ranch in automobiles.

SANTA FE WILL HELP.

General Passenger Agent Byrne of the Santa Fé, accompanied by Superintendent Hitchcock of Los Angeles, have been escorted over a large portion of San Diego county's roads in an automobile and were shown the fine stretch of boulevard built at Point Loma by A. G. Spalding. As the Santa Fé company is a large taxpayer in this county, officials of that road are interested in the proposition to vote $1,250,000 in bonds to improve the highways. The corporation, it is said, will assist in carrying the bonds.

METHODISTS COMING.

The annual conference of the Methodist church of Southern California will be held here in September. Bishop Hughes will preside and it is expected that 500 delegates will attend.

PROSECUTOR TO WED.

Deputy District Attorney and Young Woman Illustrator to Unite Their Fortunes.

Miss Gertrude E. Mesplou, daughter of Mrs. C. C. Watkins of West Twenty-third street, will be married at noon tomorrow to Arthur L. Veich, Deputy District Attorney. The ceremony will be performed at the home of the bride's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Anslyn of No. 1620 Wall street, and will be witnessed only by relatives and a few intimate friends.

The bride is a clever and handsome young woman and has obtained considerable celebrity as a pencil illustrator and cartoonist. The groom, who is attached to the branch of the District Attorney's office at police headquarters, is a graduate of the U.S.C. law school, which conferred on him the bachelor's degree in 1897 and this year the master's degree.

BRAKKEMAN DISEMBOWELED.

Santa Fe Employee Caught by Gravel Spreader and Dragged Two Hundred Feet.

OCEANSIDE, July 3.—Charles Barringer, a brakeman on a Santa Fé gravel train, met a horrible death here this morning. He was hit by the gravel spreader and dragged for 200 feet before the engineer stopped the train.

"Boys, I'm killed," said he, as he was drawn from beneath the bar that had disemboweled him.

Drs. Nichols and Reed were called, but the man died in a few minutes.

Barringer leaves a widowed mother at San Bernardino. He had been in the employ of the Santa Fé for three years. The body will be taken to San Bernardino tonight.

DEAFNESS AND CATARRH
J. P. CLARK, 1024 SUMMIT AVE., PASADENA, says: "I have been a victim of chronic catarrh for six (6) years, with all the usual symptoms. It affected my right ear until I COULD NOT HEAR OUT OF IT. It would also ring and roar. This was my condition when I began Drs. Shores & Shores' treatment two (2) months ago. The change in my condition has been wonderful. I can now hear good out of my deaf ear, and am better in every way, and I take great pleasure in recommending Drs. Shores to all deaf sufferers. My occupation is lineman for the Pasadena Electric Co. Anyone doubting this testimonial is at perfect liberty to call on me and I will gladly tell them what Drs. Shores & Shores have done for me.
(Signed) "J. P. CLARK."

We Treat and Cure

Strictly Reliable
If you suffer from CATARRH or CHRONIC disease, just as sure as you read these lines, just as sure will DRS. SHORES & SHORES cure you IF YOU ONLY TRY (except, of course, you, by neglect or improper treatment, have allowed your disease to become incurable). DRS. SHORES are experts in treatment and cure of Deafness, Catarrh and all forms of Nervous, Private and Complicated Chronic Diseases. WRITE IF YOU LIVE OUT OF TOWN.

DEAFNESS, OTITIS, RINGING NOISES AND CHRONIC CATARRH.
Harvey W. Bell, 334 East 54th st., Los Angeles, says: "I have had catarrh for six or seven years, affecting my ears, nose and throat. My left ear got so bad I could not hear an ordinary conversation out of it, and it discharged all the time and I had ringing noises in my ears. My nose would also stop up until I could not breathe through it. Would also hawk and spit, especially in the morning. This was my condition when I came to Drs. Shores & Shores just two months ago. In two weeks this discharge from my ear stopped and the ringing in my ears had ceased; my LOST HEARING HAS BEEN RESTORED. I now breathe good through my nose, and my catarrh is better in every way. I had tried other treatments, without benefit. Drs. Shores' treatment helped me from the first, and I feel that the afflicted with catarrh, deafness and ringing in the ears ought to know about Drs. Shores' great skill, for they have done wonders for me. Any one doubting this testimonial is at perfect liberty to call on me, and I will gladly verify the truthfulness of this testimonial.
(Signed) "HARVEY W. BELL."

BREVITIES.

To "Liner" Advertisers: Dating from June 1st, classified advertising in the Times will be charged by the word at the present established rate of 1c per word in the daily issue and 1½c Sunday. Close calculations covering a period of several months develop the fact that the average number of words to the line are a fraction over seven. This basis for charge, therefore, will prevail after June 1st. Cash "want" advertising has always been calculated by the word, and this regulation will not change the manner of handling it. The present "want" ad rate has been in effect, for many years, though the circulation of the paper now more than 50,000 daily and 80,000 Sundays, has trebled during this period. No paper in the United States, rate considered, compares with The Times in "want" ad service. The Times-Mirror Company.

Remember the slogan: "Buy and Boost Home Products." For daily references, see page 11, Part II, of The Times, containing list of wide-awake manufacturers, under the heading "Made in Southern California." You will find there are manufacturers of necessities and luxuries here—manufacturers of things to eat and drink—things for the home, the factory, the office and the farm. Buy them! Try them! There are none better. Buy and Boost, and keep your money at home where it will do you and yours the most good!

FERTILE SAN JOAQUIN.

Exhibition of Stereopticon Views Attracts Audiences to Times Branch Office.

During these warm evenings nothing could be more refreshing than the charming views of rushing cataracts on the Kings River, and it is likely that this feeling leads many persons to visit the free exhibition of the San Joaquin Valley Promotion Committee, given each evening in the Times branch office, No. 521 South Spring street.

Again last night an audience sat and drank in the beauties of the magnificent valley, and its wild and enticing environs. The pictures are so large and lifelike, that one can look at them over and over, and never tire of them any more than he tires of a beautiful landscape in reality. It is easy to sit there in the cool, and imagine yourself seated under the trees of the San Joaquin, or fishing for trout in the limpid waters of the Kings River.

The exhibitions are given each evening at 8 o'clock, and are absolutely free to the public.

THIS WOOER ARDENT.

When the Woman Refuses to Receive His Attentions He Kicks Down Her Door.

Former Policeman E. R. Kincaid paid a fine of $20 for disturbing the peace and a fine of $3 for drunkenness in Police Justice Rose's court yesterday. The complaining witness was Mrs. Myrtle Robinson of No. 652 South Spring.

She testified that Kincaid had been forcing his attentions upon her and that she was compelled to leave the city to avoid him. She returned Friday. That night Kincaid went to her apartments, she testified, and when she refused to see him he kicked down the door. The woman summoned an officer who placed the former bluecoat under arrest.

H. M. ACKERLY DIES.

He was of lovable nature, and had a host of friends. He leaves behind a young son. He was an ardent Christian Scientist.

What a pleasure it would be if we now might listen to Liszt or Rubinstein! But their art is lost to posterity.

Thanks to the marvelous WELTE-MIGNON the playing of the great pianists of today is perpetuated and preserved for the enjoyment of future generations.

Lhevinne, Paderewski, Hofmann, Bloomfield-Zeisler, and every other living pianist of note plays for the WELTE-MIGNON. Delicate appliances register and retain the playing with all the varying characteristics, all the individual qualities of interpretation, tone and touch peculiar to each performer. From the original records so produced are made perforated music rolls which, when adjusted to the WELTE-MIGNON, bring to your own home the true, exquisite art of the masters of the pianoforte.

The WELTE-MIGNON should not be confused with the ordinary player-piano; there is no similarity at any point. The WELTE-MIGNON operates electrically, embracing all the physical exertion required.

The WELTE-MIGNON is priced $1500 to $2250. Hear the WELTE-MIGNON Tuesday. Free recitals from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Take elevator to fourth floor.

FULL-BLOWN DELIGHTS.

Amusement Palaces and Mammoth Bath-houses Line Sunny Shore of Southern California's Summer Playground.

LOS ANGELES will not win the entire affection of the Elk hordes, the advance guard of which is already arriving. This city will have to share the love of the good fellows with the beaches, whose call at this time of the year is irresistible. No matter how high seaside rents may go, everybody who can possibly get within sound of the breakers is there now or soon will be.

Not alone are they Angelenos down by the shore line. That wondrous stretch of coast from the Malibu Ranch to Laguna Point is the summer playground of a score of Southern California cities. On its sandy shores and in its cool cañon retreats are the happy holiday homes of the people of four counties.

Flashing there in the summer sun are the glittering towers of amusement palaces and bathing houses designed to make life merry during the three most delightful months of the year. Resorts are the means to but one end—joy. Glad days by the ocean color men's lives and all the seaside cities put forward their best endeavor to make the vacation season one of bliss.

Of course most people go down to the shore to be amused. By the sea they can be merry with a great deal less self-consciousness than in town. Their mood is contained in the expression: "Flower of the rose, if I've been merry, what matter who knows?" Moreover, although merry temptations are all about them they can, away from the crowded phantasmagoria of city life, find time to feast their eyes on scenes of splendor and of charm.

But, above all things, they want to be somewhere where they need not strike off all the chains of slavery which bind them to the conventional. They need something which reminds them of Broadway and Spring street. Therefore, these amusement palaces which stud the shore from Santa Monica to Newport Beach; therefore, these great bath-houses where, in the water no less than on the petrolithic, flighty man can flirt and rejoice in the thousand vagaries of woman. He finds "there are flashes struck from midnights, there are fire flames noon days kindle," and he drinks in joy along with the pure ozone with its salt of health and its Oriental breath.

Venice, floating on a noble tide; Santa Monica, the young mother of all the beaches; Ocean Park, smart and intensely modern; Redondo, with its western glitter toned down by an old-world atmosphere; Long Beach, distinctly up to date and magnetic; Balboa and Newport, quietly alluring; and Avalon, where life is all a carnival—each one of these beaches has its attractions that no other has. One can ring the changes of joyous Southern California life from Rocky Point on the south to where the Malibu ranch skirts the mystic mountains. These seaside resorts in the land of outdoors provide life and laughter, full-blown delight amid a variegated maze of hill and ocean.

For the gamesome crowd new schemes of pleasure are planned yearly at all these resorts, which are within a short ride by trolley car of Los Angeles. The unanimous idea along this magic strand is that revel calls and laughter reigns. Of the various attractions offered to the holiday crowds, among whom thousands of visiting Elks will soon be numbered, The Times correspondents at the various resorts write as subjoined:

MARVELOUS TRANSPORTATION.

AVALON, July 3.—Marvelous have been the advancements here since the Freeholders' Improvement Association took charge of the streets recently abandoned by the County of Los Angeles. Scarcely three months have lapsed since the petition of the property owners was passed by the Supervisors and nearly $300,000 has been expended by private property owners, The Improvement Association and the owners of the island. The future prospects of the island as a winter and summer resort never were brighter.

The transformation is so marvelous that it is a constant wonder to old-time visitors to the "Garden of the Pacific." A glad hand welcomes all guests. A hearty invitation is extended to pleasure-seekers to participate in every form of wholesome enjoyment. The strife and discord of the past are gone.

Chief among the improvements which have taken place recently is the $30,000 bathhouse erected at the foot of Merillo avenue. Designed in the modified Colonial style of architecture the structure is built on piles and stands well out into the water covering one acre of space. This gives the entire bay the aspect of one monstrous plunge bath. Here, also, have been erected equipments for aquatic sport. Two wide passages leading from the north and south sides of the building form an entrance. The interior is artistically decorated, as also are the passages, rest rooms and the entrances. Two hundred dressing-rooms have been

COMING EARLY TO BEAT RUSH.

First Big Loads of Visitors in from the East.

Regular Trains Jammed With Sightseers' Vanguard.

Elks' Committees Hustling to Complete Plans.

Though the first special trains of the Elks are not due to reach Los Angeles before next Friday, there was a tremendous arrival of visitors yesterday on the regular incoming trains of the Santa Fé, Southern Pacific and Salt Lake lines. Hundreds of non-members of the order applied for accommodations through the hotel bureau at Elks' headquarters, Spring and Franklin streets. Among the number were many members of the order, with credentials, who wished to register. Registration, however, will not start until next Wednesday.

Railroad passenger agents reported last evening that westbound trains arriving during the day had been jammed—the rush being greater than at the height of the winter season.

Reduced rates for the Los Angeles celebration went into effect in the East on June 25, but the real hurry to the Coast did not start for several days, as yesterday's arrivals indicated. Many parties that started early dallied along the line, visiting Salt Lake, San Francisco, the Grand Cañon and other points of interest.

MANY LEAVE EAST TODAY.

Some of the largest special trains will leave the East today and tomorrow. These will carry members of the largest lodges, together with many ladies.

Those who are coming in advance are mostly in scattered groups. There are a few Elks among them, but for the greater part they are sightseers, and they were keen enough to know that they would have less difficulty in finding hotel accommodations now than a week later.

Miss L. L. Whitlock, who is in charge of the hotel and registration bureaus, has booked rooms for several thousand who had the foresight to make their arrangements before leaving home. Immediately upon arrival

CHARGE DEATH TO CHAUFFEUR.

Auto Driver Is Accused of Manslaughter.

Mysterious Black Car Is Not Discovered.

M. C. Abrams, chauffeur for Nash & Fenimore, automobile dealers, driver of the automobile which ran down and killed Isaac L. Lowman at Seventh and Alvarado streets, Friday night, must answer to the charge of manslaughter.

Chauffeur M. C. Abrams, driver of the car which killed Lowman Friday night.

Dr. Z. Levin, who was walking with Isaac L. Lowman when the latter was struck and instantly killed by an automobile.

At the Coroner's inquest yesterday afternoon at Bresee Bros.', the jury returned a verdict that Lowman came to his death from "a fracture of the skull caused by being struck by an automobile driven by one M. C. Abrams and that said driver was driving at an excessive rate of speed, on the wrong side of the street, that no warning was given and that said driver by reason of these facts be held to answer for criminal negligence." The jury was composed of Frank B. Harbert, foreman, Clarence A. Blake, S. S. McKenney, J. Will Dick, F. H. Kreader and George L. Bannister.

LODGE MANSLAUGHTER CHARGE.

Abrams, who attended the inquest in custody of a police detective and in company with his attorney, G. W. Pearson, was immediately remanded to the Central Police Station and a charge of manslaughter was lodged against him. No attempt was made to procure bail. A complaint on the manslaughter charge will be asked of the District Attorney's office Tuesday morning.

During the entire inquisition Abrams sat silently by his attorney, his face mirroring his grief. He is a young man and single. When he was informed of the seriousness of the jury's verdict he stated simply:

"I wish it had been I that was killed instead of Mr. Lowman. The machine which passed my car raised such a cloud of dust that I could not see. No one can regret the accident more than I do."

Abrams informed Coroner Hartwell after a number of witnesses were examined that he was willing to take the stand and testify, but his counsel interposed and refused to let his client be examined.

MYSTERIOUS BLACK CAR.

Throughout the inquisition a mysterious "small black car, equipped with a top and with several lady passengers, traveling at a terrific rate of speed," played a prominent part in the evidence of the witnesses. It is the car which Abrams says raised the dust cloud through which he was unable to see and through which he sent his machine and ran Lowman down.

Police officers, the Coroner and counsel for Abrams all declare they have made every effort to identify the car and its driver but have been unable to do so, further than an opinion that it was a Franklin. Most of the evidence hinges about this mysterious auto.

The evidence showed conclusively that Abrams was driving his machine at a rate estimated from twenty to forty miles an hour; that he was driving on the wrong side of the street, that he gave no warning "honk" as he crossed Alvarado and Seventh streets, that he passed the crossing with a rush at about the same time the "mysterious" car passed, that Abram's machine struck Lowman, carried the body about 100 feet and instantly killed the merchant. On other points of testimony the statements of witnesses differ.

Leo M. Simmons, a nephew of Lowman, was the first witness called and identified the remains. Dr. Edwin Janss of No. 811 Beacon street testified that shortly before 9 o'clock he and his chauffeur, Theodore Tezleff, left the garage at his home to drive to a garage on West Seventh street.

ABRAMS FOLLOWING.

Abrams, also driving a Lozier, and accompanied by Harry A. Miller, a mechanic, had visited Tezleff and departed in his machine about thirty seconds after Janss' and for the same destination. Janss testified that he knew Abrams was following him but did not know at what distance.

When Janss' machine reached Lake street he says an automobile passed him at high speed. A few seconds later he heard a shout and Abrams drove up behind him and said that he had hit a man. Janss and Abrams both turned their machines and drove back to where Lowman's body was lying.

Janss stated that he did not at any time drive faster than twenty miles an hour after leaving his home and that if Abrams had driven much faster his machine would have been overtaken. He says both machines were equipped identically and that with the brakes used a car traveling twenty miles and hour could be brought to a stop within a few feet.

It was then testified by Janss that while he was bringing Abrams to the Police Station in his machine that Abrams said that a car traveling at terrific speed had crossed in front of him; that he was compelled to turn his car aside, nearly went into the ditch and that while he was making the swerve through the cloud of dust raised by the passing auto that he struck a man.

Harry A. Miller, who was in the seat with Abrams when the accident occurred, stated that the machine was running about twenty miles an hour, but that he did not see the collision because he had his hands to his eyes at the time to protect them from the dust cloud which had been raised by the passing of the "mysterious car."

He testified that this car dashed past and cut directly in front of their machine and that Abrams was compelled to swerve to the south side of the street to avoid a collision. If he had turned to the right he said a collision with a street car would have resulted.

NO DUST GOGGLES.

Miller says that he was first made aware of an accident by a jar of the machine and the cry of Abrams: "I think I have killed a man." He says Abrams immediately shut down the machine but that he advised him to drive on and catch Dr. Janss who was known to be ahead. Miller stated that Abrams had given no warning "toot" or whistle. On a question from a juryman he stated that it would have been the proper thing to do. He testified that Abrams was not wearing dust goggles.

Dr. Z. Levin told the story of attempting to cross the street with Lowman, how he saw two autos approaching west on Seventh street, how he thought the cars were abreast and were racing. He says he shouted a warning to Lowman and then made a jump for his life for the sidewalk, and fell. When he reached his feet he saw the body of Lowman lying in the street.

Justus W. Taylor, a flower vendor at the corner where the accident occurred, testified that he saw Levin and Lowman start to cross the street; that he saw two autos approaching, one of which was on the wrong side of the street and was traveling at forty miles or more an hour. He testified he saw this car hit Lowman and then could see no more for dust. He declared he did not see a street car at the corner.

HEARD SOUND OF BRAKES.

R. C. Duke, a machinist, was sitting near the window of his room in the apartment house at No. 2102½ West Seventh street. He says that he saw Levin and Lowman start across the street, draw back as an automobile passed and then started to cross the street again. Just as they crossed the car tracks an automobile traveling at a tremendous pace whizzed by but missed the two men. (This was the mysterious auto.) The next second Abram's car flashed on to the crossing. Duke said he heard the sound of brakes but did not know on which of the two cars they were applied. The second car was going the slower of the two.

The next instant he saw the second car hit one of the men crossing the street, and then lost view of the car and men because of the dust. He says the second car was traveling fast, not as fast as the first car, and they passed the crossing 100 feet apart.

Theodore Tezleff, chauffeur for Janss, stated his belief that the "mysterious car" was a Franklin, but it was too dark to see the number of occupants when they passed his machine. The remainder of his testimony was the same as that of Janss.

J. L. Boyle of No. 607 Carondelet street was standing at the corner, and saw the two men crossing the street, saw the two cars as they approached, and saw the collision. He says the cars were traveling forty or forty-five miles an hour, and he thought they were racing. He couldn't tell which of the cars hit Lowman.

A number of other wisnesses testified to the terrific speed at which the two cars passed the street intersections. Invariably the testimony was that Abram was driving on the wrong side of the street.

FUNERAL TODAY.

The funeral of Lowman will be held at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon in the undertaking parlors of Bresee Brothers. It will be strictly private, and services will be according to the Jewish religion, conducted by Rabbi Hecht. Interment will be made in the Jewish Cemetery on Boyle Heights.

NEW ENGLANDERS' FOURTH.

The celebration of the New England Society of Southern California will begin in Eastlake Park at 9:30 o'clock a.m., with a flag raising, when Miss Violet McMartin will sing "The Star Spangled Banner." Following the official programme, as given under the auspices of the municipal committee, the New Englanders will enjoy their fourth annual picnic. All former residents of New England, whether members of the society or not, are invited to participate, and descendants of members of the Mayflower are requested to make themselves known.

Miss Faith Chevaillier will leave this week for a six months visit abroad, going on an auto tour of a month, and also visiting two friends of her childhood in Boston now living abroad. The problems of sociology and the new psychology she hopes to study in Germany, France and England.

Patriotic Celebrations in Four City Parks.

Scottish Sports to Be One of the Features.

The movement for a "safe and sane" Fourth of July celebration on Monday, July 5, has borne fruit in a series of splendid programmes, prepared for four of the city parks, under the auspices of the municipal Fourth of July committee. To inspire a deeper patriotism and love for the flag among the children of the city, the committee has arranged to make a free distribution of flags at Central Park, Eastlake Park, Hollenbeck Park and Sycamore Grove. At the last-named park the exercises will be under the auspices of the Grand Army of the Republic, but the municipal committee will provide a band in the morning and flags for distribution to the children.

The City Playground Commission has also arranged for celebrations at the several municipal playgrounds, with patriotic addresses and athletic competitions for prizes.

The municipal Committee of Decoration, A. W. Skinner, Irving J. Mitchell and John G. Morley, has already completed its task of decorating the stands in the parks, and everything is in readiness for an early start on Monday. It is the request of the committee that citizens generally display the flag both today and tomorrow.

The character of the entertainment offered by the committee at these several places is notice to the public that this is to be a celebration with the true ring, and at any one of the four parks the highest type of patriotism will be expounded by men well known among leading citizens of Los Angeles.

CENTRAL PARK.

The committee in charge of the programme at Central Park is composed of M. C. Neuner, R. Plant and Charles F. Edson. The programme, which will begin at 10 o'clock a.m., follows: March, by Moore's concert band; free distribution of flags to children; "America," by the band; invocation, Rabbi S. Hecht; "Star Spangled Banner," Miss Maybelle Clark and school children; during the singing the flag will be raised by the color guard of the G.A.R.; reading Declaration of Independence, Prof. L. A. Handley; oration, Dr. Hugh K. Walker; the band will play a number of times in the course of the exercises.

EASTLAKE PARK.

The programme at Eastlake Park will also begin at 10 o'clock a.m., under the supervision of a committee composed of Frank S. Forbes, F. W. Blanchard and Dana W. Bartlett. The music will be by the Redondo band; invocation, Rev. Dana W. Bartlett; reading Declaration of Independence, H. O. Wheeler, Jr.; "The Sword of Bunker Hill," Charles Lamb; recitation, Dr. Ruth Sanderson; oration, "An Expansive Patriotism," Hon. Waldo M. York; address, "American Aggressiveness," Edward A. Regan; "The Star Spangled Banner," Violet McMartin, during the singing of which a flag will be raised by the G.A.R.; free distribution of flags to children.

HOLLENBECK PARK.

The programme at Hollenbeck Park will begin at 2 o'clock p.m. The committee in charge is composed of George W. Lyons, W. J. Bryant and Dr. L. W. Swartout, and in addition to the platform meeting they have provided a number of athletic events to follow. Programme: Invocation, Rev. J. N. Liscomb; Declaration of Independence will be read by Prof. J. H. Francis; "The Star Spangled Banner," Miss Nuncie Bittman; oration, Dr. J. L. Pitner; flag-raising and free distribution of flags to children. The music will be by the Greater Los Angeles Band.

The athletic events consist of foot races, sack races, tub race and a one-mile race for boys under 16; a baby show and a pie-eating contest. A large number of prizes are offered for the winners of first, second and third place.

AT CITY PLAYGROUNDS.

Superintendent Charles Lamb gives notice of three celebrations at the city playgrounds, where no explosives will be allowed, and hence a desirable place to take small children. Children from the Orphans' Home and other institutions will be guests. There will be music and games and athletic events for prizes. The grounds will be open all day, but the programmes will be presented at 2:30 o'clock p.m.

At Playground No. 1, Violet street, an oration will be delivered by Grove L. Walter; at Playground No. 2, Echo Park, Rev. John H. Cooper will speak; at Playground No. 3, Recreation Center, the oration will be by Dr. W. A. Lamb.

CIVIL WAR VETERANS.

The Grand Army of the Republic and allied patriotic societies will gather at Sycamore Grove. An elaborate programme has been prepared, and a basket lunch will be served at 12 o'clock. The committee in charge, of which A. C. Shafer is chairman, extends a cordial invitation to all veterans, and to all affiliated organizations to take part in the celebration.

Col. J. J. Steadman will preside at the platform meeting at 2 o'clock p.m., when patriotic songs will be sung under the leadership of J. H. Henry. Dr. George Somers will read the Declaration of Independence; Prof. Hugo Kirchhoffer will sing "The Sword of Bunker Hill;" addresses will be delivered by Hon. D. K. Trask, Maj. H. T. Lee and Col. Gilbert D. Munson.

The Greater Los Angeles Band will give a concert under the great sycamore trees at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, which will be a musical treat for those who go to the park early in the day. A free distribution of flags will be made to children.

WELSH SOCIETIES PICNIC.

The Welsh-Americans will hold a reunion and picnic at Sycamore Grove, in which the Los Angeles society will be joined by those of Pasadena and other places. A programme of games, music and of typical Welsh oratory will make things interesting, and the Cambrians are looking forward to the greatest reunion they have yet had about here.

Short addresses will be delivered by Maj. E. R. Powell, Rev. D. Lloyd Jenkins and others, and the songs in the Welsh language will be a feature of the day, as they always are. There will also be songs in English as well as Welsh, both forenoon and afternoon.

THE CALEDONIAN CLUB

MONDAY'S EVENTS.

Central Park—Patriotic celebration, 10 o'clock a.m.

Eastlake Park—Patriotic celebration, 10 o'clock a.m.; Kewanee-Los Angeles Society, annual picnic; New England Society of Southern California, annual picnic; Arizona picnic.

Sycamore Grove — Patriotic celebration, 2 o'clock p.m., under auspices of G.A.R.; Welsh-American reunion and picnic.

Hollenbeck Park — Patriotic celebration, 2 o'clock p.m., followed by athletic sports.

City Playgrounds, Violet street, Echo Park, Holly street—Celebration and games at 2:30 o'clock p.m.

The Scottish clans will gather at the Indian Crafts Exhibition Park early in the day from various parts of Southern California. Sports peculiar to Scotland are particularly suited to California and there will be a revival of "tossing the caber." This consists in tossing a good-sized tree as far as you may. Heavyweights Alex McDonald of Coalinga and Dave Reid of Globe, Ariz., are on the ground to take a hand, and it is predicted by the local Welshmen that the winning of the medals will be no soft snap this year. There will be a revival of "pitching quoits," in which some well known experts will take a hand. There will also be Highland costume competition, Highland dancing and bagpipe playing. The nine pipers of the Caledonian Pipe Band, in their kilts and plaids and Tartan hose, will make a picturesque show, and much noise. There will be running, jumping, putting the stone, throwing the hammer, and other feats.

An orchestra will provide music for dancing from 5 to 8 o'clock p.m., and refreshments will be served all day. Arrangements have been perfected for the accommodation of a large crowd.

KEWANEE-LOS ANGELES.

Former residents of Kewanee, Ill., who have banded themselves together under the name of the Kewanee-Los Angeles Society, will hold their third annual picnic in Eastlake Park. There are between 300 and 400 people now living in this city from Kewanee and vicinity, and they anticipate a pleasant reunion. The officers are J. G. Ingham, president; Charles C. Porter, vice-president; Mrs. A. C. Radford, secretary; Mrs. Ora Palmer, treasurer.

[AUTHORIZED ANNOUNCEMENT.]

PASADENA TELEPHONE CONTROVERSY.

The controversy, now under way, between the Sunset (Pacific) Telephone Company, and the city of Pasadena, is further explained to the public by the following letter addressed to Mayor Earley:

June 30th, 1909.

Hon. Thomas Earley, Mayor, Pasadena, Cal.—Dear Sir: Noting your kind letter of the 16th inst., in which you speak of attending an argument before Judge Bordwell concerning the conditions with which the telephone company shall comply on an appeal of its case against the city of Pasadena, and for which I am greatly obliged:

I am surprised by your statement that "There was a good deal of vindictiveness shown between the attorneys" on that hearing, because I had always heard Mr. Pillsbury and Mr. Sutro speak well and kindly of Mr. Wood, your City Attorney, and supposed the litigation was being carried on in a friendly spirit, and if any feeling has arisen I assume it must have been caused by the very prompt and unexpected measures taken by the city to put the company out of business as soon as the decision was made, and without giving it any chance to say what it was willing to do. If you had notified me at that time of the demands made by the city, I would have been disposed to agree to almost anything which you thought should reasonably be done while the case is pending in the higher court, but as about twenty-five hundred of our telephones were put out of service within an hour after the judge rendered his decision, to the great inconvenience of subscribers, the attorneys for the company evidently concluded that the only way to obtain relief was to apply to the court, and I understand that the judge has since made an order restoring the injunction during the appeal, but upon the condition that the company give a bond and other satisfactory security to protect the city, which it is ready to do. Now, if a chance had been given, I would have consented at once to do anything which the judge thought proper for the protection of the city, and I understand that the attorneys for the company have always been of this disposition. In this connection I may say that the company has always paid all taxes and licenses demanded by the city, and complied with all its police regulations, giving it a considerable free telephone service, besides giving to the city the free use of the poles and the underground conduits of the telephone company for carrying the city's police and fire alarm wires, and the municipal lighting wires. I am told lately that the assessment of its property in the city has been raised something like $40,000 this year, and the increased tax upon this new valuation will be paid. When, in addition to these ordinary taxes, licenses and privileges, the city demands a yearly rental of $1.50 on each pole, you can see it becomes a very serious question, as a like rental on all its poles in the State would amount to more than half a million dollars annually, and if the company were obliged to pay the same, it would be compelled to increase its rates or go out of business. I do not think the officials of Pasadena should complain if the company asks to have this matter of pole rental settled in the higher courts. The same thing may be said about taking out a franchise. Some of the courts have already decided that the company is not required to apply for a franchise in a city like Pasadena. We want that question settled, and if it is finally decided against the company, we will take a franchise or get out of the city, and we will have these issues decided as soon as possible.

I am as anxious as yourself that all differences between the company and the city should be fairly adjusted in a friendly spirit, and in the meantime the company will do all the judge has directed, for I am anxious to be at peace and on good terms with every place where the company operates.

It seems to me you were a little previous in destroying part of our plant before giving the company a chance to comply with your demands, but I shall cherish no unfriendly feeling on that account, and be glad to consider any suggestions which may be made concerning the situation.

As there seems to be a good deal of misunderstanding by the public as to the true position of the company in these matters, I will take this opportunity to inform them by publishing this letter.

Very respectfully,

[Signed] E. C. BRADLEY,

Vice-Prest. and Gen'l Mgr.

ELKS COMING EARLY.

these people will be assigned to quarters that have been engaged for them.

PUBLIC OPENING.

It is planned now to open the general headquarters on North Spring street Tuesday evening for inspection by the public. The interior and exterior decorations are mostly in place, and all other arrangements for the care of the visitors will be complete by that time.

The emergency hospital and ladies' rest room on the second floor will be equipped tomorrow, and on the same floor a Japanese tea garden—decided upon only a few days ago—is undergoing the finishing touches at the hands of the decorators. Japanese girls will serve tea. The exterior of the building will blaze with hundreds of colored lamps at night, the central piece being an illuminated design typica of Los Angeles Lodge No. 99. Bunting, flags, streamers, full-sized elks and elks' heads of papier mache, together with other ornaments, making a beautiful picture.

Tons of palm fronds and other greenery are used inside the building, which promises to be one of the coolest places in the city during the week of the celebration.

Scores of novel decorations are planned for the larger buildings downtown, and many already have been put in place; others will not be placed until the last possible minute, in order that the colors may not fade in the bright sunlight.

LIVE ELKS AT HOTEL.

Two of the largest elks that could be found after a thorough search of the various public zoos of the State have been purchased by the management of the Alexandria Hotel from the Park Commission of San Francisco and will be exhibited as a part of a decoration scheme over the porte cochere at the Fifth-street entrance of the hotel.

The elks will leave San Francisco in a private car Wednesday of this week and will arrive in Los Angeles Thursday night. They will be immediately placed in a wire screen cage that has been fitted up as a miniature garden and two caretakers will be placed in charge, one by night and one by day.

The hotel company will present the elks later to the city of Los Angeles, for one of the larger public parks.

The elks are tame, but their care while in the big cage will worry the hotel management. Joseph Reichl, assistant manager of the hotel, has prepared a menu for the animals that will make their eyes bulge.

Since the purchase of the elks by the Alexandria, the San Francisco park keepers have designated them as "Mr. and Mrs. Alexandria," and as such they will be known while on exhibition, and probably after being turned over to the city.

BADGES ARRIVE.

A big shipment of badges was received at Elks' headquarters yesterday. Twenty-five thousand are in the official design for the convention—a bronze plate showing a bear, the familiar clock face, and the head of an elk. Pendant from this is an enameled California poppy, in natural color, with a miniature cluster of oranges protruding.

On the upper part of the badge, for members of the local lodge, in gold, is a representation of San Gabriel Mission. Pendant from this, on a gunmetal plate, is the figure of a bear and of an elk's head.

A large number of fancy belt buckles, showing the bear, elk and other figures, will be presented to visiting ladies. There will be many badges for local members, to be exchanged with visiting brethren for such as they may bring. Handsome badges also have been prepared for officers of the Grand Lodge, and there will be several hundred press badges.

BIG TRADES IN SIGHT.

Indications are that the exchange of badges at Los Angeles will be the greatest ever known at a similar gathering. A big supply of the "traders" has been received for sale among local members, but it is believed now that there will not be enough to go around.

All visiting Elks and the ladies of their parties who carry proper credentials will be handed, upon registration, envelopes containing badges, programmes and books of coupons good for the various forms of entertainment provided.

Harry Harrington, who is head of the Automobile Committee, with headquarters in the Douglas building, still seeks machines to be used for a short time each day during the grand rush of arrival in conveying visiting ladies from the railroad stations to their hotels. Many autos are pledged, but scores more are needed.

INSURANCE WORLD.

The Security Mutual Life maintains a total abstinence department, giving the members of that class the benefit of any improvements in persistency and mortality, etc. The company reports that on 5000 policies in the department the death claims paid have been thirty-four, amounting to $108,950. The ratio of total abstinence business to the total insurance written since the opening of the special department is 18 per cent. but the terminations through death, surrender and lapses have been 21 per cent. less than has been experienced in the general class.

The Aetna Indemnity Company of Hartford proposes to increase its capital stock from $250,000 to $350,000, the new shares to be issued at not less than 110 per cent. of their par value.

The stockholders of the Imperial Fire Insurance Company of Denver, at a special meeting voted unanimously to increase the capital of the company from $200,000 to $250,000. When the additional funds have been paid in the assets of the company will approximate $500,000, and it is confidently expected that the prestige and business of the company will be materially improved. The additional 500 shares are offered to the present stockholders in preference to outside investors at $160.

The Great Western Life Insurance Company of Omaha has had its license to do business in Alabama revoked because of a controversy that began previous to the reorganization of the company last August. A resident of Alabama had a policy containing the usual clause that if the insured took his own life within a year after taking the insurance the policy was forfeited. The heirs of a suicide brought suit to recover in the State court, and the insurance company had the case transferred to the Federal court. There is a law in Alabama prohibiting insurance companies from taking such action, and the license was revoked under the provisions of this law. The Federal court has declared the law unconstitutional, but pending the hearing of an appeal the law remains in force.

The Wisconsin Commissioner of Insurance has ruled that a commission may not lawfully be paid to an agent or other employé of an insurance company on a policy issued to such persons, and that a discount for cash may not be lawfully allowed to any person taking out a policy. A change of rate and a return of premium may be made in case of a decrease of hazard, is another ruling. Both rulings are made in response to inquiries from a Milwaukee fire insurance company, but Mr. Beedle says they apply to life as well as fire insurance companies.

ESCONDIDO.

ASKS FRANCHISE FOR LIGHTING.

COLTON MAN'S PROPOSITION IS FINDING FAVOR.

Wants to Establish Thirty-Thousand-Dollar Plant—Scheme Indorsed at Mass Meeting of Business Men. Will Cause Abandonment of Water Company's Plan.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

ESCONDIDO, July 3.—At the meeting of the Trustees, Tuesday evening, Seth Hartley, former owner of the Colton Gas Company, will ask for a franchise for installing and operating an electric light plant here. A mass meeting of business men yesterday gave his proposition unanimous indorsement. He proposes to establish a 200-kilowatt generating plant, operated by steam power, developed from crude oil, with six miles of wiring. The estimated cost is $30,000.

The only thing that Hartley asks is the granting of the franchise, for which he agrees to bid enough to cover the expense of city advertising, and the signing up at the start of at least 200 consumers, who will agree for a term of three years to buy their light from him. The minimum price per month for houses is to be $1.50.

If the proposition carries, the directors of the mutual water company will abandon the long discussed plan of developing electric power for lighting and heating purposes from the reservoir waterfall.

BOYS' DEATH ACCIDENTAL.

The Coroner's jury yesterday found that Johnnie Atkins, son of Oscar E. Atkins, formerly a drayman here, was killed by a gunshot wound and that the gun had been accidentally discharged as the lad was taking it from the buggy upon his return to his home in Gopher Cañon, thirteen miles north of Escondido. The funeral was held today, Rev. J. W. Sherwood of San Marcos, officiating.

arranged so that they overlook the bay. Hot and cold fresh and salt-water baths are located on the west side. A miniature roof-garden is one of the most pleasing attractions to the building.

The Catalina Band is another attraction. It consists of thirty pieces. Seated in the Greek amphitheater in the twilight, listening to strains from productions of Beethoven, Wagner and more recent composers, an evening can be spent in sublime enjoyment. An entrance to this substantial open-air structure has been lately made through a beautiful park at the south end of Crescent avenue. The theater itself is a natural cut in the hillside, where to the right of the bandstand access to the summit may be made by an elevated railroad. The seating capacity is 4000.

Second to none are the boating facilities of Catalina. For six months during the summer season the channel and the surrounding seas oftentimes present the tranquility of a lake. A new boating wharf, covered with an awning, is now the pride of all boatmen and anglers. Every department in this industry is given its proper place at floats provided for the convenience of visitors. Rowboats are segregated from powerboats and the fishing launch owners are permitted to use only floats provided for their benefits.

Crescent avenue, which is the principal right of way to every attraction, has undergone many improvements. Twenty-six clusters of lights have been placed at intervals along the promenade. With this illumination a number of artistic pagodas are lighted. Back of the No. 2 wharf is located the pavilion where from 9 o'clock to 12 o'clock each evening, except Sunday, dancing is permitted. Cool ocean breezes make this an ideal attraction.

Additional prizes and fishing inducements are offered this year to anglers using light tackle. The membership of the Catalina Three-Six Club is rapidly increasing. Inducements in separate classes are offered to anglers catching fish at San Clemente. A school of blue fin tuna has been reported after an absence of six years.

Catalina Golf Club links have been pronounced by experts to be one of the most difficult west of the Rockies. The nine-hole record was recently made in 22 strokes, the longest drive in the tournament being 300 yards. A series of tournaments are planned for July 6, 7 and 8. Back of the golf links is a ten-acre natural park and free camping. The outskirts are lighted by electricity. At the extreme corner of this romantic garden stands one of the largest elder trees in existence. Rustic seats have recently been placed under the trees and at various intervals in the park.

The literary, social and religious advantages have never been properly appreciated at Avalon during the past years, but this season the churches are making splendid efforts to give musical and inspiring services.

PERMANENT ADDITION.

CONCRETE PIER POPULAR.

OCEAN PARK, July 3.—Of attractions at this beach which are new, the reinforced concrete pier now in course of construction at the foot of Marine street, will appeal strongly, particularly to the angling fraternity.

It is to have a length of only about 600 feet, but every foot of it will on a lively day, accommodate some hopeful Walton. This is one of the permanent additions to the beach's attractions, and there is a prospect that it may be extended many feet and be equipped with landings for the accommodation of pleasure boats that are to ply the coastwise waters. Daily band concerts, afternoon and evening, call the crowds of ozone seekers to the sand, and this places them in close touch with the bath-house, the dancing pavilion, the theater and the other diversions that cluster about the most frequented rendezvous of the pleasure hunter.

The season has brought no decided change in the bathing costume. The skirts are ample, and with stockings such as are worn there is no hint or suggestion of immodesty. In this regard the improvement is no less marked than in the seaside dancing pavilions. Heretofore, on occasions, it has been necessary to maintain a censor, whose duty it was to keep strict watch to the end that any attempt to introduced Bowery steps might be intercepted; but, although there is dancing every night and all day Sunday, there is no longer necessity for the "lookout." Although life by the sea at the height of the season is of the care free and easy character, the major portion of the guests being temporary residents, there is a perceptible uplift in the moral tone. Anything bordering on the risque is tabooed. In short, it is not countenanced. The moving picture shows are of the kind to which mothers may with safety take their children, while the sights on the sand are not such as are calculated to call for unwonted activity on the part of chaperons. Even the cafés at which drink that cheers is served encounter no obstacles in catering to women who are unaccompanied.

Moonlight fishing and moonlight bathing are two novel features of beach life that have a number of devotees this season, and those who have indulged in the former report good luck, while the followers of the latter pronounce it as rare sport. But on these occasions, when the parties consist of both sexes, the chaperone is very much in evidence.

NOVEL DIVERSIONS.

VENICE HAS SOME NEW ONES.

VENICE, July 3.—The one new attraction that adds to the interest of a visit to the Venetian city this season is the aquarium, built near the auditorium on the pier. This structure, of pleasing architectural lines, was recently built and equipped at an outlay of approximately $40,000. But within it is ever changing. New curiosities from the bottom of the deep drink are being added and from day to day the great tanks find strange creatures peeping at the visitors who inspect the marine gardens. Only last week the maternal head of the perch household gave birth to sixteen little fish, and she and her brood have for some days been the recipients of marked attention. Automobiles now have access to the long pier, and so alluring has become the strand for wheeling parties that additions are being made to the pier to provide parking accommodations for the motor cars, that come by the hundreds on holidays and whenever there is any extraordinary entertainment. Throughout the canal district there has been a contagious movement to build and occupy homes, with the result that many of the lots are now improved by handsome bungalows and many families find permanent homes alongside the waterways and the intersecting boulevards.

The demand for bathing accommodations has proven such that the large bath-house constructed last season demonstrated, early in the present summer, the fact that the number of dressing rooms would not prove adequate. In order to meet the call an addition of many dozen rooms was made.

The old Midway Plaisance has been rehabilitated and now reflects the past achievements of Chutes Park as an entertaining diversion. It is under the same management as made a success of the Los Angeles park and promises to prove a novel diversion for Venice visitors during the present season. There are daily concerts by the band, and the plans have been drawn and even some of the material ordered and contracts let for the building of the Continental Gardens, a new pleasure place that is one day to occupy the vacant space between the dancing pavilion and the auditorium. Owing to the uncertainty of the municipal-political situation the Abbot Kinney Company has called it all off for this season, and there will be no airdome or openair amphitheater of immense seating capacity for the summer crowds of this season.

One of the unique places on the sand is the Baby Bank. Here fond mothers may deposit their young hopefuls and themselves enjoy the sights along shore, with every assurance that the babes will have the best of care and attention. The rest home for working girls is another of the attractive features. It affords a happy vacation for many a young woman who might otherwise be compelled to pass the entire summer without either rest or change of scene. And then there is the Women's Clubhouse on Burbank Island. Here are held meetings, parties and receptions. It is the permanent beach home of the Cosmos Club of Los Angeles, but at times has welcomed members of the South Coast Civic League, the Pick and Shovel Club, the Crescent Bay Women's Club, and other organizations of the beach cities and Los Angeles. Four years of growth to trees, shrubs and flowers along the canals and streets of the villa city has added much to the beauty of that section. The streets have been accepted by the city as public thoroughfares and are now being maintained as a part of the municipality. Their care has been added to the duties of the street superintendent, it having been a stipulation in their dedication to the city that the streets and flowers should be taken care of.

WHERE REST IS REAL.

TARRY BY THE PALISADES.

SANTA MONICA, July 3.—It is with pretty parks and oiled boulevards that appeal to the automobilists that Santa Monica is this season inviting the rest, pleasure and health-seeker to tarry by the palisades. These allurements, rather than the customary beach attractions, are the things upon which it depends, pending the completion of the new reinforced concrete pier with its yachting and boating concomitants and the full fruition of the development of the Arcadian terraces, with boulevard system, tourist hotel and los baños. With the old bathhouse out of commission, North Beach now attracts only as the ruins and relic of a former seaside activity. Surf bathing tells the only story that is to be told of comings and goings on the sand.

But quite soon this is to be changed. The municipality has expended $100,000 in the erection of a modern pleasure pier, which graces the foot of Colorado avenue and extends for a distance of 1600 feet into the sea. This structure is to become the nucleus of whatever development the early future may hold in store for the city's beach section. The matter of disposing of the concessions to be let in connection with the operation of the pier is now receiving consideration. An offer has been made for a fifty-year franchise, but it is doubtful if the law will permit it. But the way is clear for a ten-year lease, and such may be made. It will provide for a palatial theater at the "T" of the pier, cafés alongside, and a boatmen's clubhouse behind the breakwater at the deep-water end. Near the shore and the plans are being drawn for a casino of Mission type. This is to cost $10,000, and will house a modern café.

In Linda Vista Park, beneath the shade of the palms, a band has been installed for the season, and daily afternoon concerts add to the variety and pleasure of the summer by the sea.

Farther up the beach, where Santa Monica Cañon opens as a great barranca onto the sloping shore, there has been developed a quiet retreat for picnic parties. Here, beneath the shade of the giant sycamores of Rustic Cañon, picnic grounds lure those who harken to the call of the wild. Here barbecue feasts and Spanish dinners are served as the visitors may elect, or basket dinners may be spread in the open. There are oiled ways for the vehicles of the horseless age and a typical log cabin adds to the variety of the rural charm. The great pier at Port Los Angeles, formerly the haven of clippers from the main, has for the nonce been converted into a pleasure place, and the million-dollar investment of Huntington is at the service of the merest tyro with rod and reel, or merely hook and line. Pleasure fishing from the long wharf is the chief call which Port Los Angeles has upon the public, and since the trolley car, with frequent trips to the pier's ocean end, has supplanted the steam road with its one train daily the port has gained in public popularity, while losing whatever it might in years agone have possessed as a commercial factor.

With the fastest course in the country for automobile road races, and mile after mile of paved boulevard, Santa Monica is relying upon the July races to reinstate her in the good graces of the motoring fraternity. The regular races of July 10 are to be followed by special ones for the Elks on the 13th (Santa Monica Day,) and the reputation of the course, its speed and condition, will be made the basis for other events. The road race will be an annual event for at least three years, and for that period at least Santa Monica will leave no road unimproved that might attract the auotmobiles from Los Angeles. She is already planning a direct boulevard to the city, via Fremont avenue, and when completed this will bring the western limits of Los Angeles within an eight-mile run of surf and sand and bounding billows.

THE VERY LATEST.

LONG BEACH WILL GET IT.

LONG BEACH, July 3.—When it comes to offering pleasures to visitors to the seashore Long Beach never takes a back seat. Well-known business men have interested themselves in the construction of a device absolutely new. It will be called the airship spiral way. This will consist of a steel tower 100 feet in circumference and 80 feet high, around which a mono-rail will wind from top to bottom. A car shaped like an airship and seating four people will make the descent, suspended frm this mono-rail. Trips will be made every few minutes, only one car being allowed upon the spiralway at a time. The support of the car by the unseen rail above and its free swing in the air from the rail will give the airship effect with satisfying naturalness.

The top of the steel tower will be capped with a revolving dome, which will be ribbed with lights. The spiralway, it is estimated, will cost many thousands of dollars. Engineers who invented the device have made this their headquarters for some months and R. L. Bisby, a popular restaurateur and active member of the Chamber of Commerce, is one of the chief backers of the proposition.

Eastern capitalists have made repeated visits here to take up the project again and again of constructing a costly scenic railway. Whether this will be done within the next twelve months is still uncertain, although negotiations for a certain site on the beach have been carried quite far.

Of late there has been decided activity here toward offering amusement to the public—something beside sea air, sunshine through the twelvemonth, and ocean bathing. First came the $100,000 bath-house, and next to the ocean itself, this probably has remained first among the attractions, judging from the manner in which newcomers find pleasure in patronizing it. Then the long pleasure pier was constructed, with two decks and a sun parlor at the end.

This store will close on Saturdays during July and August at 12:30, commencing Saturday, July 10th.

The construction of a public meeting place was next decided upon as a necessity, as Long Beach had ambitions, fairly well realized ere this, to become a convention city, and the big auditorium was built. But along the line of amusement enterprises, the improvement of the beach district by broad, concrete walks has been followed by the construction of small buildings of pleasing exterior along them. The Pike became a reality, lined with stores, booths and small theaters, and lighted at night by thousands of incandescent lights.

Two larger theaters, the Bentley and the Byde-a-Wyle, have been built, and a permanent stock company, and a musical comedy aggregation, also a fixture, are this year purveying highly satisfactory entertainment. Both theaters are along the Pike.

Another strand street, Windsor Place, has just been paved and improved with broad walks, and lots are being taken for new establishments there.

As at Atlantic City, the edge of the ocean is being lined with amusement projects. The old, merry-go-round, though it has lost none of its popularity, seemingly, with the youngsters, now shares honors with a roller coaster, which carries the patron high in the air and out over the surf.

There has just been completed a later device, which combines the principles of the merry-go-round and the Ferris wheel. There are four arms to this affair, and at the end of each is a Ferris wheel, with six separate seats. As the entire affair goes around the wheels turn, too. This double-whirl has been built at a cost of $9000. It will be lighted with 1000 incandescents. The roller-coaster and merry-go-round are brilliantly lighted, also, as is the bath-house, and the Pike will be arched over this week by strands of vari-colored incandescents.

Well-known business men have interested themselves in the construction of an absolutely new device, to be known as the airship spiralway.

Long Beach has not always been able to boast the elegant caravansary now found in the Hotel Virginia, nor the satisfactory apartment-houses and cafés which are now catering to the wants of the thousands who come for an hour, but decided to stay a week, a month, or a season. And the number of homes that have been built during the past two years testify further to the attractiveness.

A GREAT CHANGE.

THE NEW REDONDO BEACH.

REDONDO BEACH, July 3.—With an expenditure of $300,000 by the Los Angeles and Redondo Company and smaller amounts by the city and the Chamber of Commerce on improvements and amusements since last season, this is indeed a new Redondo Beach this summer. A new era has commenced for Redondo Beach, as a pleasure resort. It no longer can be regarded merely as a shipping port and business coast city. Under the management of C. H. Burnett, who supervises the Huntington interests here, wonderful improvements have been added and amusements and attractions to draw and entertain the summer crowds are being projected and realized.

Foremost among the features of the new Redondo Beach is the magnificent $150,000 bath-house formally opened on the 1st inst., the biggest and most important improvement of the company; a $65,000 breakwater, affording safe surf bathing and a protection to the bath-house; the extension and repair of wharf No. 3 at a cost of $25,000 and the removal of the shipping from wharf No. 1 to wharf No. 3, which leaves the former free for the use of the fishermen; the laying out of two beautiful parks; numerous improvements along the water front in the way of a mile-long walk along the beach and cement walks and stairs and seats along the front. These are some of the changes effected by the Los Angeles and Redondo Company since last season. The bath-house, the largest and most modern structure of its kind in the world, accommodates 2000 bathers.

Babies, children and their elders as well as experienced and expert swimmers enjoy aquatic sports to their hearts' content in the three pools of the plunge. The continuous flow of hot salt water from the enormous plant of the Pacific Light and Power Company's plant makes the plunge clean, pure and sanitary.

A large force of workmen is employed on wharf No. 3, which is being extended 100 feet to accommodate the big steamers of the Pacific Coast Steamship Company. Within a few weeks the improvements will be completed and the shipping will be removed from wharf No. 1 and all business of that kind transferred to No. 3. This will give the entire wharf No. 1 to the use of the fishermen who can enjoy their sport without molestation or disturbance from the ships approaching the pier or the freight cars on the tracks of the wharf. The unprecedented runs of pompano, sea trout and other rare fish as well as the more common varieties this spring and summer have made the sport here unusually attractive.

With the numerous improvements has come another notable change at Redondo Beach. Many prominent and wealthy residents of Los Angeles and Pasadena have been attracted to this beach as a summer residence and the social life promises to be exceptionally gay this summer. Many of the large houses on the Esplanade have been leased by prominent society people of Los Angeles and numerous festivities are planned to while away the summer hours. The new Burdette home will be completed by the middle of July and many other homes in Clifton have been leased for the summer.

One of the most popular attractions with the residents and the visitors as well is the athletic field, which is under the supervision of the Chamber of Commerce and is the official field of the Southern State Baseball League. There are many enthusiastic fans in the town who are intensely proud of the Redondo Beach team, which won the pennant in the series of the Southern State games just concluded, and this enthusiasm is caught by the visitors and tourists. The Southern State League will play games at the diamond regularly this summer, which will form a pleasant diversion from the usual dancing and bathing of the summer crowds. The deep-water tank at the bath-house will be the scene of some of the most exciting professional water polo games to be played on the Coast.

In the plans for the summer attractions, the artistic and the beautiful have not been forgotten. In the amusement center and just across from the pavilion and the bath-house, two beautiful parks have been laid out and here will be tended California's rarest and most beautiful plants and flowers.

The Tent City, which was started on a small scale and as a venture last season, has been transformed into a beauty spot and materially enlarged. It is located within a stone's throw of the ocean, yet the tents are nestled among the trees in such a way as to give one the impression of a mountain camp rather than a seaside resort. No more restful or delightful spot could be imagined.

A new bathing beach located south of the new bath-house has been equipped with life lines. This will be appreciated by bathers on account of the absolute freeness from seaweed, by reason of the protection of wharves on both sides. Cement steps leading to this beach and seats and pagodas are being built south of the bath-house.

The new amusements and attractions mentioned together with the former attractions such as the Hotel Redondo, the immense dancing pavilion, with the Schoneman and Blanchard orchestra and band, moonstone beach, the human roulette wheel and like amusements, will afford fun and pleasure a-plenty for the summer visitors, who in years past had no attractions offered here other than those nature had provided.

RAILWAY AIDS IT.

HUNTINGTON BEACH IN LINE.

HUNTINGTON BEACH, July 3.—Now that the electric railway from Santa Ana to this city is completed and Huntington Beach is placed in direct connection with Riverside and San Bernardino counties by means of the Santa Fé Railroad at Santa Ana, new attractions for pleasure seekers at this beach have been provided. A large plunge and bath-house stand first among these, the former being already completed and the latter in course of construction. The bath-house is to be in every way modern, and the architect's plans show a beautiful and substantial building.

The annual Methodist Chautauqua and camp meeting here will this year be exceptionally interesting because of the fact that Dr. Torrey, probably leader of all American evangelists, will be in charge. Specially prepared music will add to the interest of the services. The Southern California Veterans' Association has engaged for its annual August encampment here much of the available space in the local Tent City to be used during the ten days of its sojourn. These two events will unquestionably attract thousands to this beach, and preparations for their entertainment are complete.

A series of launch races is to run at intervals during the summer. A landing for the accommodation of all participants in athletic events was provided this week at the wharf at the foot of Main street.

By the United efforts of the Woman's Club, the Board of Trade and the W.C.T.U., a local library has been established, well supplied with books and magazines, and the City Trustees have created an annual fund for its maintenance. It will be a pleasant resort for visitors, throughout the summer.

Concerts will be given by the local band every afternoon and evening at the pavilion near the beach. A splendid band, under the direction of H. A. Livernash, has been engaged and newly uniformed.

The moving-picture craze has reached Huntington Beach, and an enterprising showman from a neighboring city has engaged a hall for daily exhibitions.

Instead of Saturday night dances with impromptu music such as were held here last summer, an efficient orchestra has been provided to furnish music for semi-weekly dances on Wednesday and Saturday evenings in the big pavilion.

Not least among the pleasures afforded here throughout the summer is the fishing which is at all times excellent. Large catches are often made, and in addition to the old wharf a new one, now in process of construction at Twenty-first street, will afford additional facilities for fishermen.

WATER SPORTS CHARM.

BALBOA'S CHIEF ATTRACTION.

BALBOA, July 3.—Novel water sports rather than landsmen's pleasures on the beach are to be provided here this year. Balboa's chief attraction is that it is just a little farther from the city than the other beach resorts and it gets a class of people who delight in sane holidays. These don't want summer recreation of the Midway order. They wish to enjoy to the full the excellent boating advantages which obtain at this admirably situated place and they are not everlastingly looking for the erection of new buildings, seaside temples of magnificence, which will rival those in other places.

Balboa has greatly changed from last year, but the new features are not mammoth bath-houses or wonderful aquariums, they are homes. Many new houses have recently been built here and others are planned by people who have come to look upon this section as the most favored of all the wonderful stretch of beach which makes Southern California so famous as a vacation Mecca.

This is the home of a mosquito fleet, particularly in the way of canoes. The Balboa Canoe Club is planning an interesting summer. It is to introduce canoes with sliding seats and to extend the use of sailing canoes. It has also installed two racing barges in the bay and day after tomorrow an interesting contest is to take place between a team of local amateurs and lads from the Yale Military School, Los Angeles.

The Balboa water polo team has also been organized and is getting in trim for the season. Water baseball will be a new feature of aquatic sports this season and is expected to have a big following.

Preparations for the annual decoration of Wall street, between Sixteenth and Eighteenth streets, are in full swing, and by Monday noon the little thoroughfare will be gay with flags, lanterns and pennants. The idea of decorating two blocks came to Miss Margaret Taylor four years ago. It was at first a children's affair, but it resulted in such a general feeling of friendliness among residents in the vicinity that it has become an important matter to adults.

Every night for two weeks neighbors have gathered at the home of Miss Taylor, No. 1626 Wall street, and have assisted in preparing more than 1000 small lanterns and several hundred larger ones. All will remain hung until after Elks' Week.

The Fourth is celebrated in a community manner. The decorations, fireworks and refreshments are provided from a general treasury.

Since the inception of the idea, the neighborhood has had not a single quarrel.

FOR A NOISELESS FOURTH.

Salute with a boomless cannon;
  Discharge a reportless gun;
Fire off a snapperless cracker,
  Then dodge it with a shriekless fun.

Prepare us a speechless banquet,
  And a beerless picnic make;
Spread o'er us a screamless eagle,
  And a waveless banner shake.

Breath low on a toothless fish horn,
  Stroke softly the bangless drum,
"Hurrah!" in a voiceless whisper,
  Let the tongueless bell keep dumb.

Do all in a manner minus,
  Let negative moods have place,
Employ non-playing bandsmen,
  Parade at a moveless pace.

But vainly the sons of silence
  Kick up their reforming noise,
Unless they can stock the nation
  With bodiless, boneless boys!

He Might Catch It.

He was a nervous, fidgety, young man, and he looked with considerable apprehension at the woman next him who held a baby, its face covered with a thick veil. The baby gave now and then a sharp cry, which the woman evidently tried to suppress.

At last, after many anxious glances, the young man spoke.

"Has—has that baby any—anything contagious?" he asked.

The woman looked at him with a mixture of scorn and pity.

"Twouldn't be for most folks," she said in a clear, carrying tone, "but maybe 'twould for you. He's teething."

"God reigns, and the government at Washington still lives."

Hang out a flag, though it be only the size of a handkerchief.

The financial centers report that money is cheap. But is not yet as cheap as human life.

The Fourth falls on the same old date, but this year it laps over another day, that's all.

It seems that the body in the North River was not that of Leon Ling, after all. Too bad.

Only 133 years old today, and already the greatest nation the world has ever seen. God save the republic!

When the Boston Elks come it will be the duty of Ventura county to show them what a real bean tastes like.

From the first tune by the band until the last Elk departs, Los Angeles expects every pretty girl to do her duty.

Here's wishing you a safe and sane Fourth, hoping that you may survive it jubilantly without losing a finger.

No matter how much money the Elks spend in Los Angeles, they will get the worth of it in real, unadulterated joy.

It was a woman who made the flag, and that may be one reason why men have been and still are ready to die for it.

The speed mania is all very well, but when it is indulged in at the expense of human life an end must be put to it.

"Oh, say, can you see by the dawn's early light," etc. You bet you. And pretty soon there will be two new stars on it.

"'Tis a beautiful flag, entirely," as the Irishman said; "Stars and Stripes on one side and Stripes and Stars on the other."

Let us not become unduly alarmed over the Chinese-Russian war cloud. It is not yet much larger than a La Jolla bathing suit.

George Bernard Shaw has written a postal card derogatory to Theodore Roosevelt. Now, perhaps, we may witness a scrap worth while.

Beginning about the first day of next week the clocks of this ancient and beloved pueblo will be made to say eleven and then stopped.

It can and must be made next to impossible for a crazy jackass in an automobile to kill an innocent citizen on the streets of Los Angeles.

A close study of the railroad news of this country conveys the impression that old Jim Hill hasn't even begun to look like a man on the wane.

In a few days more we have no doubt that the Board of Public Works will be able to hang out the sign: "All quiet along the aqueduct tonight."

The remarkable thing about most of these feather-brain people who rush along city streets in automobiles is that they have nothing to rush about.

It is none too early, perhaps, to make a rule that any man who rocks the boat shall be pitched head first into the water to sink or swim, just as it suits him.

No doubt the lions, the tigers and the warthogs prowling around a certain camp in Africa today will see an American flag for the first time in their lives.

If Bernard Shaw and T. Roosevelt get into "holts" it will be only another proof of the adage that the Irish are always quarreling among themselves.

The iconoclasts say that T. Jefferson did not write the Declaration of Independence, but he did. And say, maybe it didn't raise blisters on old King George.

Hope that the baseball season will not end wholly in disgrace has been revived by the unauthenticated report that somewhere back in York State an umpire has been mobbed.

It is to be hoped that at least a sufficient number of new matrimonial alliances will be contracted during the summer to offset the number of divorces scheduled for the fall.

Referring to the coming convention of the Elks, an eastern newspaper says, "All eyes will be on Los Angeles." As far as that goes, all eyes are always on Los Angeles.

It is more than likely that the situation reminds Gen. Chaffee of the old days when the troopers used to come in from an Apache shooting match and roar about the grub.

We don't mind saying to our great and good friend, the Emperor Pu-Yi, that he ought to wait until he is seven or eight years old, anyway, before plunging his country in a bloody war.

We hasten to impress on our old friends, Russia and China, that they cannot afford to fight, and that any fight in which they may engage will be undertaken without our approval or consent.

Where are the graves of the signers of the Declaration of Independence? They should be gathered together inside of one fence, that freedom might build, on a spot so holy, its most splendid shrine.

Speaking of Arizona, we are reminded that many of the people who are residents of that wonderful place are now to be found in the neighborhood of Los Angeles enjoying [illegible] sea breezes. And who would be more welcome?

THE TONIC OF PLAY.

Those of us who have business on hand would perhaps better attend to it during the present week, or decide to postpone it for a fortnight. For, the fact is, it will be difficult to attend to business during "Elks' Week."

The man who has his nose always to the grindstone will not welcome the week of play on which Los Angeles is about to enter. We mean, of course, the man who likes to keep his nose to the grindstone. "Dang these blankety blank celebrations, parades, fiestas and jinks!" he will say. But don't mind him. He is a foolish man with yellow eyes, who doesn't know what's good for him.

Play is a tonic, as necessary to the mental health of man as rhubarb and sulphur are to his physical health. We really do not play enough. We have hung for some time past on the danger line of taking our pleasures sadly, after the manner of our friends, the Anglo-Saxons. Nothing worse could happen to us.

As Col. Roosevelt said, "When we play, let us play hard." That's the idea. Get right into it, clear up to our necks. Let us array ourselves in glad rags—violet socks, Charlie Boy hats with purple bands around them, polkadot shirts and red neckties and all that, like His Majesty, King Edward VII, King of Great Britain and Ireland and Emperor of India, God bless him, one of the best fellows that ever lived.

Let us jump right into the middle of the fun with a whoop, just as though we were boys again. When the band comes down the street let us fall in and follow it, pricking up our blamed old ears like the cart horses tied to the lamp posts. A brass band is the greatest thing in the world, and if you don't think so and feel so, you are due in the moss-covered districts. Your proper place is in the Down-and-Out Club.

Los Angeles, more than any other city in America, has always mixed play with work. In the old days of the pueblo there were fiestas galore, and Christmas lasted two weeks at a stretch. The play habit has never died out, and has it ever done us harm? Have you ever seen or read of a city that has grown and prospered and expanded as Los Angeles has done? Heaven forbid that we shall ever see the day when we can't mingle pleasure with our toil.

Yes, "Elks' Week" will upset business for a few days, it is true, but it will be an upset that will do everybody good. It will jolt our livers and take those bags from under our eyes. When it is over we shall go back to the grind, stronger, fresher, kindlier and gentler, and with ten pounds of steam to back us to the one that we had before.

OUR SUMMER RESORTS.

The Times takes pleasure today in devoting considerable space to new development in the many beach resorts adjacent to Los Angeles. In cleanliness, attractiveness, healthfulness and variety of charm, these seaside towns now compare favorably with any in the world. The improvement in ten years has been enormous. In two years the changes for the better have been many. This season finds them in their best estate, more adequately prepared than ever to entertain the visitor and to minister to his comfort. The intelligent enterprise shown by these communities in their steadily onward and upward progress is to be greatly commended.

AMERICA'S GREAT FUTURE.

This is the one hundred and thirty-third anniversary of the birth of the American nation. On the fourth day of July, 1776, when that famous old bell at Philadelphia rang out that paean announcing this national birth, a new era dawned upon the whole world. It marked the setting up of the first government on earth in which the people were to govern themselves. This was the first republic worthy of the name ever organized by man. Its influence upon the world in these four generations has been immeasurable, and that influence has been altogether beneficial.

A noted statistician in an article in The Times last Friday told us of the material progress of our country since the birth of the nation. The figures are incomprehensible. The products of our fisheries are worth in money $50,000,000 a year. The products of our forests are measured by $650,000,000. The output of our mines amounts to $2,000,000,000, and of our farms to $8,000,000,000. The manufactured products of America these current years are worth annually $18,000,000,000.

Our railroads span 250,000 miles, and if run around the earth would engirdle it nine times. We have 25,000 miles of telegraph lines. We have 4,000,000 telephone receivers. The foreign commerce of the country amounts to $3,000,000,000 annually, and our money supply is represented by the same colossal figure.

We are not altogether materialistic. There are 275,000 schools of various kinds in the United States, and we spend more upon education and less upon war equipment than any other great civilized nation upon earth. We have 21,320 newspapers and periodicals of various kinds, more than can be counted among the people of any other nation of the day. We have over 7000 libraries in the country.

In territorial extent we have 3,500,000 square miles, an immense slice of the land surface of the earth. The wealth of the country is told in such incomprehensible figures as $125,000,000,000.

The flag today contains forty-six stars and we have four Territories almost ready to add to the constellation, raising it to a round half hundred.

The statistician turns poet and closes his little essay with a verse:

> "The sun is risen and will not set
> Upon thy day divine—
> For ages of unborn ages yet,
> America, are thine."

Our population, when the new nation sprang into existence, numbered about 3,000,000 all told, or three-quarters of the population of the little island, Ireland, at the present time, three-eighths of what it was half a century ago. Today the American people number close to 90,000,000.

The developed wealth of the nation represented in the figures quoted above is both astounding and inspiring. The undeveloped resources of the country would require us to multiply our developed wealth by thousands to measure what is there. The population of today is thirty times as great as it was upon the natal morning of our nation, and at the end of another century we may expect to see it probably multiplied thirty times again.

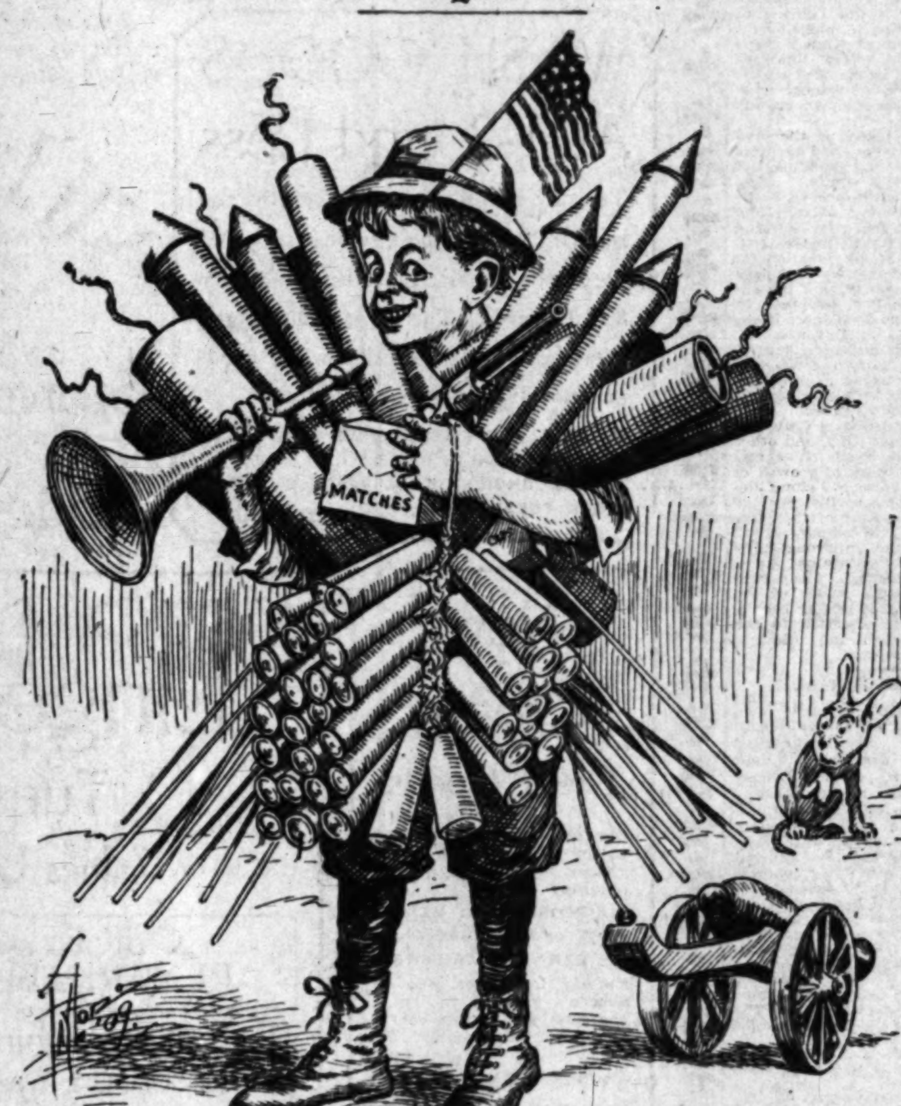
The mental and spiritual upraising of this nation has, year by year, during all these four generations, kept pace with its material progress. Ours is a knowledge-loving and moral people. The magnificent universities of today have no odds to ask from those of the oldest nations in Europe. The influence of these splendid schools upon the citizenship of this nation is unmeasurable and all for good. From hundreds of thousands of pulpits Sunday by Sunday the highest type of morality is preached to Americans, and our homes are marked by a degree of civilization and a perfection of refinement not excelled elsewhere.

We have accomplished great things, won splendid victories of war and peace in the generations that have gone. We shall go on, step by step, from point to point, as the anniversaries of the nation's birth come and go, and with every annual milestone in our course we shall see a nation more populous, greater, richer, more intelligent and more highly moral with each passing year.

Our farmers are prosperous beyond the measure of any other country on the globe. Our laboring people, who live from their wages, earn from five to fifty times as much a day as our fellow-men can hope for in other lands. The artisans of America at this time live better in every respect than titled nobles of a couple of centuries ago, and live better now than peoples of other lands.

"Spread-eagleism" is perhaps a characteristic of Americans. But heaven forbid that we should ever abstain from calling the world's attention to the glorious flight of the magnificent bird that stands as an emblem of our country. The eagle pales in the presence of no winged creature that God has made. Nor does America pale in comparison with anything found among any people upon the face of the globe. The bird is proud of its kingly strength and magnificent power, and we may well be proud, too, in the face of all opposition, of our country in its natural wealth, in its glorious scenery, in its great rivers in their lordly flow, in our magnificent harbors, our splendid woods, our towering snow-capped mountains, our schools, libraries, newsapers, churches, universities, and in fact in everything that ministers to material comfort and furnishes material wealth, as well as in everything that goes to make an intelligent, enlightened, civilized, refined and highly moral people.

NOW FOR A QUIET FOURTH!



TO COURT WITH CLEAN HANDS.

It is a legal maxim that a plaintiff entering a court of equity must come with his own hands clean.

In this country the highest court is that wherein the public preside, and there is no appeal from its decisions.

Is there not propriety in demanding that those who come before this highest tribunal shall present themselves in the same guise as a person in one of the lower courts. Two thousand years ago a Teacher said to those who followed Him, "Cast out first the beam in thine own eye and then canst thou see clearly to pull out the speck that is in thy brother's eye."

This age is one of transition. The public mind is in ferment for change. The condition is a dangerous one, as well as a hopeful one. It furnishes the open opportunity to the false prophet or to the blind leader of the blind. All movement is not necessarily progress, a fact liable to be forgotten. When the people are dissatisfied with their environment they are led to follow any one who speaks of green fields and new pastures.

There are good government clubs in many cities in the country. Good government is earnestly to be desired. So corrupt are conditions in some cities that good citizens long for some one to point out a way to reach relief; they are so disgusted with things as they are that they are ready to rush after any one who promises reform. Under circumstances like these the critical faculty is put to sleep and the corruptionist finds the state of public feeling just what he needs to work his evil designs. He takes advantage of an excited state of feeling to play his own selfish game under the pretense that he is seeking reform.

Just what we have in San Francisco. The lowest elements of society got possession of the municipal government and proceeded on a career of spoliation and robbery hardly paralleled in our history. The minds of the people became intensely excited, and they were ready to do almost anything to rid the city of the vampires who were exhausting its vital forces. A "good government club" was the most natural thing in the world.

Then arose the opportunity for the designing enemies of the public weal, and entering the Good Government League these proceeded to make the regime of the base grafters mere child's play compared with the conspiracy of the false pretenders who got control of the good government organization. The hold-ups of the base officials were bagatelles compared with the confiscation of private property contemplated by the pirates, garbed as reformers.

The good government organization was made to play its part in an infamous crusade to get possession of valuable privileges by collusion with the grafters whose word no decent jury would kick a cur upon. As raw an attempt at packing a jury was never made as the use of the marked ballots sent out from the office of the Good Government League to get at the feeling of citizens likely to become members of a jury to try those the conspirators were after. Had the scheme succeeded, the biased, hired prosecutor would have been able to fill the jury box with men known to favor conviction before the trial began. The infamous Jeffreys or a modern court in Russia never attempted grosser injustice.

Let it be a warning to the public. We are bent on "reform" these days. There is room for reform in many directions. But let us scrutinize the hands of those who come forward as preachers of civic righteousness. Let us insist that they come with a clean personal record and let us watch for the outcropping of selfish ends on the part of those who come forward to set the world right. No matter what the name of the organization, no matter what the pretense set forward, no matter what the programme issued, if the leaders are known as tricksters, as self-seekers, as corrupt as well as selfish in their private business affairs, let us beware of them when they come before us as reformers.

The lesson of the Good Government League of San Francisco should not be lost on the people of Los Angeles. Look out for the reformer who wears a mask, as for the plaintiff in an equity case whose hands reek with corruption.

SPEED REGULATION.

The death of an estimable citizen and prominent merchant of this city on Friday evening in an automobile accident brings to the front the subject of speed regulations in this city. The driver of the machine by which Mr. Lowman met his death may be blameless. That does not lessen the blow to the family. Some one was to blame, and it looks as if it was those who occupied the machine which disappeared in a cloud of dust, taking no trouble to ascertain what had been the result of their wild speed.

On the very day of this sad accident the writer was going west on a street car on Seventh street. At one of the crossings the car came to a standstill to let passengers on and off. A woman, who was standing on the curb waiting for the car, as it slowed up, stepped to the street to cross to the car. As she did so a big machine came tearing the air at a twenty-mile pace. It gave no warning "toot," but as the woman placed her foot on the gutter the driver let out a blood-curling howl which caused the woman to draw back on to the curb. The machine whizzed past, missing her by a few inches and by just one second. Had the woman reached the street with both feet, nothing could have saved her life.

This is a populous city. Traffic is very heavy in the business center, and not light all through the residence districts. The network of street cars is close and much used. It is the experience of all large cities that much precaution is necessary to protect life and limb. In great cities policemen are stationed at the crossings, and in the places where traffic is heavy no pedestrian tries to cross until the officer arrests the movement of things on wheels. All vehicles must keep to the right side of the street, and there are stations of refuge half way over.

We are approaching conditions here which will call for similar regulations. There are 5000 automobiles used in Los Angeles, and the small boy on a bicycle is as dangerous as the wild driver at the wheel of the auto. Where traffic is heavy six miles an hour is too high a speed for safety, and nowhere should a twenty-mile pace be permitted. The ordinances as they are should be rigidly enforced and in some features they need amendment.

As to pedestrians, they can do much to make accidents less liable. Crossing the streets in a diagonal path is dangerous anywhere in a city. Crossing directly lessens the dangers. Then it is incumbent on all who use the streets to keep wide awake. The streets should be scanned in all directions by all who attempt to cross them or to board a car or alight from one.

We are all in too much of a hurry. We rush to catch a car and forget everything else except the mad desire to "get there."

All the fault does not lie at the door of any class. Drivers, pedestrians and officials need to use great diligence in order to lessen these automobile accidents.

America.

Mother, they came from the East and West,
From the nether seas where the dim world dips,
And you bared to their need your tawny breast,
Your young, sweet breasts to their eager lips—
They whom their own starved mothers flung
On the ebb of wandering tides that call,
Till their alien arms were around you clung,
And you gave them suckle and loved them all.

And side by side in their strength they grew,
Saxon and Teuton and Celt and Dane,
Brood of the Briton where bleak winds blew,
And warm skies bent o'er the brood of Spain.
From the nether seas, from the East and West,
Till their blood was mingled in one red flow—
They that had slept on your tawny breast,
O Mother of mine, in the Long Ago.

The blood of the world in one red flow,
Blue eyes that mated with raven hair,
And their sons were lusty to crush the foe,
And never were daughters as theirs so fair.
The forests fell where their rooftrees rose,
They dug the fields where the harvest smiles,
And their songs they echo from Arctic snows
To the palm-lined shores of the tropic isles.

In dreams of peace and in blood of wars,
In shock of battles that shook the world,
From summer rainbows and wintry stars,
They wove the banner no foe has furled.
Brood of the nations, they clasp your knee,
With steel they girt you from East to West,
And the touch of their hands is from sea to sea,
O Mother of mine with the tawny breast!

THE LANCER.

"THREE WEEKS" has left town, and I feel quite safe in saying that the morals of the community have been left intact.

A discriminating providence so arranged matters that when it gave Elinor Glyn her prurient ideas it withheld from her the ability to promulgate them adequately. The most susceptible could not have been touched by the revolting and ridiculous spectacle of an underdressed woman, with a blue light thrown on her, making love to a fat dub from Kansas, especially as neither knew how to act or dress, and as the scenery was absurd in its crudity, and the lines could not even be ranked with Bertha Clay.

Some poet wrote:

"The boy stood on the burning deck,
But he could not feel it burn;
He had spent Three Weeks with Elinor Glyn
On the banks of Lake Lucerne."

But this is a false impression. My own lines are better:

The boy lay on the burning deck,
But felt no conflagration.
He had spent Three Weeks with Elinor Glyn
And died of nauseation.

The Complexity of Simplicity.

Now that two influential and estimable ladies, whose social and political positions are of the highest order, have set to work on an aggressive campaign to simplify the dietetics of Newport society, it is high time for The Lancer to mount his war horse and sally forth.

Simplicity is the greatest modern heresy, because it is not simple. The sole constituents of the simple life are dietetic experiment and physiological research; and dietetics and physiology are both irremediably complex.

The epicurean gluttons who gourmandize on fricassees and Waldorf salads, and who strangle their pores with close and enervating clothing, do so impulsively and without reason. They know naught of the mechanism of the digestive organs, nor of the relative time consumed in the assimilation of herbivorous and carnivorous substances. Neither do they reason out, during their daily toilette, the beneficial results to be attained by discarding their present garments for cellulated togas. Their actions are not scientifically thought out. They have not delved inexhaustively into gastronomic research and decided upon the number of mastications proper for digestional felicity; they have no regard for vegetarian microbiotics. They eat for the pure satisfaction of eating, because they are hungry, because an instinct prompts, because it is rational and natural, and they eat with no thought of the method nor the pancreatic activity of the different foods. There is only the unconscious knowledge that eating pleases them, and that suffices. Thus do they dress; not because of scientific deductions, but from habit, and, again, becauce the result pleases. When they retire (indoors, and on springs and feathers,) it is impulse that inspires them. Every action in their febrile routine of life is direct, spontaneous, childish in its simplicity.

On the other hand, the curriculum of the simple life is so involved that a great portion of one's time is necessary to differentiate the intricacies of food and raiment culture. When satisfying hunger, arduous study has taught the advocates of the simple life that nuts are more nutritious than watermelon, that whole-wheat bread has less starch than potatoes, that beets contain over-much saccharine matter, that chocolate is constipating. They avoid meat because it stimulates, pastry because it digests slowly, wine—but, oh, dear, let us not speak of wine! They struggle through the tortuosities of rumination; spurn with a disdainful air a dish they crave, because its dilative action on the peritoneal coating of the stomach is injurious. Dried biscuits and nuts are eaten for scientific reasons. Soup and salad are eschewed as a matter of principle. Likewise, personal attire is altered because, after much study and experimentation, it has been found that the oxygen of the air, acting upon the pores of the human epidermis, is beneficial. Springs and pillows are brushed aside for hygienic reasons. It is easy to see that there is nothing simple about the simple life. It is a long succession of complexities, a continual evolving of complicated analyses.

Therefore, then, I make a plea for the simple life—not the complex life of tonsorial negligence and gastronomic martyrdom, but the simple life of stiff shirts and chicken pates.

Disappointing Romance.

Mrs. Fremont Older has written, in the July McClure's, a loose-jointed romance called "The Story of a Reformer's Wife." It goes into the details of the whole story of the spiriting away of this saintly editor of the "Bulletin;" giving us many details of, and much comment upon, the San Francisco situation, as viewed from an impartial and unprejudiced standpoint, Mrs. Fremont Older being only the wife of Mr. Fremont Older, the kidnapee.

This thrilling romance of hate, danger and adventure, however, will not appeal to all people, for it has a very sad ending — Fremont Older was brought back.

De Gustibus——

There is one thing gratifying about the five-foot shelf of books selected by Dr. Charles W. Eliot; it contains very little stuff that the average person has ever read, or, if read, has remembered. In the list, Bunyan's "Pilgrim's Progress" is given a conspicuous place. . . . Alas!

The Lancer is considering seriously a compilation of the worst books ever written, and, if the plan materializes, "Pilgrim's Progress" will head the list. The book of Leviticus will run a close second; third will come Walt Whitman's "Leaves of Grass," and not far down the line will be "A Midsummer Night's Dream." When I last saw this Shakespearean comedy and beheld the I-really-ought-to-like-this expressions on the faces about me, some significant and applicably relevant meaning attached itself to that phrase in the play, "What fools these mortals be!"

A Few Words on Culture.

Of course, culture is a very desirable annexation, having only the drawback that it gets one into the best society. But being bored by long and lugubrious operatic selections, gazing with simulated rapture upon a paint-smeared rag, quoting Oscar Wilde's aphorisms as one's own, reading Ibsen, and pronouncing been "bean," do not constitute culture. . . .

Now that it is all over I suppose that I may mention a recent art exhibition where there was so much culture that it was difficult to see the picture. A local art league imported some paintings by near masters, Murphy, Hunt, Innes and others. I went, led by the universal desire to be cultured. The eastern dealer who furnished the exhibition, evidently was onto the culture racket, and passed out some fearsome atrocities in oil as the real esthetic articles.

The picture of honor was a canvas by Hunt—"Orphelia" I believe it was called. It hung above the mantlepiece in the center of the room, or as a cultured matron told me, "over the mantelpiece." I edged my way gingerly across the room, amid teacups, perfume and biled shirts, and looked at the bulging eyes about me. I listened to the old familiar adjectives, and much random talk about "composition," "atmosphere" and "envelope." Then, looking at the object of all this fierce culture, a slick, greased chromo of a deformed female, I decided that mine was the burgeois soul. To make sure of this, I studied a varnished landscape (I think it was a landscape) by Innes, and other heterogeneities of paint, but soon went forth into the street muttering sadly to myself:

"Alas! to think that I am a proletariat."

"An Old Lady in Pants."

A publishing firm recently advertised Mr. Kipling thus: "He has done for India what Edwin Markham has done for our laboring classes."

I should hate to think that all Kipling had done for India was to write anaemic, muck-raking articles, chant emasculated poetry and prepare long, sentimental discourses to prove platitudes.

There are three reasons why platitudes do not need explanation—sentimental or otherwise:

First—They are universally accepted and need no substantiation.

Second—They are inane and uninteresting.

Third—They are not true.

Edwin Markham is a personified platitude.

New Outbreak of Whitmanitis.

Francis Hackett, a platitudinous and rather unintelligent book reviewer on the Chicago Evening Post, is quite worked up over the fact that William Winter, in his new book, speaks a few gentle truths regarding that vulgar charlatan, Walt Whitman.

The fault I find with Mr. Winter is that he is too mild on this foul-mouthed empiric.

Says Mr. Winter: "He did not impress me as anything other than he was, a commonplace, uncouth and sometimes obnoxiously coarse writer, trying to be original by using a formless style and celebrating the proletarians who make the world most uninhabitable by their vulgarity."

There are people today (Francis Hackett among them) who have an insane liking for this thick-lipped and nasty quasi-humanitarian. It is an affectation of mediocre minds and explainable, I have been told, pathologically. To like ungrammatical and hysterical strings of words from which sweat is continually oozing and whose smell is foul, shows a mental deficiency.

Making the "Johnny" Safe.

The stage-door Johnny has evoluted too fast for the evolution of the adorable actress.

In the olden days, the stage-door Johnny was a harmless young person, who stuck around on the sidewalk after the show and made eyes at the actor ladies, and sometimes went so far as to say "Ahem" in a devilish way.

But with the passing of years, the Johnny has evolved into a most perilous character, astraddle an ocean-going 10,000-horse-power automobile.

The police records for the past week or so show that blooded young persons of this character have been strewing the tattered carcasses of actorines all around the public thoroughfares. Every time you turn a sharp bend of the road you are liable to come upon the fragments of a prima donna. The hospitals seem to be full of the mementoes of a joy ride with some rich man's son.

If it is in the power of the Interstate Commerce Commission, the time has come to regulate the Johnny.

Some sort of rule should be made to prevent impressionable young men trying to manage a runaway steam engine while gazing into the liquid depths of some soubrette's eyes. The supply of soubrettes is too limited, and there isn't room in the hospitals for all the ladies of the stage.

The remedy would seem to be a gutta-percha covering for the adorable soubrette to make her accident-proof. Something like a football suit, only more heavily padded.

Or else increase the age limit of the Johnny.

The law should prohibit any person below the age of 65 and with a pulse running faster than 52 from making goo-goo eyes at actresses with the aid or assistance of an automobile.

This growing custom of smearing the landscape with the gore of "peaches" from the opera companies savors too much of monopoly.

No one wants to pay for theater tickets to witness a performance by fricasseed young ladies.

Wanted a King.

That good old kissing-bug, the British King, doesn't seem to be in the little family gatherings any more.

When the Emperor of Germany met the Czar the other day, they didn't invite uncle to be there. And that wasn't all. Just as a hint as to how they felt about it, they shot up a British steamer that tried to slip meekly and peaceably past.

Since the day of that cannon shoot, the world has been waiting to hear the old-time growl of the British lion; but the British lion seems to have lost its voice.

A few years ago England would have been on her high horse if they accidentally pointed the cannon that way. Now she seems on the point of apologizing for the cannonball Russia had to waste on the "zealous mistake."

Although England treated this country with unvarying injustice and brutality until she grew afraid, one cannot see her old knees weaken without regret.

What a shame her throne could not be held by a man like William II!

I can imagine men like Harriman, Roosevelt and Rockefeller pouring over the fearful problem whether the young men of fashion shall wear green fedoras or straws.

My British friends solemnly point out that the King can't do anything—"no power"—"constitutional figurehead"—"bound up in red tape," etc.

The German Emperor hasn't so much power, either, yet he manages to rough-house the whole continent of Europe and shake his friends in the Reichstag until their teeth chatter.

There is no such thing as "constitutional power." Any ruler has the power—who has the power.

HOROSCOPE.

Sunday, July 4, 1909.

BY COZETTE.

Ill looms the day for hazard. Mars burns high
And looks on flame with a malefic eye.

Today the moon, in the sign of the Fishes, has Mars in sextile, a flaming and martial aspect.

This attitude of the red star is favorable and benefic for those of dauntless, resolute character and aids their undertakings. But it afflicts the world with quarrel and menaces "fire and sword," thus adding a distinct warning that the natural dangers of today ar? likely to be greatly emphasized this year.

It will therefore, be the part of wisdom to use the utmost precaution in handling firearms and explosives.

The influence of Mars in its present position will be to make the reckless more careless thna usual.

The benificent influence of the planet in this position is extended most markedly over butchers, bakers, tailors, engineers, soldiers, sailors, policemen, civil officers, wood workers, carpenters, builders, machinists and artificers generally.

For those afflicted with illness or pain the sign is promising, for it is in benefic aspect over surgeons, physicians, dentists, oculists and chemists.

Otherwise Mars rules this period as an unfortunate and accidental star. It rules for energy and pluck, but makes men impetuous and inclines them to rush into danger.

The sign is good this day for women's affairs, socially and domestic. Entertainments, visits, domestic celebrations and receptions should benefit.

Women and men with birthdate are under signs that promise increase of profit or honor during the twelvemonth. They should be on the alert for opportunity, but must heed the fact that the road does not lie through intrigue or plot.

Children born today are under aspects signifying brilliant intuitive sense with artistic capacity and strong, active, virile mind.

TO CELEBRATE AT SPRINGS.

A party of Hamburger's employés under the direction of Mrs. R. C. Newton will leave the Arcade this morning for a trip to Sulphur Mountain Springs, Ventura county, where a special celebration has been prepared for them. There will be a picnic in the cañon, burro riding up the picturesque trails, a dance and a concert. The party will return tomorrow night.

SOUTHWEST HOSE HOUSE.

The Normandie avenue-Vermont Square fire station, for which the citizens of the district purchased the lot, and on which a hose house has been erected, is now fully equipped with a crew of four men and a two-horse combination chemical engine and hose cart.

An Earl's Quixotic Duel.

A "Quixotic" incident in the life of the late Earl of Rosebery is recalled by the interest aroused by his grandson's (Lord Dalmeny) marriage. Sixty years ago the Lord Rosebery of that time was in Paris, and in paying a call one day he was received so rudely by the butler and he complained to his friend of the servant's conduct. But he had been a non-commissioned officer in the French army, and as such he challenged Lord Rosebery to a duel. The Earl accepted and two shots were exchanged without result. But Lord Rosebery was angered at his own condescension and afraid his antagonist might lay aside his military rank and resume his duties as a servant, thus exposing an earl to the reproach of having fought with a butler. So he settled an annuity of $1250 on the man on condition he did not return to domestic service. The condition was faithfully observed on both sides.—[London Chronicle.

To Remove Superfluous Hair

Dr. Ainsworth, the Prominent Physician, says: "I can truly say that I consider De Miracle the only reliable preparation on the market for the removal of superfluous hair. I have used many preparations for that purpose, but none gave me satisfaction until I tried De Miracle, but in it I find a preparation that will do all that is claimed for it by the manufacturers and which gives perfect satisfaction in all cases." Better take a doctor's advice; don't be deceived with fake free treatments.

Poisonous, worthless concoctions are dangerous; besides, after you have used them it will be harder to remove the hair.

De Miracle is sold by The Owl Drug Co., 320 S. Spring st.; Fifth and Broadway; 626 S. Broadway, and all other good stores. Booklet free in plain sealed envelope by De Miracle Chem. Co., Desk 31, 10, 1903 Park Ave., New York.

DEAFNESS CURED
BY NEW DISCOVERY

"I have demonstrated that deafness can be cured"—Dr. Guy Clifford Powell.

The secret of how to use the mysterious and invisible nature forces for the cure of Deafness and Head Noises has at last been discovered by the famous Physician-Scientist, Dr. Guy Clifford Powell. SUMMARY OF THE DAY.

A milk permit issued to the Mutual Dairy Association by the Board of Health yesterday means a new competitor of the milk trust in Los Angeles.

Jacob and Abraham Silberstein allege fraud in a complaint filed in the Superior Court yesterday against their former partner, Alexander Brick, and ask judgment for $19,488. Brick was released on furnishing $5000 bond.

Stockholders of the Elk Consolidated Oil Company brought an action against officers of the corporation, alleging fraud in the agreement to dispose of the property to the White Star Oil Company.

The Sunset Telephone and Telegraph Company filed a formal notice of appeal from the decision of Judge Bordwell, dissolving the temporary injunction to the Supreme Court of California, in the action brought against the city of Pasadena.

MILK PERMIT WAR SIGNAL.

NEW RICHMOND ARMED IN LOCAL "TRUST" FIGHT.

Mutual Dairy Association, Composed of Four Hundred Country Producers, Ready to Begin Business Tuesday With "an Increased Quantity of Milk" as the Slogan.

Armed with a milk permit issued yesterday by the Board of Health, the Mutual Dairy Association, No. 1236 Victoria street, entered the Los Angeles field yesterday in competition with what is generally termed the "milk trust." Tuesday its wagons will start out on their first deliveries, and the competition will be on in earnest.

The new company begins with a cut in prices, or, rather, as President S. L. Houghton, Jr., of Hynes states, "an increase in the quantity of milk." The trust companies are selling twelve quarts for $1, and the Mutual Company will sell thirteen; the trust is selling twenty pints for the same amount; the Mutual will sell twenty-three.

"We are seeking a market at what we believe milk should be sold for, and we are not afraid of a cut on the part of the trust," declares Mr. Houghton. "If the prices should be cut we are prepared for a fight, but we do not see how they can be cut, because the trust will not have the milk to sustain a fight."

The Mutual Company is a coöperative one, formed by 400 producers, mainly in the Long Beach and Santa Ana regions, and expects a daily supply of 6000 in the city from all its sources. It has already established creameries at Hynes, on the Long Beach line, and at Downey. The Los Angeles plant has just been completed at a cost of $35,000. It occupies a building [illegible]x100 feet, and has a complete modern pasteurizing and cooling system and an ice plant of large capacity.

According to Mr. Houghton, the trust companies have tried to interrupt the coöperative one, without success. "It took us four weeks to get a boiler permit for our plant," said Mr. Houghton, "but we succeeded last February, and the day we did, the trust raised its buying price from $1.20 per hundred pounds to $1.30. Now it is offering $1.50, and for Elks' week $1.70. This was an effort to gain control of our supply, but it failed, and we have all our sources intact and earnest.

"The organization was made necessary by the fact that the trust companies took the product of the near large dairies and then reduced its buying price for the others. This was to drive the small ranch dairies out of business and gain control for the trust. But the ranchers got together and formed an organization, along the lines of the fruit growers, and we will deal direct with the wholesale and retail consumers of Los Angeles, without middlemen and at only nominal expense."

The Mutual system of handling milk is to accept a producer as a member and issue him one share of stock. His milk is received and tested daily for butter fat. At the end of the month the gross quantity of butter fat is divided into the gross amount of milk and the producer paid according to the proportions shown by his tests. The plants at Hynes and Los Angeles are pasteurizing and the Downey plant is a cream producer. The company does not expect to engage largely in butter production, but expects to confine its attention to the quick marketing of its milk. It will have special milk trains on the Long Beach and Santa Ana lines.

HEWITT SILENT.

CONFERS WITH SEYMOUR.

J. F. Seymour, deputy city prosecutor, and City Attorney Hewitt held a long conference yesterday concerning the accusations against Seymour of having taken $50 for "friendly advice" to George Arnerich, a saloon-keeper. Seymour declares he is the victim of a plot, and sought to convince the City Attorney, his superior, that he should not be removed from his office.

After the conference Hewitt said: "Mr. Seymour has given me his side of the transaction, but there are several things I want to investigate before I take any action or express any opinion. I shall keep right on with the inquiry, and act when I am fully satisfied."

City Hall Holiday.

The City Hall will observe tomorrow as a holiday, and all offices will be closed. The meeting of the Police Commission will not be held until Tuesday night because of the holiday.

Trade That Pays.

Young men to learn to operate the linotype machine; a good trade that pays above the average. The Merganthaler Linotype Company is installing over one hundred linotype machines per month. That means just so many positions to be filled at good wages.

The Los Angeles Times has installed a large auxiliary plant and has placed in charge an expert machinist and operator, making it possible for students who so desire to learn either trade (linotype machinist or operator.) in shortest possible time, in six weeks' course. Eight hours per day or night. $50. THE TIMES-MIRROR COMPANY. 'Phone Main 3300, and ask for manager of the Linotype School.

TWO PARTNERS SUE ANOTHER.

TROUBLE FOLLOWS RESOLVE TO DISSOLVE FIRM.

Defendant, Charged With Fraud, Furnishes Five-Thousand-Dollar Bond—Is Said to Have Used for Himself Money Belonging to Concern—Heavy Damages Asked.

Jacob and Abram Silberstein brought an action against Alexander Brick in the Superior Court, yesterday, alleging fraud. Brick furnished a $5000 bond before Judge Wilbur for his appearance to answer the charge against him.

The trouble grew out of the woollen business conducted by the men at No. 414½ South Broadway. The partners had two other stores. The one in New York was in charge of Jacob Silberstein, who was the buyer for the firm. The one in San Francisco was managed by Abram Silberstein, and the one in this city, by Brick.

On May 22, last, it was agreed, it is alleged, that the partnership should be dissolved; that the Silbersteins should have two-thirds of the assets, and should assume the same percentage of the liabilities. It is further alleged that Brick was to pay $1750 due the Farmers' & Merchants' National Bank; $342, due to the Willis L. Ogden Company; $586, due to the Johnstown Worsted Mills, and $180, due Field & Abraham.

It is claimed that the gross sales of the business averaged $106,000 a year, and that at the time of the dissolution of partnership, there was due from Brick $14,232, and that he expended on his own account not less than $5000 of the firm's money.

Another charge is that Brick claimed he purchased a piece of property with the firm's money, when, as is declared, he secured it as his share of a commission he had earned in making other real estate sales for the original owner of that property.

The judgment is asked against the defendant in the sum of $9488, and in addition, exemplary damages to $10,000. It is represented that many bolts of woollen cloth were illegally removed from the place of business by him.

WIFE ILLUSTRATES

HOW HUSBAND STRUCK HER.

William McGowan, charged with committing battery upon his wife, Elizabeth, last Thursday, was fined $40 by Justice Ling yesterday. He paid.

The McGowans live on Stephenson avenue, and for some time the course of true love has not run smoothly. The wife assered that he knocked her down, choked her and did other things not recognized as proper form in well-regulated households. The complaining witness was asked to demonstrate how her husband abused her, and she proceeded to enlighten the court. The two sat together, and with the request of Justice Ling, the woman seized the unoffending and unsuspecting William and began to twist his neck in a vigorous manner, at the same time raining blows down upon his devoted head.

"Stop, stop," shouted the court. "This is no place for a case of battery. I think you folks ought to get a divorce; it is plain that you cannot live together."

Justice Ling then declared that he intended sending McGowan to jail, but he concluded a fine would serve the purpose better.

ORLOW IN TROUBLE.

RUG DEALER SUED ON NOTE.

An action was brought in the Superior Court yesterday by Frank Burkhardt against Dr. Oriof N. Orlow, who achieved a certain notoriety in this city some time ago through his connection with a Persian rug deal, and Mary M. and Katherine M. Rice.

The complaint alleges that August 5, 1908, Orlow gave a note for $2000 to G. M. Hillwig, payable December 5, following, secured by a chattel mortgage on an automobile, and the signatures on the note of Mary M. and Katherine M. Rice. It is further said that the note and mortgage were afterward transferred to Burkhardt, and that no part of the note or interest has been paid by either Orlow or his sureties.

The prayer of the petition is for a foreclosure of the chattel mortgage, with the further judgment that the defendants be compelled to pay any deficiencies arising between the amount received from the sale of the machine and the claim, with interest.

NEW ATTORNEYS.

IN MITCHELL KILLING CASE.

That both the people and the defense will make a supreme effort in the second trial of William C. Mitchell, charged with the murder of Cecil Thayer, to be called in Judge Willis's court Wednesday, is shown in the change of attorneys on both sides.

On account of the professional duties of Earl Rogers in the Calhoun case, just closed in San Francisco, at the time of the first trial, he could not take part in the defense, but it is announced that he will have entire charge of the accused's interests this week. Deputy District Attorney Horton will represent the prosecution.

Additional witnesses have been summoned, and it is expected that the second hearing will be of as much absorbing interest as the initial trial that resulted in a disagreement of the jury, that body standing seven to five for the acquittal of the alleged murderer, when discharged by the court.

TO HIGHEST COURT.

GOES THE PASADENA CASE.

In the action brought by the Sunset Telephone and Telegraph Company against the city of Pasadena, involving the right of the plaintiff corporation to occupy the streets, the company yesterday gave formal notice of its intention to appeal from the judgment of Judge Bordwell, rendered May 27, dissolving the temporary injunction, to the Supreme Court of the State.

At the same time there was also submitted from the Sunset attorneys, Pillsbury, Madison & Sutro, of San Francisco, notice of intention to press a motion for a new trial of the case, on the ground of irregularity of the proceedings of the court, both on the part of the court and the defendants, by which, it is claimed, the plaintiffs were prevented from having a fair trial. The motion as to these charges will be based upon affidavits hereafter to be prepared.

DATE DETERMINED.

FOR BROKER BROWN'S HEARING.

Judge Davis yesterday fixed Tuesday as the time for the trial of Harry D. Brown, the broker, who was brought from the north some time ago to answer to the charge of embezzlement, for Tuesday. The complaint upon which the accused will be tried is that of Dr. Nettie E. Hammond, who alleges that on February 5 last, she gave Brown $800 to invest for her account in Missouri Pacific stock, which he neglected to do, appropriating the money to his own use.

Patricio Espinosa, charged with making an assault with a deadly weapon upon Amada Gomez, was given until Tuesday to plead, as his attorney did not appear in court. Espinosa declares that he will plead not guilty when the case against him is again called.

FRAUD ALLEGED.

IN SALE OF OIL COMPANY.

Fraud is charged against Richard Arnez, president, and W. H. Fuller, secretary, treasurer and director of the Elk Consolidated Oil Company, in a complaint filed in the Superior Court yesterday, in behalf of T. W. Whittier, W. E. Thornton and J. A. Henderson. The suit is brought on behalf of these plaintiffs and other stockholders.

It is alleged the Elk Consolidated Oil Company owns 400 acres of oil-bearing land in Ventura county, and that it is an Arizona corporation. It is further charged that on February 8, 1909, these defendants went to Phoenix, Ariz., held what was called a directors' meeting, and agreed to transfer the property to the White Star Oil Company of California. The two constituted a majority of the board of directors, but it is now contended on the part of the stockholders that the action was illegal, and they ask that the proceedings be declared null and void; also that the court interfere to prevent the carrying out of the compact entered into by the defendants.

The plaintiffs ask $175,000 damages, which, they say, represents the value of the stock of the concern, based on the worth of the property. The usual allegations of fraud are made in connection with the transaction.

COURTHOUSE NOTES.

BREVITIES MISCELLANEOUS.

DESIRE TO ADOPT. Franklin E., and Amy Lee Bannister filed a petition in the Superior Court yesterday, asking for permission to adopt Violet A. Hoglund, whose father is dead, and whose mother is now residing in Nome, Alaska. The child is sixteen months old.

INCORPORATIONS. Papers in the following incorporations were filed in the office of the clerk, yesterday: Dragoon Copperfields Company, capital stock, $200,000, by Richard Gird, William K. Gird, M. M. O'Gorman and H. Bert Ellis; Christian Assembly, by Finetta Weiss, Emma Weiss, Mary J. Mann, Maggie J. Alloway and J. P. Alloway; Hawthorne Electric Water Company, capital stock, $50,000, by H. D. Lombard, B. L. Harding, F. V. Gentry, C. F. Tansey and Alfred W. Allen.

VERDICT FOR PLAINTIFF. Judge Church yesterday gave Ray Hawley a verdict for $2750, in his action against the Los Angeles Creamery Company, for injuries alleged to have been received by the runaway of a team belonging to the defendant. It was claimed that the harness on the horses was defective, and that the defendant had knowledge of that fact.

ACROSS THE PACIFIC.

A German firm in China has had considerable success during the past few months in securing contracts for the erection of electric lighting plants in the Far East. It is a Berlin firm and has branch houses in Shanghai, Tsingtan, Hankow, Tientsin and other large Far Eastern ports, keeping a full supply of electric machinery, supplies, etc., at each place, with sample apparatus in operation. Plants have been erected and started at Kirin and Soochow. A contract has been secured to light Mukden, Manchuria, a city of 180,000 people, says a consular report.

Manila now has the United States Shoe Company, with a capital of 400,000 pesos ($200,000.) This is the outgrowth of a small private concern, started since American occupation.

Exploration in Chinese Turkestan has earned for Stein, the explorer, honors from the Royal Geographical Society of England.

Hongkong University (new) received $200,000 in donations on British Empire Day in June.

The Manila Times says that the Manila Electric Railroad is further extending its lines, and putting steamer services on Laguna Bay, for the benefit of the entire metropolitan district, and all the towns on the lake.

It is well that the Philippine Bureau of Forestry is educating the Filipinos as to the great value of their forests. Recently they destroyed 600 acres of valuable trees in Northern Negros, worth many thousands of pesos, to make fields for raising rice worth only a few hundreds. Moreover the forests are the property of the whole people—not of a single section.

The people of the province of Camarines, Philippines, are non-Christian. "As late as June, 1906, they were living almost as savages," says Division School Superintendent Frank Crone: "and the children were dirty, timid and uninstructed. Many of the old men were persons who had committed horrible crimes during the Spanish régime. Now there is (at the settlement of Consisen) a neat and well-kept schoolhouse of two rooms. The children are bright, clean, polite and happy. The old folks have caught the spirit of modern progress and greet one in a simple and kindly way. A number of houses have been built near the school, with beds of flowers and ornamental plants around them. There is also a large school garden and a made road up the hill to the school. Two brief years have worked wonders with these people."

Bishop Brent of the Philippines is starting a new sectarian school at Baguio, P. I., for the boys of American families resident in the islands, fitting them for entrance to the average American university.

The Prince Regent of China is making things much easier for the editors of the vernacular press. The press regulations have been made less stringent. A newspaper printed in both Chinese and English will shortly appear in Peking.

The Tokio, Yokohama, Kyoto, Osaka and Kobe Chambers of Commerce will likely visit the United States.

The Nippon Yusen Kaisha (Japan Steamship Company) has earned a profit of 1,000,000 yen ($500,000) this half year, and will pay its usual half-yearly dividend of 6 per cent.

Two thousand and seventy-nine Americans and 4080 Filipinos, in all 6559 persons, comprise the civil service of the government of the Philippine Islands. The yearly total for salaries is $11,436,091 pesos ($5,718,045.) The average American salary is 3126 pesos ($1563.) while the Filipinos get 904 pesos ($452.) The Filipinos are getting twice as much as is paid in other parts of the Orient for similar work done by native people. In five years 298 Americans have been replaced by 1383 Filipinos in subordinate positions. In other words, one American was doing more work than four Filipinos are doing now.

Referring to the decline in the trade of Hongkong, A. S. D. Cousland, secretary of the Hongkong branch of the China Association, says: "The Japanese have taken the Newchwang trade, which used to be in Hongkong hands, and have also captured that carried on between Japan and Singapore and the Dutch Indies, with a detrimental effect on the sugar trade with Java. Rice now goes direct to Peru from Siam, instead of through Hongkong. Kerosene oil is imported to the treaty ports in bulk, instead of being distributed here. Flour, which used to be imported here and distributed far north and south, is shipped direct to Shanghai, Chefoo, Tientsin and Vladivostok; and Singapore now draws direct on Australia for the requirements of the Straits Settlements. Other less important lines have been diverted for good."

The Philippine budget for 1909-10 calls for expenditure of 16,500,000 pesos ($8,250,000) or 1,000,000 pesos ($500,000) less than for 1908-9.

Calcutta, India, is to have a new hotel of spacious dimensions and architectural beauty.

The Manila Daily Bulletin says, "Philippine business interests have confidence in Acting Gov.-Gen. Cameron Forbes."

Accusation is publicly made in Yokohama that the Japanese are condemning American products under pretext of enforcing a "pure-food law," never before heard of by dealers.

The city of Iloilo, P. I., wants to borrow 300,000 pesos ($150,000) in the United States to construct a modern sewer and water system in that municipality.

Japanese emigration to Peru continues. Twelve hundred went recently and two thousand more are required this year.

The Philippine Assembly has passed a compulsory education law, except for proven cases of education by parents or by private teachers.

Pretty Teeth For You

You owe it to yourself to have pretty teeth.

Before the discovery of the Rex Dental Co.'s method people had to take what was sent to them in the way of teeth and be resigned to their fate.

Not so today.

This is one of the places where we can improve on nature.

The Rex Dental Co.'s teeth, which are put in the mouth without the aid of plates or ordinary bridge work, can only be compared to perfect natural teeth, and at that, it is seldom that one sees as pretty teeth, even when nature has tried to do her best.

In nearly every case there is some defect, due to ignorant dental work, or disease, or because, as we said before, nature has been unkind when she was distributing the teeth.

It is hardly necessary to ask you if you want a set of pretty teeth, for there isn't a man or woman on earth but has that desire.

The question lies entirely with you.

The Rex Dental Co.'s teeth are here for you.

The first step to take is to pay a visit to one of our offices to have a free examination made of your mouth.

Why don't you do this right away?

We make no charge for the service, and you do not obligate yourself in any way simply because you come for this examination.

It is just possible that you are not near enough to call at once, in which case you can find out about The Rex Dental Co.'s Method by reading

Our Free Book About Teeth

Forty pages beautifully illustrated and filled with useful information about the teeth and their care.

If you will send for this book and read it carefully you will make up your mind that you will have a set of The Rex Dental Co.'s teeth even if you have to travel half way across the continent to get to our nearest office.

Write today while the subject is fresh in your mind.

Dainty, Distinctive Wall Papers Specially Designed for the Bedroom

It is not so much the cost of the wall paper as it is the taste and judgment you put into its selection that makes for real beauty and harmony in the bedroom.

HARRIMAN AND ASSOCIATED.

San Francisco Reports Say He Controls It.

No Confirmation But Many Believe Story.

Speculation Rife; Insiders Say Porter Stays.

The circulation of rumors about the Associated and its management continues. At San Francisco it is reported, and apparently believed, that the Harriman interests, that have long owned a large block of stock—just how large the public has never heard positively—have obtained the control. Under the pooling arrangement the present directors, who are also trustees, constitute a self-perpetuating body for twenty years, of which time about eight years have expired. Presumably they would have the strict right to remain in office no matter who had the majority of the stock, but on the other hand, Mr. Harriman might find ways to make his influence effective, if he so wished. If the Espee officials really have control it is likely that they bought out some of the present directors.

All kinds of rumors continue about pending changes in the directorate, but none are yet in evidence. No one here in the Associated has yet admitted them.

In the same connection Mr. Porter's retirement is constantly spoken of, despite all denials. Papers in the valley oil fields have nominated in turn as his successor M. H. Whittier, now an Associated director; A. D'Heur, a Southern Pacific engineering official, now at the head of the rifled pipe-line; John Baker, Jr., former general manager of the Union, and a Mr. McIntyre, an eastern man. Meanwhile Mr. Porter is in Europe and his assistant, Mr. Scribner, still in office acting as general manager. The three directors of the Associated in Los Angeles have all denied positively that Mr. Porter is to retire.

Some now think he may remain, but certain changes may be made in his staff and in the details of policy.

Palmer's Dividends.

Last month the eastern extension of the Santa Maria oil field was placed on the list of dividend-paying oil territories. In that month the Palmer Oil Company, the pioneer operator in the eastern extension, paid its first dividend, the rate being 2 per cent. on the issued capital stock, which amounts to about 1,700,000 shares of the 2,000,000 shares for which the company is incorporated, and calling for the payment to the stockholders of something over $34,000. Dividends at the same rate have been announced for July, August and September. The company has on hand about $300,000 in cash, of which about $170,000 has been set aside solely for dividend paying. The company has produced about 450,000 barrels since the first of the year, all of which has been taken under purchasing contracts made with the Associated and Union. Each of these have contracted for 2,000,000 barrels, the Associated being obligated to take a minimum of 1500 barrels a day, and the Union a minimum of 4000 barrels a day. The Associated pays 50 cents per barrel fo rthe oil at the well, and the Union 55 cents; in each instance the buying company, at great expense, constructed a pipe line from its main system, about five miles away, to the Palmer well in order to secure the oil at the prices quoted.

The contract with the Associated was made about a year ago, soon after it was apparent that the Palmer Company would have a fine producing well. Additional pumping facilities are being put in so as to increase the ability of the buying companies to handle the oil and it is expected that very shortly the two companies will be taking between them 10,000 barrels a day, which it is believed Palmer No. 1 can furnish for sometime, if called upon to do it. Last week, and the early part of this week, it experienced several strenuous spurts going at the rate of 20,000 barrels a day for awhile.

All the demands, however, for oil, will not be imposed upon Well No. 1, for the company's well No. 2, on the Stendall Ranch, a tract of 400 acres owned by the company, about two miles east of the Blochman tract, on which Well No. 1 is situated, is nearly ready to produce and it is expected will prove as prodigious as No. 1. Wells No. 2 and 4 are being drilled on the Blochman tract, No. 3 being down about 1700 feet and giving excellent indications.

The Palmer Company has under construction a reservoir that will have a capacity of 100,000 barrels, which with the storage facilities already possessed by the company, will enable it to care for such sudden outbursts as have at intervals characterized its No. 1 and prevent any loss.

The Henderson Oil Company, adjoining the Palmer's Stendall ranch property on the west, has its well No. 1 down 2000 feet, and the Brooks Oil Company with 160-acres adjoining the Stendall Ranch on the south, has its well down 2570 feet. Each is capable of producing at the rate of 500 barrels a day, although not near completion, a stage that it is expected will be reached at about 3000 feet. Each of these companies has contracted for the sale of one-half million barrels of oil with the Union Oil Company at 50, 55 and 60 cents per barrel. Both companies are headed by B. F. Brooks, who participated in the management of several of the best known companies organized to operate in the Kern River field.

It is understood that L. E. Blochman, the owner of the 160-acre tract on which Palmer Well No. 1 is located, has sold one-half interests in the royalties he receives from the Palmer Company for a large sum.

MIRACLE EXPOSED.

A Treat for the Home People and Many Visitors During Elks' Week.

The "Legion of St. Hubert," the fake miracle painting by Artist Joseph Greenbaum and Chemist G. A. Bobrick will be seen at the Made in Southern California Exposition during Elks' week. The history of this work is still fresh in the minds of the people of Los Angeles. The "Miracle" painting was exhibited in Los Angeles recently when G. A. Bobrick declared it was a fake. The owners challenged him to produce one like it. In a few days Mr. Bobrick made the chemicals, and Joseph Greenbaum painted "The Legion of St. Hubert," which represents St. Hubert in the act of shooting an Elk when, to his surprise there appears before him a cross between the antlers, which restrains him from shooting.

The illusion will be shown daily at the exposition during Elks' week, but no extra charge will be made to see it. Concerts will be given every afternoon and evening.

THE OIL INDUSTRY.

HARRIMAN AND ASSOCIATED.

San Francisco Reports Say He Controls It.

No Confirmation But Many Believe Story.

Speculation Rife; Insiders Say Porter Stays.

The circulation of rumors about the Associated and its management continues. At San Francisco it is reported, and apparently believed, that the Harriman interests, that have long owned a large block of stock—just how large the public has never heard positively—have obtained the control. Under the pooling arrangement the present directors, who are also trustees, constitute a self-perpetuating body for twenty years, of which time about eight years have expired. Presumably they would have the strict right to remain in office no matter who had the majority of the stock, but on the other hand, Mr. Harriman might find ways to make his influence effective, if he so wished. If the Espee officials really have control it is likely that they bought out some of the present directors.

All kinds of rumors continue about pending changes in the directorate, but none are yet in evidence. No one here in the Associated has yet admitted them.

In the same connection Mr. Porter's retirement is constantly spoken of, despite all denials. Papers in the valley oil fields have nominated in turn as his successor M. H. Whittier, now an Associated director; A. D'Heur, a Southern Pacific engineering official, now at the head of the rifled pipe-line; John Baker, Jr., former general manager of the Union, and a Mr. McIntyre, an eastern man. Meanwhile Mr. Porter is in Europe and his assistant, Mr. Scribner, still in office acting as general manager. The three directors of the Associated in Los Angeles have all denied positively that Mr. Porter is to retire.

Some now think he may remain, but certain changes may be made in his staff and in the details of policy.

Palmer's Dividends.

Last month the eastern extension of the Santa Maria oil field was placed on the list of dividend-paying oil territories. In that month the Palmer Oil Company, the pioneer operator in the eastern extension, paid its first dividend, the rate being 2 per cent. on the issued capital stock, which amounts to about 1,700,000 shares of the 2,000,000 shares for which the company is incorporated, and calling for the payment to the stockholders of something over $34,000. Dividends at the same rate have been announced for July, August and September. The company has on hand about $300,000 in cash, of which about $170,000 has been set aside solely for dividend paying. The company has produced about 450,000 barrels since the first of the year, all of which has been taken under purchasing contracts made with the Associated and Union. Each of these have contracted for 2,000,000 barrels, the Associated being obligated to take a minimum of 1500 barrels a day, and the Union a minimum of 4000 barrels a day. The Associated pays 50 cents per barrel fo rthe oil at the well, and the Union 55 cents; in each instance the buying company, at great expense, constructed a pipe line from its main system, about five miles away, to the Palmer well in order to secure the oil at the prices quoted.

The contract with the Associated was made about a year ago, soon after it was apparent that the Palmer Company would have a fine producing well. Additional pumping facilities are being put in so as to increase the ability of the buying companies to handle the oil and it is expected that very shortly the two companies will be taking between them 10,000 barrels a day, which it is believed Palmer No. 1 can furnish for sometime, if called upon to do it. Last week, and the early part of this week, it experienced several strenuous spurts going at the rate of 20,000 barrels a day for awhile.

All the demands, however, for oil, will not be imposed upon Well No. 1, for the company's well No. 2, on the Stendall Ranch, a tract of 400 acres owned by the company, about two miles east of the Blochman tract, on which Well No. 1 is situated, is nearly ready to produce and it is expected will prove as prodigious as No. 1. Wells No. 2 and 4 are being drilled on the Blochman tract, No. 3 being down about 1700 feet and giving excellent indications.

The Palmer Company has under construction a reservoir that will have a capacity of 100,000 barrels, which with the storage facilities already possessed by the company, will enable it to care for such sudden outbursts as have at intervals characterized its No. 1 and prevent any loss.

The Henderson Oil Company, adjoining the Palmer's Stendall ranch property on the west, has its well No. 1 down 2000 feet, and the Brooks Oil Company with 160-acres adjoining the Stendall Ranch on the south, has its well down 2570 feet. Each is capable of producing at the rate of 500 barrels a day, although not near completion, a stage that it is expected will be reached at about 3000 feet. Each of these companies has contracted for the sale of one-half million barrels of oil with the Union Oil Company at 50, 55 and 60 cents per barrel. Both companies are headed by B. [illegible] Brooks, who participated in the management of several of the best known companies organized to operate in the Kern River field.

It is understood that L. E. Blochman, the owner of the 160-acre tract on which Palmer Well No. 1 is located, has sold one-half interests in the royalties he receives from the Palmer Company for a large sum.

MINES AND MINING—Activities in the Ore Districts of the Great Southwest

ARIZONA.

MILLION AND HALF OUTPUT.

Gold Roads Expected to Be Great Producer.

Electricity to Operate All Machinery.

Tom Reed Gives Six Hundred-Dollar Values.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

PHOENIX (Ariz.) July 2.—It is expected that during the next twelve months the output of the Gold Roads mine in Mohave county will be about $1,500,000. About 100 men are at work on the property and the mill will soon be in operation, its machinery propelled by electricity from a new power plant just finished in Kingman. Everything about the camp will have electric propulsion. The new mill will have capacity for 300 tons a day, with an especially complete cyanide plant. It is claimed that enough ore is blocked in the mine to supply $20 a ton rock for several years to come. One vein on the 100-foot level has been followed for 1300 feet, with an average width of fifteen feet. The mill will be in operation by September 1, when the working force will be more than doubled.

In the same neighborhood the Tom Reed mine is materializing as the greatest gold producer of Arizona. On the surface were only low-grade ores, but it has been absolutely established that at 250 feet depth the whole width of a winze averages $600 a ton. A new 100-ton mill is being built, and is badly needed, for only one carload of ore can be put through the present mill without cleaning up, even though a large proportion of low-grade ore is mixed with the high grade for greater economy in reduction. It is said that the mill is cleaning up about $2000 a day, working in this manner. With the new mill an average output of $200,000 a month is expected. The ore body on the 250-foot level has an average width of ten feet. A new working shaft with three compartments is being sunk from which to supply the new mill.

Near Kingman the Bimetallic mill of ten stamps, considered merely as a testing plant, has cleaned up about $100 profit a day. Thirty additional stamps are to be added, as well as a couple of tube mills. The ore body is one of the largest in the Territory.

At Union Pass the Exposition Gold Mining Company is building a thirty-ton mill to work a large body of gold ore said to average $100 a ton. It is claimed that for over 100 feet a shaft has passed through ore of this value. Further development is being made by means of a tunnel which will run under this bonanza ore body.

High grade ore has been found at a depth in the old silver mines at White Hills, and considerable prospecting is being done under the old-time workings.

AROUND JEROME.

For the past week 600 horse-power has been sent to Jerome over the wires of the Arizona Power Company, to be used by the United Verde Company, which has contracted for over 1500 horse-power. Of the 10,000 available, Jerome alone will consume 2500. Poland will be reached within a couple of weeks, and the entire Bradshaw region is to use the power, making a very serious difference in the amount of fuel oil shipped to Arizona from Southern California.

About the last suit of importance against the Arizona Smelting Company has just been dismissed in Prescott, being a claim of $200,000, made by the banking house of Miller, Shaw & Co. of New York. It is understood that the matter was settled out of court.

Capital has been secured in Pittsburgh for the further development of the property of the Arizona Central Copper Company in Black Hills district near Jerome. Manager J. B. Cleveland has gone to Los Angeles to purchase additonal machinery. The mine will be equipped with electrical machinery and will be furnished power from the Fossil Creek works.

A concentrating plant is to be ordered at once for the Savoy mines in the Bradshaw Mountains, near Tiger. The main ore bodies of the Savoy are a continuation of those of the old Tiger mine, and run high in silver and lead. The main tunnel has reached a depth of 1800 feet, insuring economical extraction.

The Prescott Dredge Mining Company is a new enterprise which will work placer ground on Lynx Creek next to the property of the Spec Mining Company. The dredging equipment for the new corporation will be built entirely in Prescott.

At a late meeting of the stockholders of the Johnson Copper Company, instructions were given the manager to sink the main shaft to a depth of 1000 feet, from the 200-foot level. In the same camp, work has been resumed on the Republic and Mammoth mines, on which will soon be built a smelter with 125 tons daily capacity. Much of the machinery has already been shipped, and there is a possibility that the plant may be producing matte within two months.

D. W. Brown has bonded five claims in Turquoise district for $75,000.

F. G. Burmody and W. P. Wright have sold for $60,000 eight claims near Paradise. The purchasers are represented by B. Q. Musgrave, who is also negotiating for the well-known Turkey Creek property in the same locality.

BISBEE AND CLIFTON.

The Denn strike at Bisbee is getting bigger and better. The west drift on the 1200-foot level is in 12 per cent. sulphide ore, in a vein believed to be forty feet wide. Of this, the high grade is found within about four feet, the balance of the mineralized zone running better than 3 per cent.

An immense amount of work has been started near Clifton by the Copper Mines Company of Arizona, which has options on about 100 mining claims in the Clifton-Morenci district. The new Shannon-Arizona railroad passes over much of the company's ground. Large returns are understood to have been received from a number of shipments made by the Shannon smelter from claims near Longfellow, leased by W. L. Austin of Los Angeles.

PURCHASE DROPPED.

The purchase of the Van mine at Pilares, near Nacozari, has been dropped by a French company which was to have paid $500,000 in gold for the property. In the past five months about 1600 feet of work has been done on the mine.

A mass of quartz, containing gold believed to be worth more than $1000, was lately picked up near Payson, Northern Gila county, by S. A. Haught, a former member of the Arizona Legislature. A large number of prospectors are scouring the country trying to find the spot from which the rich float came. J. B. Newman of Globe owns several claims near by.

Lafe Brunson and Gus Alsted of Phoenix have just returned after a visit to the new oil fields twenty-two miles northeast of Agua Caliente, in Western Maricopa county. At the bottom of a 160-foot shaft, gas has accumulated to such an extent that sinking has had to be stopped. The shaft was sunk by a California man named Loudermilk, on a good silver and lead vein. He is arranging to bring in a drill, and has sent for a Standard Oil expert, on whose advice he will drill his first hole. A large number of claims have been taken up in the vicinity.

Near these oil fields, in yellow and blue clay, are to be found brilliants in large quantities, stones which approximate the diamond in luster and hardness.

NORTH CALIFORNIA.

BIG DEALS IN SHASTA BELT.

NEVADA MEN MUCH INTERESTED NEAR REDDING.

Oil Men Also Go Into Syndicate to Buy and Develop the Red Metal. Siskiyou Also Scene of Much Work. Lawsuit Over Alleghany Property in San Francisco.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

REDDING (Cal.) July 1.—The Shasta Copper Belt has been the scene of several important deals in the past week, many of which will have a paramount influence on the future of the district. One of the most momentous was the acquisition of 760 acres of rich copper lands near Kennett by the Shasta Exploration Company, a corporation embracing large oil interests and some of the wealthiest mining men in California. About 4000 feet of diamond drilling will be immediately commenced and the holdings thoroughly opened up and rendered available for early operations. The lands lie in one of the richest sections of the Shasta copper fields and close to several prominent producers. M. E. Dittmar, one of the most prominent mining men in the North, will have charge of operations.

The Uncle Sam gold mine was sold a few days ago by Fred H. Dakin to A. L. McIntosh and I. O. Jillson for a price said to approximate $100,000. The purchasers are prominent mining men of this city and will at once commence the operation of the famous property on a comprehensive scale. The Uncle Sam has been a profitable producer for over fifteen years and recent discoveries in the lower levels indicate that the property is entering on a nw era of prosperity.

The Mad Ox mine at Whiskeytown was acquired last Saturday by H. L. Berkey and associates of Nevada for $40,000. The new owners state that the property will be more thoroughly equipped with modern machinery and comprehensively worked. The Mad Ox has been a noted producer of high-grade ore for several years and is highly regarded by local mining men. It is reported that the Nevadans are considering the acquisition of several other properties in this section.

The Friday-Lowden Company, owning a group of copper claims between the Balkiala, and Mammoth mines, is arranging for immediate operations. Extensive diamond drilling has demonstrated large reserves of good-grade ore at depth while considerable ore has been developed in the upper workings. A tramway will be immediately constructed to enable rapid shipment of ore from the mines to the railroad, from which point it can be conveniently transported to the Balaklala and Mammoth smelter. The Balaklala plant is only operating two units on its own ore and is in a position to handle much custom ore from near-by properties. The revival in copper mining throughout Shasta county is strongly marked, numerous properties that have been closed since the drop in copper, taking on new life, while a large number of copper prospects are receiving much attention. The Mammoth is running four furnaces steadily and the Balaklala is producing about 1,000,000 pounds of blister copper monthly. The Bully Hill plant at Delamar is operating two furnaces and the converter department. The Mountain Copper expects to resume shipments in a few days.

SISKIYOU COUNTY.

The Happy Camp copper region, Siskiyou county, is attracting much attention from English and American capitalists and gives indications of developing into one of the great red-metal districts of California. The Mines Finance Company of London has been particularly active in exploiting this region and has acquired 300 acres of valuable lands by direct purchase in addition to securing options on a large number of promising claims. The company is actively developing its holdings and, if developments warrant, a smelter and railroad will be constructed to handle the immense deposits, a good percentage of which carries high value but developments have not progressed sufficiently to determine the presistency of the lodes at depth. The Klamath River traverses the district and water power and timber may be obtained in practically unlimited quantities. The district is located seventy-five miles from Yreka.

The celebrated Keystone mine at Jackson has passed into the hands of the California Consolidated Mines Company for an amount said to approximate $200,000. The Keystone for many years was the premier producer of the mother lode and of late has been operated with marked success. The new owners will install heavier machinery, increase the working force and operate the mine on a more comprehensive scale. The purchasers also own the Wildman, Mahoney, Lincoln and other properties at Sutter Creek.

ANGELENO IN PLACER.

W. S. Fletcher of Los Angeles is increasing the capacity of the Home Ticket mine, near Auburn, and completing other improvements preliminary to the operation of the property on a large scale. The rich gravel channel has been opened up for an extended distance, and every foot prospects good values. When the work under way has been completed, and active operations are in full swing, the Home Ticket is expected to prove one of the richest producers in Placer county. Fletcher is also paying considerable attention to gravel properties in the Michigan Bluff section. A rich body of gravel has been opened at the El Dorado, and several drifts are being driven to thoroughly develop the channel.

MORE LITIGATION.

Following the filing of a sensational suit before Superior Judge Cabaniss of San Francisco by M. Vander Beugle of that city against E. H. Wilson, owner of the Sixteen-to-One mine at Alleghany, the famous property is in the hands of a receiver, and a keeper has been appointed to take charge of the $400,000 ore stored in the vaults of the Citizens' Bank at Nevada City.

In his complaint, Vander Beugle charges that he was Wilson's partner, and that the latter secured possession of the Sixteen-to-One and Bonanza King mines through false representation. Judge Cabanniss appointed Henry C. McPike receiver, and the property will be operated under his charge until further action is taken by the courts. Wilson asserts that the suit is simply blackmail, and that at the proper time he will produce proof to show that plaintiff's claims are groundless. Included with Wilson as defendants are T. A. Bradbury, Thomas Bradbury and Y. C. Lauson of Alleghany, the original owners of the Sixteen-to-One. Both sides have retained eminent legal talent, and the contest promises to be bitterly contested.

The boom at Alleghany shows no sign of abating, and capital is coming in from all points. Nearly every day a deal is recorded, and an immense amount of prospecting is going on. The proposition to establish a stock exchange devoted to Alleghany stocks is meeting with much approval, and it is possible the something of this nature will be attempted. M. Camp and M. E. Ish of Goldfield are particularly interested, and are at Alleghany looking into the practicability of such an innovation. It is pointed out that such an institution would be of inestimable benefit in bringing the district to the greatest prominence before the public, but the Goldfield brokers will not undertake its inception unless they are confident of its successful operation. They point out that with the exception of the Goldfield Exchange, failure has attended the inception of such institutions in the boom camps.

Secretary S. M. Steifer of the Steifer Mining Company states that forty men are working on the reconstruction of the power plant and flumes at Magalia, and that seventy-five men will soon be working on the dam. Machinery is on the way from San Francisco, and will immediately be placed in position. As soon as this work has been completed, it is stated that activities at the mines will be commenced.

UNWATERING OLD COMSTOCK.

ASSOCIATION WILL SPEND LOT OF MONEY THUS.

Company That Has Held Aloof at Last Comes in—New Equipment to Be Installed—Movement Started in New York to Get Conflicting Interests Together.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

VIRGINIA CITY (Nev.) July 1.—The Comstock Pumping Association, composed of all the companies on the Comstock lode, has appropriated from its treasury surplus $25,000 to be used in equipping the Ward shaft with two new pumps of the plunger type to handle the water that will be drawn from the lower levels of the Gould & Curry, Savage, Hale and Norcross, Chollar, Potosi and other mines of the middle group of the Comstock properties.

The intention is to connect the Ward shaft with the openings south of the Combination shaft on the 2540-foot level. Already a drift has been started northerly from the Ward shaft on that level. By the time the connection is made the new pumps will be installed and water will be drawn from the Combination shaft, which is the natural sump of the middle mines of the Ward shaft, and pumped up to the tunnel level, and there discharged.

It is stated that the Hale and Norcross Mining Company, which has hitherto held back in pumping matters, has voluntarily joined the others in this undertaking and will contribute its pro rata toward the expense. These efforts to revive the Comstock and utilize its known resources are in the right direction. The recent revival in the Comstock seems to be due in large part to the adoption of definite plans to drain the lower levels of the middle mines and resume development work at deep points where ore of commercial value is know to exist in large quantities.

The movement has been taken up in New York, where there is an attempt to consolidate and ring together the varying conflicting forces that have made the Comstocks the football of the speculators for the last twenty years. The mines in this vicinity have splendid reserves, but the assessment system that has been universally denounced has been the bane of progress and the drawback to development. It is now proposed that the Comstocks be consolidated either in a working or merger agreement to the end that they may be developed for all they are worth and that the stockholders get the benefit of the economy of the arrangement. It is a matter of surprise that something of this kind has not been done heretofore, as it is notorious that the old Comstocks have lots of valuable ore that can be extracted at the present market prices, if the companies would only unite on a comprehensive system of development. The New York interests are working to that end and there is no reason why the consummation should not be heralded at an early day.

Flos Ferri and Iron Oxides.

LOS ANGELES, May 25.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Enclosed find specimens of mineral numbered 1, 2 and 3. Please classify them and state if they are of any commercial value. They are from San Diego County, near Escondido.

Yours respectfully, C. E. S.

ANSWER: One sample carries pyrite and pyrrhotite (magnetic pyrite) with iron oxides and traces of nickel. A second specimen is banded silicate of lime, carbonate and aluminum with soda and magnesium present in low percentages. The third specimen is known as "flowers of iron" rather an odd califlower shape and Zeolitic. The samples were not tagged or numbered.

Clay Values Doubtful.

CORONA, June 3.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Samples 1 and 2 come from Chuckawalla Springs, Colorado desert, Riverside county. Please give "In the Earth" if valuable as clay.

G. P.

ANSWER. No. 1 is intermediate between talc and Fuller's earth. No. 2 is a dark, impure calciferous aluminum silicate and iron oxide. Mix the two. Clinker by heat. Powder the clinker and try it for cement.

Where Irrigation Fails.

"Pop!"

"Yes, my son."

"What do they irrigate land for?"

"To raise things, my boy."

"But can't they raise things without irrigating?"

"No; irrigating is resorted to in countries where they have no rain."

"And do they raise everything when they irrigate?"

"Everything but umbrellas, my son."—[Yonkers Statesman.

Test for Metals.

A new test for ascertaining the hardness of metals has been proposed by W. I. Ballentine. A disk of metal is attached to the lower side of a drop weight, which falls on an anvil. The anvil carries a pin on its upper side, which rests in contact with the piece of metal to be tested. The diminution in thickness of the disk is the measure of hardness.

NEVADA.

LIDA DISTRICT TO THE FRONT.

Property, Once Abandoned, in Rich Ore.

Region Credited With Many Sorts of Wealth.

Diamondfield Booms Without Press Agent.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

GOLDFIELD (Nev.) July 2.—One of the most striking discoveries made in the Lida district during the last twenty years was reported from that quarter late in the week from the shaft of the New Centennial property at a depth of about 140 feet. The ore encountered is what is known as the "black metal," running in some cases as high as 3000 ounces of silver to the ton and very similar to that which has made Lucky Boy famous as a silver camp. The ledge comes into the shaft from the north side and dips at a sharp angle apparently directly through it. Sufficient depth has not been made into the ledge to determine its extent, but it is the belief of those in charge that it will probably go between three and four feet in width.

The same character of ore in smaller quantities has been found in spots through the ground, but nothing like a permanent body was locatel until this shoot was entered this week. For some time the men have been engaged drifting and crosscutting and within the past month it was determined to go deeper. With this object in view steam drills were installed and 100 feet of extra sinking was begun. The management, after an exhaustive examination of the block, became confident of entering a rich shoot, but did not look for important values to show at less than the next hundred feet, and can only attribute the unexpected intrusion of the ledge to the fact that it left its ordinary dip and suddenly turned toward the shaft. However it was noticed by the miners that the formation indicated a decided improvement in the quality of quartz.

Specimens of the rock brought to Goldfield yesterday are heavy with the black metal and it is estimated by several who saw them that the ore would run in the neighborhood of $1000 per ton. With anything like a body of this stuff the owners can readily claim possession of the richest bonanza outside the gold belt that has been proven. It is not ligely that when the ledge has been thoroughly explored that the values will be maintained at this enormous figure, although it is believed that a good paying proposition has been found.

The history of this old district teems with legends regarding lost mines, lost ore shoots of untold riches, pockets containing tens of thousands and for years it has been impossible to shake the faith of old prospectors in the belief that the scorned Lida district would yet bring forth a bonanza. Prospectors have searched the rugged mountains close to the borders of Inyo county, Cal., and fine values have been obtained in more than one spot, but the hidden wealth so long dreamed of has remained undiscovered.

On this same ground in the eighties, when the property was known as the Old Centennial, one of the richest pieces of ground in this State, was worked out yielding approximately $200,000. Pay values were found at a depth of thirty-five feet apparently as unexpectedly as the present find and today a visitor is shown where the stope found its way through to the surface some sixty feet north of where the present shaft is located. The ground was then abandoned with the conviction that the values had ceased and T. B. Rickey, the banker, with others, spent $20,000 without success. Recently the receiver of the State Bank and Trust Company offered the property for sale and failing to get a single bid bought it in for the creditors of the bank for the nominal sum of $3200. Up to this time no action looking to its redemption has been taken.

ACCIDENT TO POWER.

The progress of mining and milling was seriously interfered with by the accident that happened to the Nevada-California Power Company at its generating station in the Owens River Valley when the plant was crippled by the washing out of a dam that allowed the accumulated storm waters of Lake Sabrina to pour down into the valley with unchecked fury. For three days the mills and mines of Southern Nevada, ranging from the placers at Manhattan to the Rhyolite mines on the south, have been shut down for want of power, although the lighting system was restored within twenty-four hours. This has been a serious blow to the bullion production and the ore shipments, as it affected between 2000 and 2500 men. The Consolidated's big mill was furnished with temporary supply, as that company had to have sufficient power to keep its agitators going and prevent heavy losses in the solutions of the cyanide tanks.

RHYOLITE DOINGS.

The Keane Wonder has opened a larger body of ore than any of the phenomenal properties of Pioneer as the company has crosscut forty feet without finding the hanging wall and the ore averages better than $25 with some of it going as high as $60. This ore carries more sulphurets and some lead and is very regular. The crosscut is in the vein opened by the new shaft and is developing a body of ore separate and distinct from that which has been supplying the mill. This immense ore deposit demands increased milling facilities and the development of a greater water supply. The last shipment of bullion including leachings and slag for the last twenty-two days amounted to $21,000.

The Montgomery-Shoshone is making regular weekly shipments that average between $20,000 and $25,000, the last running 11,500 ounces with a valuation of $22,000. Because of recent delays it is planned to overhaul the entire water system installing a new pipe line.

The strike made in the Mayflower last week has opened in grand shape. The body is on the 300 level and in the north drift. During the week the ledge has been penetrated to a considerable extent and to all appearances it is another ore shoot similar to the one that is feeding the mill. Owing to the change of management by which James Foster supersedes Superintendent Additon, it is impossible to procure figures.

DIAMONDFIELD.

While the rest of the region surrounding Goldfield is at a standstill, the old Diamondfield district, three miles from the center of town, where the Golden Daisy is situated, is coming to the front with reports of more strikes that have the advantage of tangibility without the feature of a press bureau attached. The Goldfield Belmont, owned by the Tonopah Belmont Company, with most of the stockholders residing in Philadelphia, has run into a large body of ore northeast of the main Daisy workings. The exact nature of the strike cannot be learned, but reliable information confirms it and gives the ore value at between $80 and $90 per ton. The strike is believed to have been made on what is known as the Graham vein, which traverses that section from northeast to southwest and is the vein on which the Daisy encountered its best values. It runs nearly at right angles with the vein system of the district, it is said, and has yielded some of the richest ore found in that section.

The Golden Daisy lease continues to look like a winner, with constantly improving appearances. The ore recently encountered in the upraise from the east drift on the 360-foot level is holding out and the values are being maintained wihout interruption, while at this time the ore has been opened along the vein for a distance of thirty-five feet. Fifteen tons have been taken from the vein, and the first shipment, that is expected to return $200 per ton, will be sent out this week. One very encouraging feature that is making itself felt is that the rich streak which yields the highest returns is gradually widening and, in places, has reached a width of two feet. This is accepted as a good argument of the permanency of the shoot, while the fact that the vein itself, which measures ten to eleven feet and is perfectly defined, carries values of no mean proportion clear across the breast, ably sustains the argument.

In the same vicinity papers were signed today for a lease taking in the old Detch Brewer workings on the Daisy, which at one time outputted over $150,000 in the course of three weeks, shipping one carload that netted $18,000. The new leasers have ten months to run and reports state that they have exploited the ground so that they are morally certain of picking up the vein where others failed to get a trace. This is in touch with the general trend of interest that has been more evident in the North End than in any other part of the camp.

OLD MONTEZUMA.

The old Montezuma district, that was a shipper long before Goldfield was dreamed of, is to have a mill at last to treat local ores. At least, so says Capt. Barton, who came out from Indiana some three weeks ago for this express purpose. The new mill will be equipped with two batteries of Nissen stamps with a capacity of fifty to sixty tons per day, and part of the plant reserved for custom ores. In years gone by high-grade was extracted from the Montezuma hills and packed muleback to the old smelter at Austin. The low grade, much of which now ranks as high-grade milling, was left in the old workings. The method of mining finally became too costly for profit and the district dropped into desuetude. The construction of the Gold King mill means new life for the entire district, which is situated fifteen miles due west of Goldfield.

THE CONSOLIDATED.

An official estimate of the June production of the Goldfield Consolidated is furnished by A. H. Howe, secretary of the company, as follows: Tons produced, 19,410; net value recovered, $547,000; cost of production, $150,000; net profit, $397,000.

The relatively small tonnage was due to the shut-down of five days caused by suspension of power. Secretary Howe further explains that the policy to avoid high-grade shipments was pursuant to action taken at the last directors' meeting in New York. The policy simply contemplates the mining of ore of the lowest possible grade concurrently with the mining of high-grade and medium ore, thus immediately availing itself of the low-grade values rather than leaving them in the ground for future production. All ores found in the stopes having a value sufficient to afford a profit in treatment will henceforth be stoped at the same time the higher-grade ores are taken out, irrespective of the relation such values may have to any fixed and arbitrary basis of earnings.

The report continues: "While this policy results in a considerable reduction in the value of the ore milled and a consequent lessening of monthly revenue, it follows that the effect will be to save to stockholders values which would either be lost or which would later involve a repetition of mining expense to produce. It is deemed wise to accomplish the production of this ore under an original rather than a secondary mining expense. That the policy will materially enlarge the productive capacity of the property and greatly lengthen its life must be apparent to the most casual observer. The public and stockholders, if they watch our figures from month to month, will readily discover that a continuous production such as we announce for June will serve to pay the company's operating expenses and at the same time maintain dividends at the established rate of 30 cents per share quarterly, and we believe for a longer time by leaving the low-grade ore for future production."

RARE MINERALS, METALLURGY AND CHEMISTRY.

To Correspondents:

This department is not conducted for pay. Its object is to convey reliable information of interest and value to the public, and it is not for the private benefit of any miner, collector, speculator or prospector. Correspondents are particularly cautioned to take careful note of the statements and injunctions contained in the paragraphs below.

(1.) Specimens must be small and bear a tag giving name and address of sender, and the general—not exact—locality from whence the specimen was taken, also the name of it as nearly as the sender knows. Send, also, with the specimen a clearly-written letter briefly describing the find and what the finder wishes done with it. The letter must be properly dated and plainly signed.

Letter and specimen must be in one package, not in separate inclosure.

(2.) No attention will be paid to anonymous letters or to letters signed merely with initials.

(3.) No examinations of samples or specimens will be made in cases where The Times may decide that the specimen and inquiry are not of public interest. This office does not undertake to perform the work of an assay office.

(4.) Inquiries relative to matters of purely personal interest will not be answered.

(5.) When no response to an inquiry made or specimens sent appears in these columns, the inquirer will understand that his inquiry does not come within the purview of this department.

(6.) It is impossible to return specimens, as they must necessarily be destroyed or impaired in the process of analysis.

Not Darton's Test.

LOS ANGELES, June 2.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Your publication of the iodine assay for gold in The Times of May 30 is bound to bring out the assertion that the owner of a prominent prospector's outfit has been "double crossed" and his secret given to the public. Notwithstanding the contributor's statement that he presents the formula, "as the result of much scientific research." The fact of the matter is that the iodine test for gold is an old one, well known to chemists and referred to in books for prospectors and miners as "Darton's test for gold." I suppose Darton was a chemist of some note and an Englishman. I think you can probably tell us about that by reference to your library. It is a good one for I have worked it side by side with the fire assay and it was there with the right result every time.

Let me add this: If, after treating half an ounce of ore in the iodine and gathering the gold in a mercury globule (about one-fourth of an inch in diameter, and dissolving the mercury in nitric acid,) you have a bead of gold powder of the diameter of an ordinary pin cut off square, your ore is worth $20 per ton. The boys can figure both ways from that. Also, roast base ore and grind all ore in the iodine with the pestle now and then to prevent films of any kind forming over the grains of gold. Here's an easy try out "for the boys who are (not) in the hills."

All along the mouth of the San Gabriel Cañon at Azusa are cobbles of yellow porphyry. This stuff won't show a color by the most expert panning, but test it with the iodine and you will get a pretty little ball of bright gold. You've only got it for a moment, however, because as soon as the quicksilver is dissolved the gold bead breaks up and floats to the top like fine powder.

Don't pick up the cobbles showing pyrites, but the softer stuff, not showing visible metal.

Without knowing anything of the history of the cañon I have no doubt the test will also start the boys to wondering if something has not been overlooked up that way.

C. M. P.

ANSWER: "Feeling, however, that there is nothing new under the sun," is the comment of the contributor who submitted the process for publication. It would appear from your letter that "a prominent prospector's outfit has been double crossed. . . . and that the iodine test for gold is an old one."

The blunt truth of the matter is, that in publishing the "secret (?)" this department of The Times simply made known an ordinary test for gold, familiar to metallurgists for over a century.

Space will not permit a full review of such processes, and we will sum up in as few words as possible:

(1.) Darton's process is not as described; there is no mercury used in his process. (2.) Darton experimented on one-fourth of an ounce ore at a time, and his solvent is 20 grains of iodine and 30 grains of iodide of potassium, in about 1½ ounces (fluid) of water. Thorpe and Muir, in "Qualitative Chemical Analysis," show a somewhat different iodine solution.

(2.) Probably the claim is made that the addition of mercury to this process is a matter of great advance in metallurgy? There are patents on file at the Patent Office, Washington, D. C., setting forth wet methods with iodide and iodine solutions, and also dilute hydrochloric acid, and sulphuric acid solutions, and so on, all of them calling for mercury. These processes were set forth in this department some five years ago; they are good laboratory tests, but none of them are of value on a commercial scale. Too much mercury.

(3.) Mr. Darton is "a gentleman and a scholar"—a geologist and chemist, and for many years with the United States Geological Survey.

(4.) Your metallurgy on the Azusa cobbles might be improved in many ways, one of them is: Why dissolve the quicksilver alleged by you to be mechanically mixed with gold? Simply wash the amalgam from the iodine solution, dry it for a few moments at 100 deg. C., then place it on a small burnished sheet-iron pan and (even on a kitchen stove) drive off the mercury. If there is any gold present there will be no floating to the top.

(5.) In the words of the contributor of the article in question, be sure, however, to use "gold-free mercury."

Chiefly Granite.

LOS ANGELES, June 1.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Would you oblige a student by describing the inclosed samples, all from the Sierra Nevada Mountains, in Yosemite Park? What is No. 1? What is the fine-grained dark rock of No. 2? What is the name of No. 3? What is No. 4, and is the red portion feldspar? What of 5, 6 and 7?

Thanking you in advance for the favor your answers will confer on me.

I am, yours truly, R. R.

ANSWER: All of us are but students. It is a great pleasure to "quiz" each other. No wonder you are apparently in doubt about the specimens; while easy of determination, they represent material that in many examinations causes one to "flunk"—somewhat on the order of the catch (legal) question, "Can a man marry his widow's sister?" Sample No. 1 is a poor specimen of pegmatite (graphic granite,) with bronze mica inclusions. No. 2 is also pegmatite; dark part, biotite. No. 3, feldspathic (porphyritic) rock; feldspar crystals in the mass, with biotite; in short, a variety of granite. No. 4, granite; the red is in part orthoclase, with baryte present. No. 5 same order as 3. No. 6, greasy quartz. No. 7, ferruginous quartz.

Clay and Zeolitic.

MORRO, June 1.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Inclosed find two samples of same rock; one has been heated in forge. They come from a large ledge a few miles from here. Will you please say what it is, and if it has any commercial value? And oblige, yours truly, G. T. S.

ANSWER: The sample is a silicate of alumina, with zeolite present. Its value can be determined only by practically submitting samples to those engaged in the clay industry—tile-makers for instance.

Pyrrhotite.

GLENDORA, June 1.—[To the Editor of The Times:] The inclosed sample is from a claim in the San Gabriel mining district. We would like to know if it carries nickel; also, if it is likely to be of any commercial value. The ore body is large and could be handled cheaply. Yours truly. W.

ANSWER: In the pyrrhatite (magnetic pyrite) present is one-half of 1 pre cent. nickel. Even by concentration and favorable fuel and water conditions the proposition is a doubtful one, as shown by samples.

Odd Combinations.

LOS ANGELES, June 1.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I have noticed that you sometimes help a beginner as well as the big miners. I got the samples inclosed in the mountains north of Ojai Valley, and will be very thankful if you will tell me: What is No. 1, and what is the name of the big white crystal and the reddish crystals? What is the red vein running through No. 2? What is No. 3? What is No. 4? I broke this all up trying to get two samples. Please accept my thanks for your kindness.

Yours very truly, A. B.

ANSWER: Please note particularly that all corespondents are treated alike by this department of The Times. We confess, however, that, at times, when a prospector in Nevada, Montana, Wyoming, Utah and elsewhere writes us a private note that, "he is la sick or would endeavor to obtai ter stuff to write upon"—and then a piece of linen collar—or pastebo he is apt to get the very best "in shop," as it were.

No. 1 is feldspathic baryte in White crystal and pink red micr ical crystals baryte. No. 2 baryte orthoclase. No. 3 quartzitic rock 4 a variety of No. 3, but pegamati

Not Ferromanganese.

LOS ANGELES, June 1.—[To Editor of The Times:] Inclosed samples from a ledge. Is this manganese? This ledge is situ seven miles north of Cima, San Be nardino county, Cal. Yours truly, M.

ANSWER: Samples made hematite, magnetite, quartz (s manganese dioxide, and zinc tra with calcite present.

Doubtful Prospect.

INGLEWOOD June 1.—[To Editor of The Times:] The incl samples are from a ledge in Ly Creek district, taken at a depth five feet. Kindly state if there is tungsten present. Assays show it carries no gold or silver, but th seems to be some metal present w I have been unable to determina you consider the above sample sufficient merit to warrant furt prospecting? Yours respectfully, L. O.

ANSWER: Tungstic acid is not p ent in the sample; it runs low in

A Poor Showing.

ONTARIO, June 2.—[To the Ed of The Times:] You will please inclosed five samples of rock, ta from the mountains north of Ont and would be pleased to have you upon them. Nos. 1, 2 and 3 are f the same place and within a radi twenty feet. (No. 1 bottom two 3; top, and I think 3 is marble.) 2 black specks graphite, and the crystals may be scheelite. No. think carries gold. No. 4 is fro five-inch seam, running throug iron formation. The owner of cañon claims that No. 5 is gold q —is it? Thanking you for past vors, I am, yours truly, W.

ANSWER: No. 1 resembles with less molybdenite and graphite (both in microscopical tals.) No. 2 is a zeolitic conglom tion of dendritic manganese co (forest rock) with microscopical lybdenite graphite and iron No. 3 is calcite, tungstic acid abs No. 4 iron oxides, in part pseudo phic after pyrite. No. 5 a narr streak of iron-stained quartz, traces of zinc and tunstic acid. gold and silver values (if any) suit assayers.

Peridotitic Rock.

[To the Editor of The Times:] am a constant reader of your pa and would be pleased to have tell me through your "In the Ear column what the inclosed stone composed of, and is it a copper nickel stain? Would it be liable carry mineral of any value? It co from Mohave county, Ariz.

Very truly, A. L. D.

ANSWER. The sample resemb rock from near the nickel mines Riddles, Or. It is from a half-i stringer. It is colored with nickel (ple green) and carries nickel, low centage, with traces of copper manganese. If the lead is as sho by sample there would be but li in it from a "nickel" standpoint.

Joint product of the ungraded school and the Juvenile Court both intended to give a chance to do better to children with a tendency away from the normal is the compulsory education department of the city schools, with E. J. Lickley as director. Mr. Lickley was formerly a teacher at the Detention Home, and was selected because of his peculiar ability to handle the type of children sent there.

Mr. Bettinger, interviewed regarding the work of the ungraded and special schools, said: "The ungraded and special schools have demonstrated their right to exist and pointed the need for other special schools. There is no provision made for girls who need more special treatment than that provided in the ungraded rooms, but it is our hope some day to have a parental school for girls, similar to that already in operation for boys. There is also a crying necessity for a school here for the feeble-minded. The impression that the ungraded and special schools are designed for these unfortunates is largely erroneous. Most of them remain in the regular classes and naturally their presence is a drag and a detriment to the bright children.

Mr. Bettinger makes the startling statement that at least one-quarter of the children in the public schools come from homes where conditions are not right, and in many ways the schools are endeavoring to do for these children what should be done by parents.

There is a wide distinction between the ungraded and the special schools. While the rebellious attitude of the child towards authority, either of the schools or society at large, or both, is the main thing to be corrected in the special schools, there are many and various reasons for children being in the ungraded schools. MAKING CITIZENS.

This work of taking care of incorrigible, dull and truant children in a municipal, before it is an educational, work. It is a work requiring patience and firmness. It takes time."

Mr. Bettinger makes the startling statement that at least one-quarter of the children in the public schools come from homes where conditions are not right, and in many ways the schools are endeavoring to do for these children what should be done by parents.

There is a wide distinction between the ungraded and the special schools. While the rebellious attitude of the child towards authority, either of the schools or society at large, or both, is the main thing to be corrected in the special schools, there are many and various reasons for children being in the ungraded schools. Among the attendants are those who have failed of promotion and work ungraded just long enough to make their class; those who have been out of school a year or more and need brushing up; those who have lost work through travel or illness; mild cases of bad deportment and truancy; those who are mentally dull or slow; those who are backward in one or two subjects or unduly interested in one subject; children in frail health or having poor eyesight or hearing; pupils from other states; children who have what is mildly termed "temperamental peculiarities," and exceptionally bright children who are making extra grades.

One teacher of an ungraded school confessed that she was heart sick when Mr. Bettinger called her to the special work. Her school is in the factory end of town, where there are many foreigners, and most of them come from poor homes. She said: "My children yelled and fought and tore each other's hair out when I first came. Now I love the work. I find the study of these children fascinating, and developing their possibilities is my greatest joy."

HELP EACH OTHER.

The children in the ungraded schools help each other, and they do not laugh at mistakes—too many of them have been laughed at in the regular schools.

"The progress some of them make under individual attention and encouragement is really wonderful," said the enthusiastic teacher. "I want you to see and hear a little girl who was sent to me. After five terms in school, she had failed to make the first grade. In five months I sent her back into the second half of the second year and she is doing well."

One day I attended one of the special schools. It was a very lively one. Two young chaps, athletic but kindly, control and at the same time make companions of an interesting lot of lads. Boys who have too decided a mechanical turn are not forbidden sloyd, but it is made a reward for other work faithfully performed. Where a boy is troubled with "wireless," his parents are consulted, and asked to encourage his desire to rig up apparatus at home. Former truants are there in numbers, and there are several boys who accomplished what is known in educational circles as "beating up the teacher." One boy had done so thorough a job that he needed a little special grilling; so the two men teachers, upon receiving him into the school, good-naturedly guyed him. "You beat up a teacher. You don't look strong enough to lick a sick cat. A pretty thing for a boy to hit a woman!" and so on until he was so ashamed that he has been tractable ever since.

A boy asked his teacher's permission to show me his lesson in English. "Like to go to school?" I asked. "Yes, it's better than being on the streets," he answered. "You did not always think so," I pursued. "No, but it's better. You don't steal so many peaches," was the astonishing answer. "Oh!" I said.

"You see, it's this way," he confided. "You don't get your lessons at school and then you play hookey. If you go home, you'll get sent back to school. Pretty soon you get hungry. Then you see some peaches over a wall. Then you steal them. See?"

In one room several boys were doing sloyd. One was making a mission seat for his mother. A small boy was spelling big words for the teacher.

LIFE'S SEAMY SIDE.

"Why is he here?"

"Stubborn," replied the teacher. "Probably he has plenty of excuse. One day he came and said he would have to be excused the next day, he had got to help his mother get a divorce from his step-father. When he next appeared he said, 'Change my name on the rolls, will you. I haven't got my step-father's name any more.'"

In every special school hang boxing gloves. When boys get into too heated discussions, they are told to "go to it" and fight it out, the teacher acting as referee.

Each school of this kind is supposed to have about sixteen pupils; but when the new Chief of Police "came in," he taxed their capacity through a rigid enforcement of the curfew law.

Director Lickley says truancy is especially virulent in Los Angeles. It is a very catching disease and is to be attributed to the salubrious climate. Nevertheless, it is being stamped out by the truancy officers and the special schools.

On the lonely Los Feliz road, one mile from the car line, a pretty building with a large square court is tucked under the shadow of the Elysian hills. This is the Parental Home, opened in January with I. P. Thurston in the double role of superintendent and teacher. A large schoolroom and a handsome dining-room for the boys, office and living-rooms for the superintendent and his family, and airy, light, tiny separate rooms for each boy are provided.

The boys, who have all been before the Juvenile Court, lead a regular life, with stated times for rising and retiring, for eating, studying, drilling and working. Each noon they have a flag drill pledge their allegiance to the United States, and relieve their feelings with a good yell. The day before I came there had been a boxing match and one of the boys had had to be rubbed down.

There are no bolts nor bars at the Parental Home. The boys sleep with doors and windows open, and occasionally one runs away. One slept all night under a tree near the Santa Fe station but presented himself bright and early at the home next morning.

"What made you come back?" asked Mr. Thurston.

"Got cold feet. Thought I'd come back and serve my time."

Mr. Thurston and the lads take long hikes over the country. Once they all walked up Mt. Wilson, getting up at 4 o'clock in the morning for the start.

On the other side of Los Feliz Road, just across from the Parental School lie ten acres that are cultivated by Japs but belong to the county. In September the leases expire and it is Mr. Thurston's idea to divide this land into equal plots and give one to each boy for a garden; to market the stuff the boy raises and allow him his share of the profits. He wants to teach his charges how to make honest money. The money would be put into a bank and given to the boy as he leaves the school as something with which to make his start in the world. This matter has not yet gone before the Supervisors, but individual members of the board favor the idea.

At the Detention Home, at Railroad and Main streets, children are detained long enough to be studied with relation to what disposition shall be made of them. Judge Wilbur consults with Mr. Lickley, Mr. Gallup, the teacher at the Detention Home, and the truancy officers. I saw one lad who had been sixteen times before the long-suffering judge, and who was the next day to be sent to the reform school. One little laddie had been tempted by an unusually fine day to tempt another lad to play hookey, and the two had gone down to the river and caught a turtle and sold it for 50 cents, and then got caught themselves by the attendance officer.

The boys are taught every day by a kindly teacher blessed with the saving sense of humor. "Who wants to recite for the visitor?" he asked. Several black hands shot into the air.

"Ethiopia gets more representation here than is her fair share," said the teacher. After all the black boys had recited, a white boy got up near the window, and read a poem about the beautiful world, and the whispering winds, and the flowing streams, and the beautiful green trees and grass, and I wondered if he thought of the nice little padlock on the schoolroom door.

Since September 21 there have been 346 enrollments at the Detention Home. The institution keeps busy a teacher from the city schools, two truant officers for the city, three truant officers for the county, a county guard and a matron for the girls, who, it may be stated, are comparatively few in number.

BASED ON KINDNESS.

The whole system of treating juvenile offenders in the special schools is based upon kindness, sympathy and understanding, and its failure, or success depends largely upon the character of those who are charged with its execution. It is work which cannot be fully compensated by pay. It calls upon the teachers to be constantly giving. Yet few of them are satisfied with school hours; they play with the children at recess and noon, visit their parents and invite the youngsters to their homes. The teacher of the one permanent ungraded school (an account of which I have been obliged to omit and which would furnish a subject for an entire article) has established a playground in her back yard especially for her school children.

Individual treatment evidently arouses a personal interest and almost sense of possession in each of the teachers. I suggested to one of the men, who was imitating a belligerent boy, that it was possible that the conquered lad in the best of us is a help to understanding the undeveloped good in the worst of us, and he blushingly acknowledged that his mother had spoiled the peach tree in the interests of her boy!

WHAT'S DOING IN SAN FRANCISCO.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, July 2.—For three terms we had a musician for Mayor and there were discords all the time. He was succeeded by a poet and there were some prosaic people who found fault with the number of feet in his verse. Now if the Municipal League of Independent Republican Clubs has its way we will have for Mayor a piano dealer in the person of Byron Mauzy.

Some of the shrewd political prophets around town say that the union labor party has been disrupted by the Supreme Court decision affirming the direct primary law. Over half the men on its tickets belong to other parties and will have to stick to one ticket. P. H. McCarthy, candidate for Mayor, denies that the union labor party is disorganized because he has held himself together and he is the whole party.

The principal thoroughfares are exceedingly quiet now that the nickel-in-the-slot machines have been relegated to the junk pile. Hitherto pedestrians have had the gambling devices to beat time for them at the same time beating the players. The cigar dealers hoped to evade the law, but Police Chief Cook is determined to enforce it. Hereafter the slot fiends will have to go over to Oakland if they wish to indulge their whims of giving their money to others.

The members of the Bohemian Club are at a loss to know what they will do without "Uncle George" Bromley. The genial old man is dead at the age of 92. For many years his personality has warmed things up around the club and he has gone without leaving any one the right of succession.

Being eccentric is a frequent excuse for human weakness, but the Supreme Court refuses to allow it to condone perjury. Millionaire Bradbury hoped that his reputation for eccentricity, which he had carefully fostered for years, would permit him to testify to an imaginary business transaction. The highest court has decided that the wealthy crank committed perjury and must serve a term in the penitentiary just as though he was a commonplace man.

Despite his distinguished name Edmund Burke has had an indignity thrust upon him by Police Judge Conlan who decided that he was no lawyer and fined him $180 or 180 days for practicing without a license. In view of a possible contempt of court Burke is afraid to call Conlan another. However, he is determined to prove that he is a lawyer by appealing the case to a higher court whose judges may decide that he knows more of Blackstone than Conlan knows.

Our courts will soon be called on to decide whether a wife leading a "butterfly" life entitles the husband to a divorce. A. Stanley Dollar, a steamship man, asks to be legally freed from his wife, alleging that she is a "butterfly." He says that his salary will not stand it. So far Mrs. Dollar has not deigned to answer her husband's suit.

The Half Million Club is beginning to feel encouraged. The new school census gives us a population of 430,000, a gain of 75,000 over last year. The census takers insist that there are 105,000 children under 17 in the city and that 81,000 of these are of school age. In these vacation days it would seem as though the census men had overlooked a few of the kids.

Police Chief Cook does not agree with Chief Kohler of Cleveland, O., that the golden-rule policy should be tried with sinning citizens. Kohler says that a policeman should not arrest a drunken man, but should escort him home. Cook says that he knew an officer who did that once and when the man got home he shot out the policeman's eye.

A Japanese in San Rafael advertised for a white wife and insisted that she be beautiful. It was necessary also that she have a good education. If she came up to these two requirements he promised to give her good care. He gave his address as the general delivery and now some of the young men of the town are waiting at the general delivery window to argue with him.

GROWING, CHARMING CITY OF VENTURA BY THE SEA.

Where the Cooling Summer Breezes Blow—Many Improvements Under Way; More Projected—Greatest Lima Bean Production in the World—One of the Old Missions—Beautiful Flowers and Drives.

BY E. C. PENTLAND.

I CAN scarcely realize, as I sit by the ocean and watch the waves breaking on the sandy shore, and feel the cooling breezes, that there are localities in California and Arizona where such refreshing breezes are not blowing, but on the contrary where the heat is much greater, and the residents are longing to take a vacation and spend a few weeks by the seashore.

And it is truly delightful here in Ventura, the city by the sea. At night, through the warm days, instead of having to open every window and sleep almost without covering on the bed, as is the case in some localities, you have to pull a thick bed covering over you, and then drop off to sleep at once. There are 300 sunny days and 365 cool, sleep-furnishing nights. Ventura has an even climate, never hot and never cold, tempered by the health-giving breezes from the ocean.

The town is located on a gentle slope, between the foothills and the sea. To the west is the Pacific Ocean, and seen in the distance are the large islands, Anacapa and Santa Cruz, about twenty miles from the shore, across the Santa Barbara Channel. Ventura is about eighty miles in a northerly direction from Los Angeles, and is reached by rail in a ride of less than three hours, being the first point on the coast line of railroad, where the tracks skirt the shores of the ocean. The city has a population of between 3500 and 4000, and has lately taken on a new activity, the one great improvement manifest being the thousands of dollars now being spent in improving the streets. Ventura should be better known as a summer resort than it is. The residents perhaps have not fully realized what a boon it is to the tired man of business to come to such a delightful summer climate, and just rest. Excursions could be arranged, at reduced rates, to reach out from all parts of the tributary country, where the summer weather is not so pleasant as here by the seashore, and have the visitors sample and delights and attractions of this section. From now until next December monthly excursions, or even oftener, might be arranged from interior points to Ventura.

The railroad companies would second the efforts of the people of Ventura, and the benefits would be reciprocal. Several hundred visitors on each excursion could be accommodated in Ventura, as there are good hotels, and an abundance of room and facilities for camping. The tickets should allow of a stay of not less than a week. That this is an idea which is soon to bear practical fruit is manifest in the spirit of city adornment now going forward in Ventura so energetically.

Not only are the streets being finely paved and the parks being beautified, but the grounds about the private residences are being put in touch with the spirit of adornment. There are wide-awake business men in Ventura who see that one of the assets of this attractive and picturesque city is not being made to yield its adequate return, hence steps are being made to cater to the public demands.

Ventura has among its progressive citizens such names as: J. A. Walker, J. J. McGregor, H. M. Walker, W. S. Baylis, F. W. Lothrop, W. H. Turner, J. C. Daly, A. G. Gates, O. J. Stowe, C. L. Frost, R. T. Hayes, F. M. Daly, G. L. Daly, O. G. Bartlett, H. Guggenheim, L. F. Webster, W. H. Ley, Paul Hornung, W. E. Mercer, Ben Fasio, Joseph Roth, E. G. McMartin, J. B. McClosky, Mrs. E. A. Wagner, L. D. Fowler, J. H. Reppy, E. W. Carne, W. J. Wilde, R. H. Teague, R. K. Morgan, W. A. Bonstel, E. L. Miller, J. M. Montgomery, G. J. Little, James Mack, L. S. Beckley, J. H. Haskins, Charles Aseltine, M. A SUMMER RESORT.

"Why is it that Ventura, with all its advantages as a summer resort, has never been more extensively exploited along that line?" I asked one of the business men.

"Because," said he, "there has never been any beach property for sale, consequently there has never been any inducement for individuals to advertise Ventura, as a summer resort. But recently a tract of land adjoining the city of Ventura has been secured, where will be erected an up-to-date tourist hotel, where will be bathing and boating, both in the ocean and a salt water lake; where will be tennis courts and pleasure grounds of ample extent; also locations for summer residences and campers. In fact where a number of private bungalows are already projected. A Chautauqua assembly is to be held there during the last days of July, and the grounds selected are those which in future will be also used for the same and similar purposes. This meeting, with others to follow, will call the attention of hundreds of people to the attractions of Ventura, and its advantages and desirability as a place for summer conventions.

ATTRACTIONS OF VENTURA.

"What are the attractions of Ventura for the tourist and sightseer?" I asked H. M. Walker, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce.

"In the first place too much stress cannot be laid on our ideal climate. Our city is located at the foot of the coast range of mountains, between the mountains and the sea, being about one mile long and six blocks in width. The mountains protect us from the north and east winds, while the prevailing trade winds, which we have during the summer months, are one of our greatest blessings, tempering the summer heat.

"Our beach in front of the city extends for about two miles and offers excellent opportunities for bathing. It has a hard sandy bottom, has no undertow, and a person can wade out two or three hundred feet without getting over their depth. The temperature of the salt water does not vary more than ten degrees, and the even temperature of the atmosphere renders bathing ideal, for from six to eight months of the year. Safe and pleasant sea bathing is to be made one of the features of the future fame of Ventura as a summer resort. The Almighty has done everything for Ventura and man is required to do but little.

"Ventura has one of the best preserved of the old Catholic missions, which was established in 1782, and has its chime of four bells, tied with the same leather thongs of one hundred and twenty-seven years ago. Many are the messages of joy and sorrow those old bells have proclaimed. Connected with this mission are priceless relics and documents, gathered from the early history of Ventura. You will always find Father Grogan, the priest in charge, ready and willing to show visitors the beauties of the mission and the relics. When President McKinley visited Ventura, he and Father Grogan were photographed in the old mission garden, a part of the church grounds.

"Visitors to Ventura often speak of the very general prevalence of lovely flowers surrounding the homes of our citizens, the gorgeous colors and profusion of bloom seeming to indicate great care and attention, but the fact is that this climate is so favorable to plant growth and bloom, that the shrubs grow almost without attention. The great variety of tender plants being grown, such as begonias, geraniums and fuschias, which make Ventura so attractive with their rich colors, are largely due to the example set by Mrs. Theodosia B. Shepherd, who came here an invalid from Iowa, thirty years ago, and through her love of nature, and the climatic conditions here, has propagated flowers which have been, and are being, sought for, in even distant European countries. Mrs. Shepherd was the 'Burbank' of Southern California, and her death, which occurred about three years ago, was a loss, not only to the floriculture of Southern California, but to the world. Mrs. Shepherd's work is yet apparent in the home gardens, which are a mass of brilliantly blooming flowers, and are one of the sights of Ventura.

"Among the greatest of Ventura's attractions, and one which leaves the most lasting impression on the mind of the visitor, is the Ventura Avenue drive, commencing at the paved boulevard, two miles east of the city, and extending through Ventura, thence turning north up through Ventura avenue and dropping into romantic Sleepy Hollow, the home of the apricot and the lemon. Six miles from Ventura we reach Foster Park, consisting of ninety-two acres of natural woodland, which was originally a gift to Ventura county by Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Foster, and has been materially added to by G. W. Chissman and the Ventura Power Company. Several thousands of dollars have been expended by the County Board of Supervisors in adding conveniences for the public. It is picturesquely located, with the Ventura River on one side and the precipitous mountains on the other, covered with a growth of natural oak timber. On Sundays, in particular, the park is thronged with visitors, there being from 500 to 1000 there at a time. Its natural beauties cannot be adequately described in a brief interview. Continuing on for a distance of ten miles, along one of the most romantic drives in California, crossing the river at least a dozen times, we come to the Ojai (pronounced Ohi) Valley. Those who take this trip always come back enthusiastic over the wild beauty of the scenery, and in love with Ventura county. On this same drive, at a point about ten miles from Ventura, you turn off to the left and proceed about seven miles to the noted Matilija Cañon, the fame of which for scenic beauty and the curative properties of its hot springs, is more than local, it being visited from all parts of the United States. In parties of five, this trip can be made for $1 each.

"We have ocean fishing off the wharves at Ventura, or deep water fishing from the mosquito fleet in the harbor. A delightful trip is to the islands Anacapa and Santa Cruz, which can be made at an expense of only $1 for each person, when a party is made up, and there is as fine fishing as can be found anywhere, and the moonstone pebbles can be gathered on the beaches. For excellent trout fishing the Ventura River and its tributaries are available during the open season from May to October."

INVESTMENT OPPORTUNITIES.

"What opportunities are there in and near Ventura for the investment of capital in commercial enterprises?" was asked of a business man.

"We have a deposit of cement rock, in great abundance, about seventeen miles north of Ventura, and an ample supply of fuel oil about sixteen miles east of here. By bringing these together there is an opening for the establishment of a cement plant on a large scale. This would be of advantage to our city, as it would give employment to a large number of men. There is also an opening for the construction of an electric railroad from Ventura, first to Oxnard, ten miles, thence to Santa Paula, fifteen miles; thence, by way of the Ojai Valley, Nordhoff, and the Matilija Cañon Springs, back to Ventura, twenty-five miles farther. The right of way can be easily secured, and the power can be obtained from the electric power company, which has recently run its lines to Ventura, or gasoline motors could be used. This would place in direct communication at least 10,000 people, and this population is destined to largely increase, as the country is rapidly becoming more thickly settled. The scenic beauty of this route would attract a large patronage, and the road be a profitable investment."

SOME COUNTY STATISTICS.

Ventura is the county seat of Ventura county. The assessed value of the county last year was $13,073,539, of which $7,053,135 was the value of real estate, and $2,347,833, that of the railroads in the county. Statistician D. J. Reese of Ventura officially presents the following values of the products of the county for 1908: Lima beans, $2,720,000; small beans, $243,500; sugar (from beets,) $1,600,000; sugar beets (paid the farmers,) $780,000; cattle, $595,000; lemons, $585,000; petroleum, $375,500; walnuts, $371,245; apricots (dried,) $276,000; cereals, $189,200; sheep, $140,035; oranges, $135,000; eggs and poultry, $93,550; hay, $81,000; butter, $39,200; olives, $24,300; wines, $18,000; potatoes, $15,200; lumber, $15,000; onions, $14,160; wool, $13,200; seeds and bulbs, $11,250; prunes, $10,800; almonds, $9600, with other products amounting to a total of $8,508,055. The land devoted to stock-raising is estimated at 360,000 acres; to beans, 65,000 acres; sugar beets, 19,000 acres; wheat, 21,000 acres; corn, 4000 acres; oats, 6000 acres; hay, 23,000 acres, and barley, 37,000 acres.

THE CITY OF VENTURA.

Ventura (the official name being San Buena Ventura) has two commercial and two savings banks, two daily newspapers, two telephone systems, no saloons, three hotels, a number of lodging-houses and restaurants, two grammar and one High School, two lumber yards and planing mills, waterworks, gas plant, electric power plant and lights, with a full representation of all the lines of mercantile business. The following church denominations are represented: Catholic, Presbyterian, Congregational, Methodist, Methodist South, Episcopal, Christian, Christian Science and Adventist. Among some of the improvements now in progress are: W. E. Mercer, brick garage, $5000; Charles Barnard, residence, $4000; L. G. Gabbert, residence, $6000; O. A. Guadley, residence, $3000; W. H. Stiles, residence, $3500; John Reppy, residence, $2500; E. G. McMartin, residence, $2500; W. H. Ley, residence, $2000; Mrs. M. E. Crump, residence, $2000; John H. Walker, residence, $5000; D. G. Bowker, residence, $3500; Milton Stiles, garage, etc., $5000; grammar school manual training department, $1500. This is a total of nearly $50,000.

About eighteen months ago the city of Ventura, by vote, authorized the sale of $150,000 worth of bonds, bearing 5 per cent. interest, for the purposes of grading and paving the streets, building a sewer system, securing a beach park, building a fire-engine house, etc. The sum of $7000 was paid for about two blocks of land facing on the ocean, with 600 feet water frontage, located near the depot of the Southern Pacific Railroad. I am authorized to state that if any individual or company will improve this property suitable for a beach park, the city will give a twenty-year lease at a very low rental. Some one should take advantage of this offer.

In Charming City by the Sea.

Without having to use the Vrooman Act, the citizens have voluntarily built cement sidewalks in front of nearly all their property, and now the city is paying for the grading and paving of eleven and a half miles of streets, of which eight miles are completed. The city entered into a contract with J. M. Montgomery to furnish a plant and superintend the work, which has been in progress since May, 1908. The ingredients used are a mixture of earth, clay, oil, gravel and crushed rock.

The completed streets make a fine showing, the cost, as compared with bitumenized pavement being only 4 cents a square foot, instead of 25 cents. The street is first turnpiked and brought to grade, then three coats of oil are put on, each being thoroughly mixed and tamped down by means of petrolythic rollers, forming a solid base. On this is placed from two to four inches of coarse crushed gravel. This is cultivated, and another coating of oil put on. It is watered, and tamping rollers are passed over it, until the whole surface is hard and smooth. Then a top dressing of oil is put on, half a gallon to the yard, and a dressing of finely-crushed gravel, which is rolled smooth with a heavy roller. The completed streets are as hard as asphalt, and are said to be more durable.

LAND FOR THE HOME-SEEKER.

"Where are lands to be had in the vicinity of Ventura for the person who is seeking a small holding of from twenty to forty acres?" I asked W. S. Baylis.

"There is bean acreage to be had, with or without improvements, ranging in price from $350 to $500 an acre; apricot land for from $200 an acre upward; orange and lemon groves from $750 to $1500 an acre; walnut groves from $400 to $750 an acre, and sugar beet land for from $300 to $400 an acre.

"Our bean lands are held at their present prices because the production will return an ample income on the investment. The climatic conditions and fertility of soil, combined, are peculiar to the vicinity of Ventura, hence one of the principal productions of this section is the lima bean, which nowhere reaches the perfection that it does here. This crop has made those engaged in the business independent and prosperous. The territory of bean culture extends on both sides of Ventura out for a distance of fifteen or twenty miles, and is watered both by canals and pumping plants. The apricot orchards are located mostly in the valleys of the Ventura and Santa Clara rivers. In these same localities are being profitably grown walnuts, oranges, lemons and such other fruits. The soil in the vicinity of Ventura varies, some being better adapted to growing one crop than another. For this reason, many who invest in our lands prefer to buy the orchards already in successful bearing. A large proportion of our bean lands have proven themselves to be the very best for growing lemons, and there is quite an acreage of bean land being set out to this fruit. This is almost an absolutely frostless belt. One of our lemon orchards, of 350 acres, has been producing continuously for many years. There is being planted just outside the city limits 212 acres in lemons on land formerly used for beans; in fact, beans are still being grown between the rows of trees. There are fine walnut groves in this section that have been very profitable. The average yield of a walnut orchard is about 2000 pounds to the acre, which have been selling from 9 to 13 cents a pound; an income of from $180 to $260 an acre."

PROFITS IN LIMA BEANS.

F. L. Hogue, who has an experience of nearly twenty years in the bean business, says: "The newcomers, who are told that our fertile valley lands will return a good interest on a purchase price of from $350 to $450 an acre, are inclined to be skeptical, and think that the price is more than the facts warrant, but it should be taken into consideration that it is not only the soil, but the peculiar climatic conditions which go to make the growing of lima beans so profitable. The average lima bean lands, produce a yield of about one ton to the acre, some producing as high as one and a half tons to the acre, while other land will produce only three-quarters of a ton. The price of the lima bean, which is the specialty in this section, has been about 4 cents a pound, or $80 a ton. The total cost of production, including seed, cultivating, harvesting, etc., is $18 an acre, leaving a net profit of $62 an acre. This is 10 per cent. interest on land at $620 an acre.

"Land producing such an income cannot be bought for less than from $350 to $450 an acre, and is worth it. The cultivating is done in the winter and spring, being deep plowing and cultivating, in order to conserve the moisture of the winter rains through the summer; the absence of summer rains being an advantage, as there is no mold, and consequent damage to the crop. The vines grow on the ground, without any supports. The vines are cut by machinery during the months of September and October, and after drying three or four weeks are threshed, also by machinery, the charge being from $5 to $7 a ton, which is included in the estimate previously made. Last year the total bean crop of California was 1,110,000 bags, it being the largest crop ever grown. The crop in the vicinity of Ventura was about 850,000 bags, valued at over two and a half million dollars. The population of Ventura county is about 20,000, which gives an average from beans of about $125 to every man, woman and child in the country; or $1250 to each family.

"In renting the lands, the usual rental is from one-third to one-half the crop, delivered in the warehouse. The 'plant' necessary to handle 100 acres in beans would be five horses, one double gang plow, one harrow, one weed knife, one disc cultivator, and one bean planter, the total cost amounting to about $1200. The labor and cultivation would cost, by the time the beans are harvested, another $1200. There are from 40,000 to 45,000 acres planted to lima beans in this section. This area is being gradually reduced through the encroachments of orchards, so that the bean business has a bright outlook for permanent prices, as the demand is increasing and the available territory for production decreasing

"Beans do not exhaust the soil, there being farms in this vicinity which have been successively cropped for the past twenty years, and are producing larger crops today than ever, owing, perhaps, to better methods of cultivation. There are about fifteen varieties of the lima bean on one, grown near Ventura, and at least 100 carloads of special varieties are being shipped annually to the eastern seed trade. These are contracted for in the spring, before planting time, and command about $5 a ton more than the commercial product. A valuable by-product is the bean straw, which sells for about $5 a ton, and is fed to horses and cattle, they being very fond of it. An acre will produce about a ton of bean straw."

BEANS, WALNUTS AND CEMENT.

"I own ninety-four acres of bean land, four miles from Ventura," said a pioneer resident, "which I have had leased for a term of years on the basis of two-fifths of the crop net, to me in the warehouse. Two years ago my rent, free of all expense to me, was $3442, and last year it was $3160, an average of $3300 a year, or interest at 60 per cent. on my land at $600 an acre. The man who has the land rented has had an income during the past four years of nearly $20,000, his total investment having been only about $3000. There are more renters than land to be rented near Ventura, as the profits are larger for a man to farm his own land, when his business will allow him to do so.

"Adjoining this ninety-four acres is a walnut grove of nineteen acres, the trees being from twenty-eight to twenty-nine years of age, which had a crop two years ago that brought in $5434, an average of nearly $275 an acre.

"The cement deposit adjacent to Ventura is very extensive, being a mountain from 1000 to 2000 feet high, and extending for over a mile. In order to reach this cement deposit by rail a branch line will be built seven miles long, from the present Southern Pacific railroad, but as it would have a large passenger traffic from the vicinity of the hot springs of the Matilija Cañon, which are so attractive for tourists and invalids, it would be a profitable branch road. All the materials for the making of cement are available on the ground, even oil for fuel can be piped from the oil belt. It is estimated that under the favorable conditions for manufacture, and the purity and accessibility of the crude materials, this cement could be placed on the market at the rate of several thousand barrels a day and sell at 20 per cent. less than any Portland cement now in the California market. The establishment of a plant of even 1000 barrels a day would employ a large number of men, and this addition to our population be one of the principal advantages to Ventura."

Drumming Up Laborers.

When an African chief of the Nigerian tribes is ready to begin harvesting and requires extra assistance he sets some of his tribesmen drumming. They beat a huge kettledrum made of skin stretched on a calabash and a small side drum. The sound of the drumming carries a great distance, and laborers come in from all directions.—[Exchange

LITTLE BUTTE.

Lewisohns Take Bill Williams Fork Property and Change Name.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

BOUSE (Ariz.) July 2.—On June 15 the Arizona Bouse Copper Mining Company, which took over the Little Butte in January, sold out to a syndicate of Arizona and foreign capitalists, who, after a thorough examination, became convinced of its possibilities, not only took over the original eight claims, but added enough more to make twenty, and reorganized the company, placing the capital stock at $3,000,000, and changed the name to the Little Butte Consolidated Mines Company. The new company has placed a large amount of ready cash in the treasury for development, and has started extensive work and increased the working force to some forty men.

The old incline shaft, which is down to the 200-foot level, with drifts and crosscuts from both the 100 and 200-foot levels, is showing excellent ore bodies. The crosscut at the 200-foot level cut the ore body, which at this point is eighteen feet wide, and much richer than at the 100-foot level. The ore body at this level consists of three feet of very rich copper-gold ore, mostly malachite and glance, having running through the vein three rich pay streaks of glance about two inches thick. Assays of this glance run up into the fancy figures. The other sixteen feet of vein matter consists of gold-bearing rock, and assays clear across the ledge average $10 per ton.

In addition to this incline shaft several hundred feet of open trench work has been opening up other rich ore bodies on the surface. These trenches have disclosed the fact that there are on the surface three distinct veins or lenses, which will probably unite with depth into a great deposit.

On July 1 work was started on the new shaft, which is to be a double compartment verticle working shaft. This shaft will be sunk to the sulphide zone, with a drift to the incline shaft, and the ore will be hoisted through the new shaft. The camp equipment of the Little Butte is all first class, with ample provision made for the hot weather, including a shower bath-house.

OTHER PROPERTIES.

Located about one mile south of the Little Butte is the Heart's Desire property, owned by the Pioche-Arizona Gold and Copper Mining Company, the principal owner of which is now the Scott Mines Company of Salt Lake City. The Scott people have just recently bought the Heart's Desire, and have been developing for about a month, with the result that the double compartment vertical shaft is down 100 feet. Three shifts are sinking, and they are averaging five feet per day. A crosscut at the 100-foot level has been started. It is the intention to sink the shaft to the sulphide zone, with crosscuts at each 100-foot station.

That the A. & C. country is fast coming to the front as a great mining district, and is attracting the big ones is fully demonstrated by the fact that it has just been announced that the Lewisshons, or rather the General velopment Company of New York taken hold of the old Planet mi the Bill Williams Ford, twenty miles from Bouse. This propert the oldest copper mine in Arizona was a shipper away back in the ties. For many years it was w profitably, but with the declin copper the owners were unable, their crude methods, to make it over 200 miles from the railroad. several years it has been idle, only assessment work being kept up.

The Lewisshon people, through head geologist, Walter Harvey W has been investigating and samp the property for several months, a short time ago Julius Lewisshon J. Parke Channing visited the p erty, and after their return to York decided to take hold. The t of the purchase are not public as but it is known that the General velopment Company will expe large amount of money develop mine, and will leave nothing u to hurry the work along. Their perintendent will be at the P next week, with full authority t ahead.

The canning season has opened and the various plants in Southern California are working full time. Owing to the cool spring, all varieties of deciduous fruit matured at least two weeks later than usual. Apricots and peaches are in their prime and at lowest prices. The coming week will find the markets overflowing with them.

Apricots are worth only 75 cents to

Modest little Club House and a corner of the living room. Funds fo all raised by the girls w

t a lug box in the grocery store, and n a few days there will be special sales at lower figures. In a lug box there are about thirty pounds of fruits and at very small expense the housewife can now can enough to last through the coming winter.

Peaches are arriving in car lots. There are at least four varieties on the market now and two or three other kinds will be added during the week. The wholesale price is from 90 cents to $1.25 a box. Grocers are advertising to sell at retail from $1.25 to $1.60. In less than box quantities, the retail price is 5 cents a pound.

The Imperials are excellent for preserving. The Alexanders and the early Crawfords are more expensive.

TRAGEDY WELCOMED.

The famous Tragedy prune plum may now be had. The retail price is 5 cents a pound. Symonas are selling wholesale for 75 cents a box. They are especially valuable for making brandy, or light wine, and give an excellent flavor to making a jelly. Clymans, Abundance and Egg plums are also on the market and the well-known Satsuma is expected to make its appearance during the week.

Seedless Sultana grapes, the one plentiful variety just now, are selling at retail for $1.50 a crate. They come from Imperial Valley. The first black grapes of the season arrived Friday. In a few days they will be received by the carload. Grapes, this year, should be cheap. The prohibition wave which is sweeping over the country is having its effect on California wineries, which have sent out notices that they will not purchase much of the fruit but will depend on their own vineyards. It is not probable that the price will drop to 2 or 3 cents a pound.

The production of wine for the entire state this year, is estimated at 40,000,000 gallons. At least half of this will be made within a radius of 100 miles of Los Angeles. Shipments of grapes to all parts of the Union from California will reach 4000 carloads. The consumption of the residents is figured at 500 carloads. About 150,000,000 pounds of raisins will be cured.

Cherries are higher than they were two weeks ago, when the short season was at its height. The retail price has gone up to 8 and 10 cents a pound. The only two varieties now obtainable are Royal Annes and black Republicans, which come from the northern part of the State and from Oregon. Wholesale quotations, yesterday, were 6 cents a pound. Much of the fruit has been partially baked by the heat of the past few days. The crop, this year, was phenomenal. There were at least 700 tons of black cherries and 200 tons of white varieties distributed in the State alone and nearly 125 carloads were shipped to eastern cities. The quality, too, was unusually good.

ALMOST GIVEN AWAY.

Berries are so plentiful that dealers cannot handle them all. Yesterday morning, a dealer sold thirty crates of strawberries at 15 cents a crate in order to get rid of his surplus stock. The grocer will sell the best strawberries obtainable to the housewife at $1 a crate. The market price did not exceed 75 cents on any day of the week.

Loganberries and blackberries are at their best. Both are to be had at the retail price of $1 per crate. Raspberries are a very uncertain quantity. Some days, they are all too plentiful; on others, there are not enough to supply the demand.

Currants are still arriving from the North in large quantities. They are at 85 cents a drawer (10 pounds.) Gooseberries are 5 cents a pound. The high price is due to the fact that they come from Oregon. The only apples on the market are White and red Astrachans and early Harvests. These are worth $1.25 a lug

Owing to the cool spring, all varieties of deciduous fruit matured at least two weeks later than usual. Apricots and peaches are in their prime and at lowest prices. The coming week will find the markets overflowing with them.

Apricots are worth only 75 cents to $1 a lug box in the grocery store, and in a few days there will be special sales at lower figures. In a lug box there are about thirty pounds of fruits and at very small expense the housewife can now can enough to last through the coming winter.

Peaches are arriving in car lots. There are at least four varieties on the market now and two or three other kinds will be added during the week. The wholesale price is from 90 cents to $1.25 a box. Grocers are advertising to sell at retail from $1.25 to $1.60. In less than box quantities, the retail price is 5 cents a pound.

The Imperials are excellent for preserving. The Alexanders and the early Crawfords are more expensive.

TRAGEDY WELCOMED.

The famous Tragedy prune plum may now be had. The retail price is 5 cents a pound. Symonas are at wholesale for 75 cents a box. They are especially valuable for making brandy, or light wine, and give an excellent flavor to making a jelly. Clymans, Abundance and Egg plums are also on the market and the well-known Satsuma is expected to make its appearance during the week.

Seedless Sultana grapes, the one plentiful variety just now, are selling at retail for $1.50 a crate. They come from Imperial Valley. The first black grapes of the season arrived Friday. In a few days they will be received by the carload. Grapes, this year, should be cheap. The prohibition wave which is sweeping over the country is having its effect on California wineries, which have sent out notices that they will not purchase much of the fruit but will depend on their own vineyards. It is not probable that the price will drop to 2 or 3 cents a pound.

The production of wine for the entire State this year, is estimated at 40,000,000 gallons. At lease half of this will be made within a radius of 100 miles of Los Angeles. Shipments of grapes to all parts of the Union from California will reach 4000 carloads. The consumption of the residents is figured at 150 carloads. About 150,000,000 pounds of raisins will be cured.

Cherries are higher than they were two weeks ago, when the short season was at its height. The retail price has gone up to 8 and 10 cents a pound. The only two varieties now obtainable are Royal Annes and black Republicans, which come from the northern part of the State and from Oregon. Wholesale quotations, yesterday, were 6 cents a pound. Much of the fruit has been partially baked by the heat of the past few days. The crop, this year, was phenomenal. There were at least 700 tons of black cherries and 200 tons of white varieties distributed in the State alone and nearly 125 carloads were shipped to eastern cities. The quality, too, was unusually good.

ALMOST GIVEN AWAY.

Berries are so plentiful that dealers cannot handle them all. Yesterday morning, a dealer sold thirty crates of strawberries at 15 cents a crate in order to get rid of his surplus stock. The grocer will sell the best strawberries obtainable to the housewife at $1 a crate. The market price did not exceed 75 cents on any day of the week.

Loganberries and blackberries are at their best. Both are to be had at the retail price of $1 per crate. Raspberries are a very uncertain quantity. Some days, they are all too plentiful; on others, there are not enough to supply the demand.

Currants are still arriving from the North in large quantities. They retail at 85 cents a drawer (10 pounds.) Gooseberries are worth 10 cents a pound. The high price is due to the fact that they come from Oregon.

The only apples on the market are white and red Astrachans and early Harvests. These are worth $1.25 a lug box when purchased from the grocer. If bought in smaller quantities, they command 7 cents a pound.

Pears are expected within two weeks. The crop will be better than last year's.

PIPE LINES WIN.

Federal Judge Declares That Oklahoma's Freak Oil Law Is Unconstitutional.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

MUSKOGEE (Okla.) July 3.—Judge R. Campbell, in the Federal court here today held the Oklahoma statute prohibiting the shipping of oil and gas out of the State is in violation of the Federal constitution and of the interstate commerce act. This is regarded as a final victory for the foreign pipe line companies who were restrained by the State officials from selling the natural products in other States.

Today's holding was in the case of the Kansas Natural Gas Company and other oil and gas companies of Ohio and West Virginia against the State officials asking that they be perpetually enjoined from interfering with the plaintiffs piping oil and gas out of the State.

Judge Campbell today overruled the demurrers of the defendants. He announced that reasonable further time would be granted the defendants to file other pleadings before final action was taken to make the temporary injunction permanent.

DIAMOND IN USE AT COUNTRY CLUB OF Y.W.C.A.

Comfortable Building and Athletic Grounds at Huntington Park Give Rest and Pleasure to City-Worn Women and Girls—Saturday Evening Hot Suppers Win Fame.

Out at beautiful Huntington Park, just a twelve-minute ride from the city, and in the center of an acre lot, stands a modest little clubhouse which marks the consummation of the latest ambition of the girls of the Y.W.C.A.

When the idea of this house was conceived, the members of the association at once set about to get it, and every penny of the sum necessary for its erection was raised in two weeks. More than 300 guests visited the bungalow on the opening day, and complimented its owners on their splendid achievement. Since then the clubhouse, tennis and basketball courts, baseball diamond, volley ball court and croquet grounds have been in constant use.

The establishment is open to all girls and women of the city, and they are cordially invited to visit it. Business women will derive much benefit from the rest and quiet of an afternoon spent at these hospitable quarters, away from the noise and heat of the city. It is for them especially that the clubhouse was designed. The spacious porch is furnished with comfortable, inviting rockers, and the large living-room, too, is equipped for the comfort of weary ones, who wish to slip off the cares of life for a season.

Every Saturday evening a hot supper is served at the club by a committee of ten girls, and there is spirited but friendly rivalry among these different committees, for each is anxious to provide the best supper. The fame of these feasts is fast spreading for each succeeding Saturday evening, the number of visitors is larger. There is a nominal charge—15 cents. Tuesday and Thursday evenings dainty luncheons of sandwiches and coffee are served.

The first summer school of the Y.W.C.A. will open Wednesday and continue to August 18. The department of English will be in charge of Miss Margaret Burkhalter.

In the gymnasium there will be morning and evening classes on Tuesdays and Fridays.

A large enrollment is expected in the cooking classes of the summer school, which will be open to beginners, as well as to advanced students.

There will also be taught sewing millinery, music, French, Spanish, expression, the crafts and art.

A novel feature of the summer school will be a doll's dressmaking class for the little people. This will meet Tuesday and Friday mornings, from 10 to 12 o'clock.

CANADIAN CLUB'S EVENING.

The Canadian Club will have an entertainment and social Tuesday evening in Lincoln Hall, No. 728 South Grand avenue.

WHEN NOT POSING.

PECULIARITIES OF SENATORS.

NATURALNESS SEEMS TO BE THE CHIEF CHARACTERISTIC.

Senator Aldrich Is Never Stirred by Attacks—Call of Florida Takes Off His Shoes—White of Louisiana Goes to Sleep in His Chair—Root Is Studious.

[Washington Correspondence Brooklyn Eagle.]

Here are some snap shots of the American statesmen of the Senatorial variety, taken when the big men were not posing. The tariff debate is often dull and heavy and at such times Senators, like boys in school, amuse themselves with time-killing devices which furnish interesting sidelights on their character.

Naturalness is the chief trait of the most powerful man in the Senate, Mr. Aldrich. He never poses. The popular idea of a Senator making a speech has him erect, shoulders thrown back, the head high, chest thrown out and the right hand tucked carelessly in the breast of a closely-buttoned frock coat. That's the way Daniel Webster and Henry Clay are pictured in "The Lives of Great Statesmen." That is not the Aldrich custom. In the first place he never wears a frock coat. His clothes are trim, well-fitting and of the kind a busy Wall-street broker wears. Aldrich is no orator, and he knows it. When he has anything to say he stands up and says it, just as though he were talking to a couple of friends in his library at home. He never swings his arm, beats the air or pounds the desk, as Beveridge, Bailey and Dolliver. He doesn't shout or scream, or drop his voice in low, growling warnings. He delivers all kinds of important announcements in a matter-of-fact way, as though he were discussing the weather probabilities.

ALDRICH HAS FEW MANNERISMS

In his chair Aldrich has few mannerisms. He is patient to a remarkable degree. He has an absolute restraining grip upon himself. He sits unmoved while Democrats make ill-founded charges or gross mis-statements. Under similar circumstances Beveridge would spring up with a dozen contradictions and denials. Aldrich simply remains passive, with his hands folded. He is a past master in the art of exhausting the enemy by letting him talk himself out. Aldrich has a way of moving quietly about the Senate, especially on the Democratic side, when he wants to know what the sentiment there is, on a measure about to come up. He has floor lieutenants in Crane and Smoot to find out for him what is doing, but when there is doubt Aldrich gets the facts for himself. At other times he sticks to his chair. He has a marvelous faculty for learning the gossip of the Senate and of the official city. He rarely reads the newspapers, yet in some strange way he knows all the semi-scandal of the administration, the scraps in the Cabinet or other high places and other interesting news.

"I don't know how Aldrich hears everything, unless Senators bring the news to him," said a friend of the Rhode Islander's the other day. It is also impossible to surprise him with secret information about matters of importance.

TOOK OFF HIS SHOES IN SENATE.

On one memorable occasion Senator Wilkinson Call of Florida removed his shoes and crossed his stockinged feet on his desk in the Senate chamber. That created a new standard for senatorial dignity. During a prosy debate in the Senate, years ago, Mr. White of Louisiana, now a member of the Supreme Court, sat upright in his chair with his head lying on his right shoulder, sound asleep. His colleagues wondered how so big a neck could be bent to one side at such a sharp angle. This was hardly a characteristic attitude, but a curious one. Last week a well-known Representative from New Jersey drifted into the Senate, took a seat on one of the big, comfortable lounges in the rear, and, under the influence of the dull, warm day and his soothing position, dropped asleep.

SPRING IN BEVERIDGE'S CHAIR.

Beveridge is more susceptible to the temptations of a crowded gallery than any other Senator. It is impossible for him to resist the call of the spotlight. It is a common saying in the Senate that if the Indianan comes in and finds the gallery filled in expectation of a speech from Dolliver, Tillman or Bailey, he is sure to "steal the crown" by a few remarks. Beveridge keeps a closer watch on the press gallery and public galleries to note the effects of his speeches than on his colleagues.

After observing the antics of Senator Beveridge for half an hour or so, one concludes that there must be a powerful spring concealed in his chair which renders it impossible for its occupant to remain seated. Beveridge is constantly bounding to his feet with questions, suggestions, corrections or voluntary information. He broke a caster in his chair this week. It is impossible to suppress him. Dozens of Senators have tried it and failed. He is proof against all rebukes. The most cutting remarks intended to squelch him pass over his head and never touch him. His constant "Mr. President" rings out with unfailing regularity all day long as he rises to make known his views. The pages of the Congressional Record are decorated everywhere with the name of the senior Senator from Indiana.

VERSATILE AND PICTURESQUE.

"Where is Gore, the blind man?" is a question that every visitor to the gallery asks sooner or later. The Oklahoman occupies a seat in the back row on the Democratic side, save when he makes his speech. Then he moves down to Senator Daniel's seat in the front row. For a blind man Senator Gore does an awful lot of writing, especially while Aldrich, Smoot or some other Republican is explaining or defending the tariff bill. He scribbles away at a great rate and every one wonders what it is about. At other times he sits bolt upright, paying strict attention. He is the best listener in the Senate

Gore, in action, is picturesque. He has a magnificent voice, is a master of sarcasm, and is feared by Republicans more than any other Democrat, including Bailey. Gore has trained himself in tricks to cover up his blindness. While speaking he swings regularly from left to right, turning his head so as to address all his auditors. He snaps out his words with vigor. To emphasize them he jerks his head in a way that would ordinarily bring on intense headache. Gore's hair is iron gray, stiff and plentiful. With each jerk of his head his hair flies into disorder, then with many shakings and tremblings it gradually readjusts itself, only to be sent flying again as the speaker drives home another point.

BRISTOW TALL AND UNGAINLY.

Bristow of Kansas is one of the odd characters. He is the tallest man in the Senate, and the thinnest. He wears a frock coat on the warmest day, and it hangs in great folds from his projecting shoulder blades. Bristow twists his legs around each other in a corkscrew attitude, and pulls nervously at his hair. When he talks he stretches forth a long arm and shakes a belligerent finger at the Senator he desires to impress.

The venerable Senator Cullom of Illinois amuses himself by tearing paper into long, narrow strips, like lamplighters. The floor about him is covered with bits of paper, like a snowdrift, at the end of every long session.

SENATORS WHO SIT ON THEIR SPINES.

Tillman belongs to that class of Senators who sit on their spines. He slumps into his chair until his neck rests upon the low back, and then he stretches out his legs and crosses them, and looks thoroughly uncomfortable. Money of Mississippi and Warner of Missouri have the same trick. Tillman is unlike Beveridge, who is always ready for action and quick on the trigger. The South Carolinan often begins talking while in his reclining position and will be well into his opening sentence before his feet become untangled and he attains the aisle.

ELIHU ROOT, THE STUDIOUS.

Elihu Root is the closest student of debate in the Senate. It is a mighty dull, unprofitable speech that drives him to the cloakroom or his committee room. Like a judge on the bench, he sticks to his chair, and follows speaker after speaker. His desk is usually littered over with tariff documents, trade reports, books of estimates and other reference papers. These the New Yorker scans carefully from time to time.

The other day Senator Crawford of South Dakota, Root's nearest neighbor, made a speech. In his enthusiasm he began swinging his arms, delivering uppercuts, jabs and jolts with reckless abandon. Root was kept busy dodging his head right and left to avoid the swings of the frensied westerner. The spectacle greatly amused the Senate.

Senator Crane is Prince Runabout. He gets his name from his habit of flitting here and there, picking up the news and gossip of the Senate. He is wonderfully well informed on the sub rosa information of the Senate. The Senator has been accused of wearing gum shoes. Hale of Maine, who is fat and more than forty, moves about the Senate with a stately dignity that is most impressive. He follows the same methods in debate. He rises leasurely and talks leisurely. He holds his glasses in his right hand, and by slowly and deliberately waving them up and down gives emphasis to his remarks.

SALTON SEA KEEPS CALM.

Yet Three Federal Bodies Toy With It.

All It Does, or Fails to Do Noted by Scientists.

Government Seeks Formula of Evaporation.

Three distinct branshes of the government service are interested in the wonderful evaporation of the waters of Salton Sea. The United States Geological Survey is making measurements, which show the sea will have disappeared by 1925. The Reclamation Service has been conducting a series of experiments, and the Weather Bureau has a station there for taking observations to secure a formula for evaporation.

The rapid sinking of the waters may also have a bearing on litigation which is pending in the United States Circuit Court. If it is definitely decided that the salt works may be put in operation again at some future date, it is possible that this fact may affect suits for damages arising from the filling of the old sink.

Under the burning desert sun, in an atmosphere of great dryness, the evaporation is probably greater than from any other body of water in the country. The prediction that the sea will dry up within the next sixteen years is based upon the supposition that no more water flows into it from the Colorado River. Possible floods might greatly increase the depth of the sea and upset the calculations of the engineers.

An examination was made of Salton Sea in 1907 in regard to its availability for an extensive research into the laws controlling the rate of water evaporation from large lakes and reservoirs.

CO-OPERATION PLAN.

A plan was recently perfected whereby the United States Weather Bureau, the Reclamation Service and the United States Geological Survey could coöperate. The Weather Bureau has furnished the evaporation pans, thermometers, anemometers, burette gage tubes, record books and tables.

"Our observations have been valuable for the short time we have been taking them," said Weather Observer Wollaber yesterday, "but no definite conclusions can be reached. Our bureau is not directly interested in the lowering of the waters. We are trying to secure a formula of evaporation. The subject is too technical to interest the public, but it is regarded as of the utmost importance by scientific men."

Wollaber is an enthusiast on the subject, and he believes the researches of Prof. Frank H. Bigelow of the Weather Bureau will be of incalculable benefit.

The work done by the Geological Survey is of a different nature. The water resources branch of that service is intended to aid in the conservation of water, and pamphlets are published as a guide to engineers interested in the conservation problem.

HOLDS STORAGE WATERS.

In a recent report on the ground water of the Indio region, it is stated that the chief beneficial effect of the Salton Sea is to prevent the escape of the storage waters in the Coachella Valley.

"The only source of the underground waters in this region," states the report, "is the rainfall on the desert and surrounding mountains. The waters that are being developed in the Coachella Valley have slowly accumulated during a long period. The amount added annually constitutes but a small portion of the supply.

"Formerly the waters percolated toward the Salton Sea, and upon coming to the surface evaporated. The water which now fills the Salton Sea tends to hold back this evaporation of the underground waters. While the slow decline of artesian pressure may take place in the Indio region, this should not be harmful to the agricultural interests for many years to come, even if twice the amount of water now developed is procured.

"It is believed that by a proper utilization of the present supply and that to be developed, several times the acreage now under cultivation may be made productive without too great drafts upon the fluid resources.

"Pumped waters will become increasingly important, and will be relied upon more and more as time passes. Pumped waters are used more cautiously than artesian waters. Human nature cannot be trusted to value or manage well that which costs little.

"Therefore, artesian waters will be wasted and pumped waters will be used with care in the same area. The cheapness of gasoline and crude oil and the efficiency of engines which utilize these fuels, will make their application in irrigation more and more feasible as development continues."

"THE VALLEY OF OUR LADY."

An Interesting Story of the San Gabriel Valley from a Romantic and Historic View.

The current number of the West Coast Magazine contains an enthusiastic article by John S. McGroarty dealing with the romantic history of the San Gabriel Valley, which the writer calls "The Valley of Our Lady." It is one of a series of stories by the same author, in which the sentimental interest attaching to the beauty spots of California is brought out. The present article is profusely illustrated with handsome engravings, many of which are unique and have never before appeared in print.

"The Valley of Our Lady" is written in Mr. McGroarty's well-known style, familiar to readers of The Times. "The Valley of Our Lady," he says, "lies in the very heart of California of the South, midway between the great dyke of the Tehachepi and San Diego's harbor of the sun. The Mother Mountains hem it in as though with the shining scimiter of a giant god. Its open boundaries are the Sunset Sea's white shores of glory. Its capital is the world-famed city of Los Angeles, metropolis of the wide-flung, magical Southwest, reborn to verdant pastures and orchard blooms from desert dust and immemorial wastes."

Among other pictures there is a fine frontispiece of San Gabriel mission, a view of the Lugo house in which lived the man who once owned San Gabriel Valley, "The Old Adobe" house of the treaty on the grounds of The Outpost near Hollywood, and a striking view of the valley from Echo Mountain.

ELECTRICAL ENGINEERS' MEET.

The Los Angeles section of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers will hold its anual meeting at the Hollenbeck Hotel on Thursday evening at 6:30 p.m. Annual reports of committees and the chairman's report of the annual convention at the Thousand Islands will be heard. Following the business session the Entertainment Committee will provide amusement features. It will be the closing meeting of a successful year.

The Day of Our Birth.

By Walter J. Ballard.

WHEN Liberty Bell rang out 133 years ago today, it told the world that a nation was born; born to struggle and endeavor; born to hope and purpose; born to toil and suffering, and born to accomplishments, the equal of which the world has never before seen.

On that day we were a nation of less than 5,000,000 people; now, we number over 85,000,000, with nearly 10,000,000 more resident in our possessions across the seas.

On that day our western boundary of occupation was barely 500 miles from the Atlantic coast; now, that boundary is the Pacific Ocean, with Hawaii, Guam and the Philippines, marking our way across that ocean to the Far East.

On that day it took us days and some weeks to send a message only a few hundred miles; now, five minutes enables us to talk from New York with a friend in Chicago, or from Los Angeles to San Francisco, while in a single hour (or less) we can send a message to Manila and receive its answer.

On that day our exports did not exceed a value of $20,000,000 yearly; now, their value is $2,000,000,000.

On that day our imports were covered by $25,000,000; now, they approach $1,500,000,000.

On that day schoolhouses were few and far between; now, nearly 260,000 common schools are centers for the creation of good American citizenship, besides several thousand universities, colleges, special schools, and other institutions of American educational advancement, with more than 20,000,000 pupils and students therein.

On that day the few factories in our country barely supplied the wants of our few people; now, more than 500,000 factories supply the wants of 85,000,000 people at home, and help to meet the needs of other peoples by a yearly export contribution of manufactures, worth $800,000,000, and have a total yearly of about $17,000 in value.

On that day the area of our nation was less than 830,000 square miles; now, it exceeds 3,000,000 square miles, without counting the area of our overseas possessions and valuable Alaska.

On that day the deposits in our savings banks did not total $1,000,000; now, those deposits total $3,500,000,000, besides $4,000,000,000 on deposit in our national banks, and almost as much in our State banks.

On that day our total money circulation was about $20,000,000; now, it exceeds $3,000,000,000.

On that day our yearly postal receipts were less than a $250,000; now, they amount to over $200,000,000 a year.

On that day not a mile of steam railway existed in our country (in fact, only twenty-three miles in 1830;) now, our steam road mileage in operation is over 230,000,000 miles, besides our enormous electric railway mileage.

On that day thirteen stars glimmered feebly on our flag; now, forty-six stars shine forth brilliantly, each representing a strong and independent American commonwealth.

On that day a few dollars paid the yearly salaries of our schoolteachers; now, they are remunerated with more than $200,000,000 each year.

On that day our annual production of cotton was less than 50,000 bales; now, the yearly output exceeds 11,000,000 bales.

On that day our national wealth was considerably less than $1,000,000,000; now, it is fully $120,000,000,000.

On that day a very few millions of dollars covered the yearly value of our farm products; now, their yearly value exceeds $7,500,000,000.

On that day our annual government ordinary receipts and ordinary expenditures were much less than $5,000,000; now, they are each year more than $600,000,000.

On that day our chief national assets were faith, hope, courage and patriotism; now, they are the same, plus accomplished effort, strengthened national union, a firmer grasp on the principles and practice of freedom, a stronger hope for the future, difficulties overcome, as an incentive toward overcoming difficulties yet to be faced, a spirit which enables us to dare and do because we have dared and done, and the confidence born of the fact that we are Americans—citizens of the strongest and most hopeful nation of nations.

IN WASHINGTON AND NEW YORK.

BY MARSHALL CUSHING.

NEW YORK, June 28.—The ship subsidy advocates have a brand new plan. Hon. William E. Humphrey, member from Seattle, has introduced a bill in Congress. As this cannot be considered in the present extra session, it is more or less a feeler; and it is believed by those who believe in ship subsidies at all to contain several new features, which will make it appeal to the farm population, or, more strictly, to the Congressional districts and the States of the Middle West, which thus far have beaten every ocean mail bill or subsidy bill since the time of Postmaster-General Wannamaker and President Harrison, or in 1891, in other words. The project is backed up now, as for several years past, by the Merchant Marine League, headquarters, Cleveland. The president of this is Col. "Jim" Butler of Youngstown, and the active man is John A. Penton. Mr. Fassett, member from the Elmira District of New York, Mr. Humphrey and others are expected, between now and the regular session in December, to make many speeches before more or less sympathetic bodies. And several ex's, like McCleary of Minnesota and "Jim" Watson, lately unsuccessful candidate for Governor of Indiana, and others are probably on the staff already. The Merchant Marine League has shown, as evidence that it has made good, and is about to make good still further, a card index, doubtless after the Hitchcock plan, of seventy-five or more interested and influential citizens in at least 200 Congressional districts; and the proposition, no doubt, is to reach these trusty supporters of ocean mail pay at the right time, when the campaign is really on.

The project has not for years excited very much interest in New York. In the old days, when the last of the bills was passed, Clement A. Griscom of Philadelphia, then head of the American Line, and now the chairman of the American Mercantile Marine, and the late Commodore Hughes of the Ward Line, used to manipulate things quite satisfactorily, because they were successful. New Yorkers, of course, are interested in the Merchant Marine League, though not one of them, no matter how many millions he has, can possible subscribe to the cause, as the promoters of the cause declare, more than $10 a year for membership. Repeated efforts are supposed to have been made to interest E. H. Harriman in the subject—only in a large way, of course; and this is proper, since we can still recall the word of his lawyers for it that Mr. Harriman lives in a higher and totally different atmosphere. In spite of Harriman's large interests in transportation across the Pacific—and across all other oceans, for aught we know—these efforts to secure his financial backing for the subsidy proposition have thus far failed. We know, also, that "Jim" Hill has not subscribed a hundred thousand dollars for the coming campaign.

The shipbuilders themselves, who maintain only a shadow of an organization, have spent a great deal of money in times past trying to secure legislation, but they have practically given up the idea of getting results in that way; and besides, we have the statement of more than one of them that they are "broke." The Merchant Marine League people are no doubt sincere in believing that with the modified provisions of the Humphrey bill staring the farmer in the face, with the big interests and the shipbuilders out of it, and thus not exciting suspicion, and with the work largely educational, provided it is really done, they will succeed this time. New York has been something of a center of interest for the subsidy advocates, because of the presence here of the representatives of the German steamship lines. They are very politic and influential persons, with a long reach. It is generally believed that they alone could have prevented subsidies for American ships at almost any time within the last fifteen years, if they had chosen.

The corporation tax amendment has not pleased our corporation friends in Wall street, as few expected it would. It has been noticed, of course, that Senator Aldrich pushed it up to the king row at exactly the same time with the income tax proposition, and that the corporation tax amendment was one of the sufficient causes, doubtless, why the income tax amendment was not considered all the time; and there have been questionings whether the chairman of the Finance Committee was not in reality beating the income tax for good and all—or for a time—by these very means, they, at the same time, guaranteeing that the corporation tax amendment should pass. However that may be, President Taft has always been considered sincere in urging the corporation tax. It is the crystallization, in a way, of the Taft programme of corporation regulation, which I described perhaps six months ago in this very column. With it would go, evidently, a pretty thorough examination by government inquisitors into the actual organization and management of corporations—an examination probably as drastic as the examiners chose to make it. In a general way there would be a resulting discouragement of such corporation practices as still keep the muckraker going largely, and contribute so importantly to the uplift through the nuremous uplift magazines, so called.

One thing may be counted on; that Mr. Taft, though working in a quiet way, and (as some say) too modest and complacent a manner, has given a great amount of study to this whole question, and he has also had the help of some—only a few, of course—of the ablest New York lawyers, as well as of the various very able lawyers who make up his Cabinet so largely. Something interesting will come out of it, perhaps an income tax, in three or four years, as the President really thinks there will. It helps greatly to crystalize the opinion of a certain body of ninety statesmen on the matter that the temperature hovers for days around ninety in the Senate chamber.

Certain food manufacturers and canners breathed easier when the legitimacy of President Roosevelt's board of experts controlling the pure food decisions of the Department of Agriculture was established. This board had been projected originally for the theoretical purpose, as many think, of enabling Uncle "Jim" Wilson, Secretary of Agriculture—who still declares that he is not going to resign—to save his official face. In reality, it is suspected of having been created to stand watch over Dr. Wiley, the chief chemist of the department, who had been so free in condemning the use of benzoate of soda in the preparation of food products.

The users of benzoate are not breathing so easy since the recent annual meeting of the American Medical Association declared against the use of benzoate. In several States it is the purpose of the pure food people, so called, to knock it out by legislation. Thus, the national organization of canners, which believes in the use of benzoate, or, at least, uses it, or, anyhow, wants to be allowed to use it, is encountering considerable opposition at various State capitals, and though they have a long reach—though probably not so long as Mr. Harriman's—they are evidently to be kept quite busy during the next year or two. Meantime the manufacturers of food products who haven't used benzoate of soda in their business, and evidently don't want to use it, occupy a strong strategical position, partly because of the support of the leading association of doctors, which has lately been given to them—at the White House, as well as by resolution at Atlantic City, and the two things are very different—and partly because of the expensive advertising campaign, which one of the manufacturers, at least, must be spending thousands of dollars for; for there are periodicals which require as high as $5000 of your money if you occupy a single page with your advertising one time.

This advertising, by the way, is very smoothly done. Though it is put out in the name of one manufacturer, which is naturally proper, if he pays the bill, he always makes a good talk in the advertisements about the fact that plenty of food manufacturers besides himself manage to get along without benzoate of soda. This advantage, I suppose, may be based, partly at least, upon the results of the same good uplift, whatever it may be; and sometimes it is a little difficult to locate it accurately. Pure food? Why, certainly; everybody wants it; and no matter how pure some of the impurities may be, so to speak, nobody wants them—or, at least, who does? So here is another educational proposition. The problem might be called psychological, not merely for the advertiser, who talks very effectively indeed in favor of a product which doesn't contain any article somewhat widely supposed to be under suspicion, but by the politician of the politicians, whoever they may be—and I do not now and never will use the term disrespectfully—who must manipulate things to their liking at Washington and at the various State capitals.

Mabel,

who is a much better giant-killer than Jack of the fable. "Don't run," said Mrs. Donlin, at the moment of this picture, "only girls are supposed to be afraid of rats!"

A TEAM.

THOSE DONLINS, MIKE AND MABEL.

GENIUS OF ONE COMPLEMENTS OTHER'S PHYSICAL PROWESS.

"I Never Let Mike See Me Put on False Hair," Says Mabel, "Until He Sneaked Himself Into His Make-up One Night—Oh, It Was Awful! He Looked Like a Fish."

BY JULIAN JOHNSON.

Mabel Hite, who is without any doubt the most successful soubrette on the American stage, conquers, like many another modern-day player, entirely by very well-applied arts of personality.

Mabel Hite is funny on the stage, but she is no less funny off stage—because she is herself, and she can't get away from herself.

Gale and I sat on a trunk in the Orpheum dressing-room of Mabel and Mike the other evening. For a well-mated pair, commend me to Mabel and Mike. Each is the necessary complement of the other. Mike, big, burly, ruddy and good-natured, admires the frail, vivacious genius of his little wife just as much as she, in turn, admires his strength.

Mabel plastered her hair tightly to her head, and picked up some more hair that matched it very nicely. Gale wiggled, on his end of the trunk.

"Don't be afraid," said Mabel, reassuringly, "only girls have a right to be frightened at rats."

"Mike and I were married three months before he was onto these little arts," she continued, in a wiry sort of speech coming from a mouthful of hairpins. "I used to sneak into the bathroom and come out looking like the Queen of Sheba dressed up for King Solomon.

"But one day I caught Mike trying that I could have no worse secrets than that I could have no worse secrets than his at that moment. He had put on everything in the make-up box.

" 'Mike,' I said, 'if you want to do a monologue, go ahead, but with me—never, while you look like that!' "

Mrs. Donlin's face was a pictorial tragedy. "Oh, it was dreadful!" she exclaimed. "He looked just like a fish! I expected to see him swim onto the stage. That was last fall, and only in the past two weeks has he learned to make up his face himself."

I ventured a question as to Mrs. Donlin's first stage venture.

"Nine years ago," she said, "as the Orphan in 'A Milk-White Flag.' And I played Los Angeles in my very first season, too."

"This is honest about my getting my baseball start in Los Angeles," put in Mike. "Really—I was a sandlot player here, and when I played a game with San Diego, I felt that I had arrived at success. Afterward, I went East from Santa Cruz."

Mabel began to carmine her lips. "My next venture was the thing in which Los Angeles audiences probably got their first real impression of me—'The Chaperons.' And that I played in various pieces, and in 'A Knight for a Day,' for forty-eight weeks."

Gale noticed a picture of a very handsome young woman on Mike's side of the dressing table, and Mabel noticed that Gale noticed it.

"We let impressionable people think that's a portrait of Mike's affinity, or something," said Mabel, demurely. "But in reality—it's my mother." At the most, she appears only an older sister.

Mrs. Donlin patted her face in silence for a few moments, and then she sighed. "Mike," she said, "I'm thinking of that time I tried out a vaudeville act in Yonkers." She turned to her visitors. "Gee, it was awful! I had a manikin figure of Donald Brian made and I did a burlesque 'Merry Widow' dance, with about fifteen seconds of very bum ventriloquism on the side. The next day the papers in Yonkers said that 'Mabel Hite would be a good ventriloquist, in time.' And that was all. Oh!"

"Remember the girl that stole our act in New York?" queried Mike.

"Do I!" ejaculated Mabel. "She put it over me—good! Every night she'd come back to the dressing-room and say, 'Oh, I thought that speech was just the funniest thing! Oh, it was so funny! But I didn't get it all—what was it?' And me—the goose! I felt puffed up, so I'd stop dressing and say, 'Why that was m-m-m-m-m, or m-m-m-m-m,' or whatever it was—and in three weeks she had the whole thing."

"We went up-State and followed 'em on the same bill. Can you imagine it? Well! Same business! Same lines! Where I used false hair, she used her hat. So I didn't make many of my speeches. I just turned to the audience and remarked, 'Here was what Miss S. said an hour ago—you remember!' The audience caught the joke and howled. And the manager caught it—and canned 'em.

"And since we left the East I hear another woman has stolen our act. Maybe we'll sue."

"Sue nothing!" this from Mike. "When we get home I'm going over early the next morning and punch her husband's face."

A shadow of anxiety crossed Mrs. Donlin's brow. "Have you got him sized up right?" she whispered.

"I have," returned Mike, firmly. "He's a runt and he's got a yellow streak. I'll beat him till he promises to make his wife quit."

Mabel seemed anxious to get into the melee. "Perhaps you might fix up a little go for the girl and me."

"Nothing doing!" concluded Mike. "You're not strong on fighting anybody—except me."

"Speaking of acts," continued Mabel, presently. "Vincent Bryan has written us a new one that we hoped to try out here next week, as it's our conclusion for the summer."

"But the baseball situation isn't right," added Mr. Donlin, "so we're waiting. I think we'll go to Europe," he added, with a certain blasé air.

"Hah!"—a Mabel contribution—"I'll be funny in Europe. I can't pronounce the langwidge.

"This sounds joemillerish, but it's true, I swear. I went into a book store in Portland the other day, and asked for 'that book of Victor Hugo's his great book—'Less Miserables.'

"The clerk had high-heeled shoes and a talcum-powder voice. 'Pahdon me,' he corrected, with a faint smile, 'doubtless you mean 'Lah Meesairahble?'

" 'Yes,' I said, 'I don't know whether that's right or not, but it's less miserable than mine, anyway. So I'll take it.' "

"At any rate," added Mike, after this ignoramus reminiscence, "you must have a rest."

"That's true," agreed Mabel, wearily. "My head bothers me all the time. I think it's my eyes, and I wear dark glasses off-stage. There's no use in going to doctors all the time. Sometimes my head hurts me so I have to take hypo shots of morphine before I go on."

"I think she's going out in a dope-fiend act next season and put Junie McCree out of business," suggested Mike, grimly.

"Well, I don't think!" corrected Mabel. "Ours is baseball dope, and baseball dope and pipe dope sure won't mix!"

There was a silence of finishing touches.

"Home? Well, Mike likes the West and I like it, but we work so much in New York that I think we'll build at Brighton Beach."

"We own a lot there," added Mr. Donlin, with an Astorian air.

"And the extension of the subway," finished his spouse, "will take us to Forty-second street in thirty-five minutes."

"This week," she went on, "we're keeping house in an apartment."

"Can you cook?" I asked. Mrs. Donlin looked injured.

"She can keep me in hot water, at any rate," laughed Mike.

"That's right!" hissed she, spitefully; "lobsters are my specialty!"

"O-o-oh!" from Mike.

"Next year? Vaudeville, I guess, though I don't know. In this business you never can tell." Mrs. Donlin raised her hands, Frenchily.

"And I'm going back to baseball next summer," said Mike. "I would have been there now if the money had been right."

"You bet!" said his wife.

"I do not bet!" he returned, with startling immediateness. "Only a little while ago I had a sure twenty-to-one shot, but I couldn't take it."

"Why?" This from one of the trunked parties.

Mike looked mournfully at Mabel. In eloquent answer, she gave him a stage-villainess glare.

"I never bet but once in my life," said Mabel. "I'm a dreadful loser. On this occasion I had positive information that the beast of my choice could beat the Vanderbilt cup winner. I put up $70."

"How did he come in?"

"If I remember correctly," said Mabel, with precision—"seventieth."

The hair dressing was all but finished.

"Look! Look!" jeered Michael, "mother's got the haying done! Gee! I wouldn't wear all that on my head for——"

"Intermission's over," said Maybelle, briefly, testing her stage smile.

Michele slipped off his dressing gown, and stood, a mighty form in gymnasium trunks; Gale slipped his Rembrandt impressions into his pocket, and we both slipped out the door.

THE LOCAL WEEK.

Members of the newly-organized Morosco Musical Comedy Company will make their début at Hamburger's Majestic Theater tonight, the piece selected as their opening attraction being "Sergeant Kitty," a two-act musical merriment, the scenes of which are laid in France. "Sergeant Kitty" is new to Los Angeles.

The Morosco company is headed by Harry Girard and Agnes Caine-Brown. Its productions will be made under Mr. Girard's personal direction, with George Towle as musical director. His part in "Sergeant Kitty" will be the first Mr. Girard has played here, though his voice was heard at the Burbank recently, incidental to the presentation of "A Milk White Flag" at that house. Miss Caine-Brown was the first Favorita in the Burbank run of "The Circus Girl," retiring from the cast, however, before the piece was withdrawn, because of illness. She is now wholly recovered, and will sing the name role in the current offering.

Others prominently cast include Miss Marie Nelson, who was five years at the Casino Theater, New York, under Shubert management, and who came West to play the prima donna role in "Peggy From Paris" in San Francisco. Miss Edna Maison, the contralto, is well known locally, having sung frequently in concerts and from various local stages. Miss Maybelle Baker is the young woman who stepped into the breach and saved the Kolb and Dill show when Miss Adele Rafter was hurt in an automobile accident in the last week of the company's stay at the Majestic. Percy V. Bronson, who will have the role of Henri De Merrilac, was juvenile man with Kolb and Dill, and has many friends and admirers here, who will be glad to welcome him back again. Several of the Burbank players will be "loaned" to the Majestic for this production, parts having been assigned to Henry Stockbridge, William Yerance, Charles Giblyn, Louise Royce and Madeline Del Mar.

"Sergeant Kitty" tells a rather complicated story of an elopement, a marriage by proxy, a supposed duality of wives and confusion of husbands. As a matter of course, there are the usual assortment of mistaken identities, Kitty herself masquerading first as a postillion and later as a sergeant in the Twenty-second Hussars.

A feature of the production will be an "all show-girl chorus." The company numbers well over fifty persons and is said to be the strongest singing organization ever formed for Los Angeles. New costumes have been made especially for use this week, and a picturesque stage setting is promised.

The Belasco Theater company will revert to musical comedy this week, presenting, with many specialty interpolations, Hoyt's "A Day and a Night in New York."

The story revolves about a young man named Marbel Hart, whose father is a retired commander of the United States Navy. The young man lives with his father and mother in New Jersey, and presumably goes to New York every week to engage a choir for his New Jersey church. It transpires that, instead of being a quiet and inoffensive chap, he is very much of a rounder, and his visits to New York take on the semblance of a twenty-four-hour period of supreme hilarity. For the purpose of the comedy, Hoyt brings the hen-pecked father and the strenuous mother and the young man together on the stage of a New York theater, where the young fellow has gone to hire a comic opera chorus for the church choir. Slight as though the plot of Hoyt's "A Day and Night in New York" is, it is sufficient to carry a dozen or more musical numbers, and the Belasco patrons will hear some of the most recent New York successes.

Harry Oakes will sing "When You Love a Certain Girl;" Fay Bainter will introduce a new song, "Won't You Be My Billie Possum?"; Beatrice Noyes will occupy her vocal talent with "Make a Noise Like a Hoop and Roll Away;" Louis Morrison will sing "The Midnight Crew;" Adele Farrington will render Blanche Ring's success, "Tip, Hi Addy, Hi Aye;" Bessie Tannehill will sing "Invitation" and "Delight;" Florence Reed will offer Marie Cahill's Arab love song; Charles Murray will sing "Don't Take Me Home," a farcical musical number, and Richard Bennett will sing Nat M. Wills's "B.P.O.E."

Besides the regular Belasco company there will be a score or more of attractive young women engaged for the production.

The engagement of the Princess Theater Company at the Mason Operahouse will be brought to a close with a production of Fred Mace's play, "The Umpire." In this musical comedy Mace scored a big hit at the Majestic some two years ago, where he broke the house records in point of attendance. It is easily the best character in which Mace has yet appeared in a professional way. He is extremely funny all through the musical comedy. He impersonates Jimmie Dolan, the unfortunate baseball umpire, who permitted his eyes to stray in the direction of feminine beauty in the grand stand while a baseball game was in progress, and who consequently gave a decision adverse to the popular team. He is ably assisted by May Boley, as Maribel Lewton, who distinguishes herself as the quarterback in a football game, which is played by the attractive girl chorus in the colors of Stanford and Berkeley. Helen Darling, Zoe Barnett, Ellen Crane, Jennie Metzler, Bud Ross, Ed Emery and Walter Catlett will have good roles. The musical numbers are liberally interspersed throughout the action of the play, and include some very tuneful songs and choruses, notable: "The Umpire Is a Most Unhappy Man," "You Look Awfully Good to Father," "I Want a Girl Like You," "The Sun That Shines in Dixie Land," "Drums of the Fore and Aft," and "The Quarterback."

Few plays are as popular with patrons of the Burbank as "Sherlock Holmes," the Gillette-made melodrama which has as its central figure the great detective created by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, and which will be revived at the Main-street playhouse this week, with William Desmond in the name part; A. Byron Beasley, as Prof. Moriarty; Blanche Hall as Alice Faulkner, and others of the Burbank organization appropriately cast. The play is in five acts, and was last seen locally at this same house something more than a year ago, when T. Daniel Frawley played Holmes and Miss Maude Gilbert, Alice Faulkner.

The cast, in addition to those already named, will introduce H. S. Duffield as Holmes's devoted Boswell, Dr. Watson; David Edwin as his assistant; Harry Mestayer as Sidney Prince; John W. Burton as Sir Edward Leighton; Frederick Gilbert as the rascally Larrabee; Lovell Alice Taylor as Madge Larrabee, and Margo Duffet as Theresa.

An effective stage environment is promised.

The Grand Operahouse stock company will this week offer Lillian Mortimer's romance in melodramatic form, "A Girl of the Streets." This play will afford Alice Lewis, soubrette of the organization, further opportunities to endear herself to the patrons of the Main-street playhouse. Miss Lewis will, of course, have the principal role.

The usual thrilling situations will not be wanting. George Webb will be seen in a part that should fit his talents to a nicety, while Harry Earl, George Field, Carl Burk, Chester Stevens, Robert Leonard, Miss Grace Rauworth, Miss Marjorie Dalton and others of the company will be seen in congenial roles.

During Elks' week the Grand stage will be occupied—for that period only—by the Princess Theater Company, in "The Rounders." After this the melodrama company will return.

The Walker Theater, a large, well-ventilated house, which is cool, even on a very hot day, will present another bill of good vaudeville this week. It is headed by Helena Butler and her company, in a sketch by J. T. Pendergast, entitled "A Rural Romance." This little playlet is said to contain many funny situations. Miss Butler and her company have won much praise for the good work they do in this sketch.

Jessie Lee, a little girl with a big voice, who made a hit at the Walker a few months ago, will return, with a novelty act. Woodward and his trick dog, "Girlie," have a novel offering in music and comedy. Joseph Manley as well as Jessie has new songs, with illustrations.

The orchestra will give a concert programme, and new motion pictures of various sorts will be shown.

Six new acts will be put on at the Los Angeles, for the week commencing tomorrow afternoon. The feature of the bill will be Nadje, Parisian artist's model, in graceful poses and hand-balancing. Another attraction of importance will be Weston and Young with a company of five players, in a funny skit based on newspaper life, "The New Reporter."

Saona, portrayer of famous men, will offer a series of portraits in character, including among his subjects Andrew Carnegie, William McKinley, Theodore Roosevelt and others. Another comedy sketch is furnished by Siebert Lindley and his company, presenting "Her Own Mother." Martynne, mirror and fire dancer, will present an elaborately costumed act, which requires the assistance of a corps of electricians. Kessler and Dunne, singing and dancing comedians, will be remembered from their work here last season.

The Ellis-Howland Company, in "A Night at the Circus," will headline the Orpheum bill this week. The act has a score of performers, and is said to picture all that the name implies.

Cheridah Simpson, last here as a star in "Red Feather," will appear in skirts, and will give a number of songs, playing her own piano accompaniment.

"A Spotless Reputation," political sketch, is said to be dramatic and timely. It will be presented by Albert J. Pellaton and W. Foran.

The Novelty Dancing Four will add the terpsichorean touch to the bill.

In the Spotlight.

It is said that Eugene Walter is about to write a play for the use of Alla Nazimova.

Frank Worthing has been engaged by David Belasco for the principal role in "The Open Door."

Miss Ruth Maycliffe, formerly in "The Bachelor," has gone to Mexico to spend the summer with her parents.

Edward J. Connelly, who is to appear in "The Dollar Princess" has gone to his summer home at Lake Sunapee, N. H.

Rose Coghlan's name is mentioned in connection with the New Theater. It is said she has been engaged for a special line of work.

Robert Hilliard sailed for Europe last Saturday to spend July in England, France and Holland. He will return in time to resume his starring tour in "A Fool There Was."

Frances Starr sailed for Europe last Wednesday, to be abroad until the latter part of August. She is due to reappear at the Stuyvesant Theater in "The Easiest Way" on September 4.

The New Netherland is to be the name of a theater in New York City to be built and operated by William A. Brady. He plans to open it on January 3 with Louis Mann in a new play.

Negotiations for an Australian tour by Robert Mantell have fallen through and he will spend the greater part of next season in the South and West, not coming to Chicago until after Christmas.

MUSIC AND MUSICIANS.

By Julian Johnson.

The authorities of the Royal Operahouse in Berlin recently accepted for production a grand opera in three acts, entitled "Poia," libretto by Randolph Hartley and music by Arthur Nevin.

The event has been hailed in New York as the greatest honor ever accorded American music-makers abroad, and has won columns of discussion from the leading American critics.

Mr. Hartley is a former Angeleño, and the libretto of "Poia" was planned and written in this city, several years ago. Mr. Hartley's father, Rev. Benjamin Hartley, has been for many years rector of the Episcopal church at San Gabriel.

The story of the piece concerns a legendary character of the same name, who, in order to win the love of a girl of his tribe, made a hazardous journey to the home of the Sun God, and, because of his bravery and devotion, was chosen by the gods to be their prophet on earth. The legend upon which the libretto is founded is really the Christ-story of the Indians of the Northwest. It differs from all similar legends from the fact that human love is the inspiration that leads the hero to spiritual perfection. Mr. Hartley has followed as closely as possible in dramatic form the original Indian legends, which were gathered and translated by Walter McClintock, a young American ethnologist who has made a specialty of Indian folk-lore. Mr. Nevin's score is based upon original Indian themes, which he himself obtained at first hand from the Indians of the Northwest. The work in general has been constructed upon the lines of the most modern music-drama.

The first production of "Poia" will be made under the Kaiser's direction next season.

Harrison Grey Fiske, in the editorial column of the Dramatic Mirror writes of the opera and its authors as follows:

"The acceptance of Randolph Hartley and Arthur Nevin's grand opera, 'Poia' by the Royal Operahouse of Berlin marks a very important step forward in regard to the recognition of American art abroad.

"Never before has a serious opera by Americans been accepted by a European court theater.

"That a native librettist and composer have been forced by conditions at home to go abroad for a hearing is a matter over which Americans have no reason to be proud, but since they were obliged to 'carry their coals to Newcastle,' it is gratifying to know that their work has won, merely through its acceptance by the authorities of the Berlin Royal Opera, the highest recognition in the world of operatic art.

"This means that the libretto first passed muster under the readers, the stage director and the director-general, and that the music gained the approbation of such authorities as Humperdinck and Muck, who are among the examiners at the Berlin Opera.

"There is likely to be little favor shown in such examinations at the Kaiser's own operahouse, and the work of the two Americans had to stand comparison with the work of the foremost European librettists and composers of the time.

"Both Mr. Hartley and Mr. Nevin are men of ability, and, though comparatively young in years, have served long apprenticeships in their chosen fields. The fact of the acceptance of the work by the distinguished authorities of the Royal Opera almost insures its artistic success, and places the hall-mark of artistic efficiency upon the librettist and composer.

"In this case, as in so many other cases, native opportunity was neglected. It is understood that 'Poia' was submitted to the authorities of the Metropolitan Operahouse, New York—and declined.

"When will America display and enforce original judgment in such matters?"

Rennold Wolf in the Morning Telegraph has this to say: "The news that has come from Berlin to the effect that a grand opera in three acts, entitled 'Poia,' by Randolph Hartley and Arthur Nevin, has been accepted by the director of the Royal Operahouse in the German capital is of considerably more than passing interest to those who are seriously concerned with American music. So far, only two or three grand operas by Americans have reached the stage, and of these none has ever been presented in a court operahouse of Europe. The opera, 'Poia,' is essentially 'of the soil;' and, in subject, at least, is worthy of the responsible position that it will occupy as the introductory American grand opera in Europe. The fact that it has won acceptance at so artistically conservative an institution as the Berlin Royal Opera, where it must needs have stood the test of comparison with the work of the foremost composers and librettists of the time, indicates that it is up to the highest artistic standards. A production at the Royal Opera cannot be bought, nor can it be obtained by social influence. The verdict of the German public—it will, of course, be sung in German—remains to be given and heard, but the acceptance alone of the opera is a decided step forward for American music, and places Mr. Nevin and Mr. Hartley in a position for which they have striven long and earnestly."

The Musical Salon closed its season last Monday evening with a dinner and musicale, at which an extensive programme was presented. A social gathering will be held occasionally by this organization during July and August.

A membership of 129 is what the Salon boasts at the present time, of whom one-third are active chorus singers.

Mrs. Lily Link-Brannan received her pupils and their parents in a novel al fresco affair Friday afternoon at her home, Oak Lodge, Ramona avenue.

The guests were seated under a great oak tree which shades the house, and, after a musicale, luncheon was served.

Those who appeared in musical numbers were the Misses Dorothy Hallock, Margaret Boyle, Corinne and Dorothy Wright, Fern and Ione Thompson, Margaret Fergusson, Marjorie Smith, Mildred Shaer, Juanita Bowen, Emma Laning, Laura Lattin, Marie Short, Edna Aikin, Marian Newberry, Virginia Dreiling, Emily Townsend, Charline Baker, Wilhelmina Rector, Marian Oxnar, Helen Spencer, Juanita Pawley, Marie Schumann and Mrs. H. S. Laughlin.

Miss Alice Waddell Johnston gave a recital under Miss Beresford Joy's auspices, on Thursday afternoon, at the home of Mrs. Charles H. Toll, No. 1038 Elden avenue. Miss Johnston was assisted by Mme. Elsa von Grofe-Menasco, 'cellist; Miss Florence Sterling, reader, and Miss Merle Ball, pianist.

Moore's Band programme at Eastlake today includes an "Il Trovatore" selection, Tobani's "Japanese Patrol," Von Grofe's "Elks' Reunion" march, Suppe's "Jolly Robbers" overture, and Thome's "Simple Aveu."

Jean de Chauvenet's "Pecadora" suite seems to be winning favor in the East, as the composer has found it upon a number of programmes recently, one of which is that of the commencement concert of the Conrath Conservatory, in St. Louis.

Randolph Hartley,

former Angeleno, whose opera, "Poia," music by Arthur Nevin, has just been accepted by the Berlin Royal Opera. The New York reviewers claim that this is the greatest honor ever accorded American music.

A Holiday.

Along the pastoral ways I go,
 To get the healing of the trees;
The ghostly news the hedges know;
 To hive me honey like the bees,
Against the time of snow.

The common hawthorn that I see,
 Beside the sunken wall astir,
Or any other blossoming tree,
 Is each God's fair white gospeler,
His book upon the knee.

A gust-broken bough; a pilfered nest;
 Rumors of orchard or of bin;
The thrifty things of east and west—
 The countryside becomes my inn,
And I its happy guest.

LIZETTE WOODWORTH REESE.

Some Decorations.

Antoon Molkenboer has just gone to New York to execute a series of panels for the new building of the Teese-Wilkinson Company. This important work will occupy him for five or six months. When it is completed it is the artist's intention to take a trip to Holland for a month or two, to paint "types" in the Island of Marken. These pictures are a commission from the art dealer, Buffa, of Amsterdam.

Some time during the coming summer the studies of San Francisco ruins, which Mr. Molkenboer made, and which have already been exhibited in the Schaus gallery in New York, will be shown at the Galerie Van Erven Dorens in Amsterdam.

The artist expects to return to Los Angeles next January or February, when important commissions on the Coast will demand his presence here.

Mr. Molkenboer, it will be remembered, designed and executed the decorations in Hamburger's Majestic Theater. His latest work here is a large panel, just completed, over the baronial fireplace of the mediaeval reception hall on "Glengarry," Dr. A. G. Schloesser's beautiful new home in Hollywood.

The painting, which is historical in subject, is placed among most appropriate surroundings—suits of armor, halberds, shields, arms. It represents Emperor Maximilian at the siege of Merseburg. The Emperor's figure, mounted on his charger, stands out in bold relief. The Emperor and charger are in full armor. On his right the standard-bearer has just unfurled the imperial banner. To his left, in military array, are to be seen the many standards of the various vassal troops comprising the besieging army. In the distance, through the dim light of early dawn, looms Castle Meresburg.

The various prominent figures are true in details. Each was painted from a living model in armor selected from Dr. Schloesser's large collection. The color scheme of the panel harmonizes perfectly with that of the room, which is brown and green. The room is also decorated with many coats of arms of Dr. and Mrs. Schloesser's ancestors.

In Mannheim's Studio.

Jean Mannheim, whose studio is in Blanchard Hall, has a most interesting collection of his paintings there. About forty pictures are always shown, portraits, genres, landscapes, etc., and the exhibition may be called permanent in the sense that the walls are always covered, though the pictures change somewhat from month to month. Old favorites are likely to disappear at any time, to enrich the gallery of some collector; but delightful new things come in to take their places.

Among the new things now to be seen there are a few California subjects of remarkable beauty and strength. "Around the Bend, Arroyo Seco," is one of these. It was painted near the artist's charming home in Pasadena. It is a large panel, rich and glowing in color. Tall eucalypts rise on either side. It has a blue sky with clouds sweeping across it in a splendidly free way. Its foreground is aglow with sunlight. "A Summer's Day" gives us the heat of late afternoon in the Arroyo Seco. The shadows brood among the mountains in the distance, which silhouette themselves against a yellow-gray sky of much luminous tenderness.

Another recent picture is "My New Hat," a quick sketch of the artist himself in one of his latest acquisitions, a Panama hat which is the pride of his heart. The pose is full of artistic braggadocio; hat and cigar are rakishly awry. Is it all a pose—or does the delightful sketch really throw a little-suspected side light on the artist's character? Its painting is simple, joyous; its color is very good, its modeling correct and easy, both the happy results of much artistic knowledge.

Among the pictures seen before, but which many of us will go back to again and again with new delight, are: "Green and Gold," a study made at Furnes, Belgium; its sunlight and autumnal coloring are like a poem; "Sketch in Furnes," lovely in tone, and done with simplicity and dexterity.

ART NOTES.

C. A. Rogers, a member of the Painters' Club, has opened an exhibition of his oil paintings for the summer at the home of Mrs. Hansen, El Centro street, South Pasadena.

Casper Gruenfeld, the sculptor, has gone to Chicago to remain for three or four weeks.

William Wendt is sketching at Topanga, in the Santa Monica Cañon.

The Rembrandt Art Club held its last meeting for the season on Wednesday afternoon. This energetic South Pasadena club will give an exhibition of craftsmen's work in the fall; its annual exhibition of oils will be held next spring.

The most important of recent spring exhibitions in London was the Water Color, Pastel and Drawing Salon held at the Goupil gallery.

George Belcher, who has been exhibiting at the Leicester galleries in London, has a vivacious pencil, and owes a great deal to Phil May, having much of the latter's realism, though not quite his individual distinction.

One of the recent interesting exhibitions in Paris was that of the Société des Peintres et Graveurs de Paris Moderne, held at the Dewambez gallery.

The eighty-eighth anniversary of the painter Felix Ziem has been celebrated Nice by a brilliant exhibition of his work.

This year's exhibition of the "Soyouz," or Union of Russian Artists, at Moscow, which was installed in the fine spacious rooms of what was once a private palace, may be considered to have been a most successful event.

SEMBRICH FAREWELL.

Splendid Reception to Veteran Artist in "Barber" During Berlin Appearance.

Marcella Sembrich made her triumphant farewell appearance on the operatic stage in "The Barber of Seville" at Kroll's Royal Operahouse tonight. She was vociferously greeted by a packed house which contained a generous sprinkling of Americans, says Musical America's correspondent. All the men and women prominent in German music circles were in the audience and led the cheering at the final curtain.

In the lesson scene in the last act Mme. Sembrich interpolated the "Primavera Waltz" by Strauss, and as an encore sang to her own accompaniment Chopin's "Maiden's Wish." After numerous curtain calls at the end of the performance the prima donna sang Arditi's "Paria Waltz."

As she was bowing her thanks to the audience a shower of American Beauty roses descended upon her from the flies. The house broke into a bedlam of cheers and applause, and when she recovered her equilibrium, she said: "I haven't the words to express what is in my heart at this moment. Oh, I thank you. This is a beautiful farewell. I'll only say 'Auf Wiedersehen.'"

Then, gathering armfuls of roses the prima donna threw them at the cheering audience, which stood saluting her till she was almost too exhausted to respond further to their plaudits.

In an interview in a Berlin paper Mme. Sembrich says she expects to appear eighty times in concert in America at a profit of $100,000.

BITS OF VERSE.

What the Rivers Sing.

Whence art thou, Water, what melodious spring
Hath sent thee murmuring?
Along the vales thy rustling we o'erhear
Though naught of thee appear.
But ah—I know— thou art some amorous wight
Who, sleepless day and night,
Go'st wandering faint from land to land to trace
Thy loved one's hiding-place!
—[Thomas Walsh, in Harper's Bazar.

Interpreters.

Within the convent garden, pale and tall,
The stately lilies breathe a fragrant prayer,
The poppies dream—but through the broken wall
The wistful roses scent the wider air.

So, in our stronghold, far from toil and mart,
Sheltered from all the world, pale fancies grow,
And idyls fair, and dreams that bloom apart
In cherished shrines no alien eye may know.

Yet now and then, as through the crumbling stone
The braver blossoms thrust their precious dole,
Some noble deed has barriers o'thrown,
To waft the clustered fragrance of the soul!
—[Charlotte Becker in New York Sun.

Little Kindnesses.

You gave on the way a pleasant smile and thought no more about it;
It cheered a life that was sad the while
That might have been wrecked without it;
And so for the smile and its fruitage fair
You'll reap a crown some time—somewhere.

You spoke one day a cheering word,
And passed to other duties;
It warmed a heart, new promise stirred,
And painted a life with beauties.
And so for the word and its silent prayer
You'll reap a palm some time—somewhere.

You lent a hand to a fallen one,
A lift in kindness given;
It saved a soul when help was none,
And won a heart for heaven;
And so for the help you proffered there
You'll reap a joy some time—somewhere.
—[D. G. Bickers, in Our Dumb Animals.

House of Memories.

There's a little house in a little street,
A little way from the sea,
And, oh, when I'm weary of all the world,
It's there that I fain would be.

For the world is full of sorrow and care
And the darkness lies before;
And the little house is full of the dreams
That were ours, but are ours no more.

In the little street, in the long ago,
In the little house by the sea,
We dreamed of the days that have had no dawn,
Of the years that shall never be.

But you were young and I was young,
And we dreamed and had no care,
And dearer and better than life has been
Were the dreams that came to us there.

And so, when I'm weary of all the world,
Of its sordid hopes and its pain,
I think of the little house that was ours,
And sigh to be there again.

'Twere heaven enough if we found our dreams
And dreamed them again, maybe,
In the little house in the little street
A little way from the sea.

PERSONALITIES.

HEREABOUTS.

P. KNIGHT, a newspaper proprietor from Calcutta, India, who is staying at the Alexandria, is deeply shocked at the methods of the American reporters, basing his estimate on the interviews accredited to him in San Francisco. "I was not off the ship two minutes before the reporters had me," he protested. "I told them what I came for, a little matter of private business which could interest nobody, and—" he stood gazing at the railing of the mezzanine floor, as if overcome by the recollection of it. "The worst of it all," he murmured, at last, "there was no way to come back at them, no way, no way at all. I have made up my mind not to talk to a single newspaper man in America." Inasmuch as Mr. Knight is in the United States to recruit a few bright and enterprising American newspaper people for his journal, he will have a hard time sticking to his resolution. "Yes," he admitted, "I recently purchased in Chicago the machinery for a big newspaper plant. It was not so recently, though—two years ago. I came here to look into American newspaper methods, and it may be that I will take back with me one or two aggressive reporters—smart fellows. But I did not count on being interviewed about it—who told you where I came from?" He had left blank the space on the hotel register which is reserved for the signer's place of residence.

Angeleños who go to Old Mexico devote themselves chiefly to land deals and take little interest in mining, as a rule, declares George S. Holmes, a mining man from Nacozari, Mex., who is at the Van Nuys with his wife. "I have met a number of people from Los Angeles in Mexico," said Mr. Holmes, "but few of them were engaged in mining, although that is a very rich field. The men from Los Angeles seem to prefer to give their time to trading in land. Whether they learn to swing land deals here and contract the habit, I would not say, but I do know that they are pretty successful in Mexico. There are many of them who have large holdings in Sinaloa, as well as in other parts of the country, and they all seem to know pretty well what they are doing. Some of the land in Sinaloa is very good and some of it is rocky, but the people from Los Angeles seem to always find some use, even for the poorest land."

A. T. Hammons, cashier of the Old Dominion Bank at Globe, Ariz., reports that the big mining camp of Gila county promises to make good in its resolution to become a city of 25,000 people. "Globe is about the liveliest mining camp in Arizona," said Mr. Hammons at the Hollenbeck. "The Gila Valley, Globe and Northern Railway has about finished its extension to Miami, a new mining center about six miles west of Globe, where a concentrator with a capacity of 2000 tons a day has been erected by the Miami Copper Company, and this has given a big boost to the population, as practically all who work at Miami live in Globe. A number of new stores are being erected, and business space is at a premium. N. L. Amster, the big Boston capitalist, Sultan Brothers and others are erecting modern business blocks, and a man going to Globe now, after an absence of five or six years, would not know the town, which was then a place with a population of about 2000 people, and now has 15,000 inhabitants. Development is going on all over the Globe district, the largest in the Southwest, and business in about every line is promising." About five months ago Globe, struggling through financial depression caused by a low copper market, was almost killed by labor troubles, but Mr. Hammons reports that there is no danger of a recurrence of these conditions.

"A bulldog with teeth that stick right out," was the answer given by Miss Maybelle Baker at the Lankershim when she was asked what dogs she liked best. The conversation in the lobby had turned to dogs, and Miss Baker had been listening patiently to the praises of dogs of all kinds. "I like a bulldog," she said with enthusiasm. "I like a dog that can and will fight, a dog that is a dog. I don't care for those sickly little artificial lap dogs, the useless pugs and the other dogs that women pretend to rave over. I like a dog that would not stand being kissed by any woman. A woman has no business kissing a dog. I like things that are natural and honest and true. Maybe that is why I have no patience with some of the criticisms of 'Three Weeks' I have heard. The woman in 'Three Weeks' is a woman through and through. What should a man be? Well, now, sir, a man should not be too presumptuous. We were speaking of dogs, you know, and I said that I like dogs that know how to bite." Miss Baker is the leading woman in the company which is about to begin an engagement in "Sergt. Kitty" at the Majestic.

Charles A. Hoffenstein, an ink manufacturer from Chicago, who is registered at the Alexandria, resents the inclination of Californians to look upon the Windy City as a place of unbearable heat in summer. "Yes," he said, "it is unfortunately true that many people die from the heat in Chicago, but did you ever figure out that in a city so crowded as Chicago, it would be more than remarkable if nobody died from the weather, either in winter or in summer. Many of these deaths occur in buildings that are overcrowded, in tenements and ill-ventilated shops and other places. The houses are constructed more to protect against cold in winter than to assure comfort in warm weather. Also, there are more than 2,000,000 people living in Chicago, and out of that number it is to be expected that a few will be in such a state of health that they will readily succumb to a hot wave." Mr. Hoffenstein, by the way, will remain in California through the summer.

License number plates must be carried both "fore and aft" by automobilists in Denver, according to the report of J. W. Casey of that city, who is at the Lankershim with his family. "Accidents have become so numerous in Denver that the authorities were compelled to take action," he said. "There are about twice as many automobiles in Denver as there are in Los Angeles, and the way they were run through the streets was a fright. Heavy fines were provided for over-speeding, and repeated offenses brought forfeiture of licenses, but even then many of the speed maniacs got away. It is not always easy to make out the number of the back plate. There may be dust in the street, or it may be a long number, or there may be another machine following or getting in behind before the officer has time to see the number on the plate of the offending machine. But with the number exposed both in front of the machine and in the rear, there is seldom any trouble in placing the ownership of the auto that is being run too fast. At any rate, that is what Denver is trying. The ordinance has just gone into force and it is too early yet to say how it will work, but the authorities are determined to stop speeding on the streets, where the limit has been placed at eight miles an hour."

EDUCATORS.

DR. HENRY B. WARD, dean of the University of Nebraska Medical College, has accepted a call from the University of Illinois to head its department of zoölogy. The new position pays him $4000 a year, which is $1000 more than is paid by the University of Nebraska. A New York medical college has also been trying to secure his services. He has been with the Nebraska institution for sixteen years.

Prof. R. S. Tarr of Cornell University and Prof. Lawrence Martin of the University of Wisconsin, two of the most noted scientists of America, will head the first expedition ever sent out by the National Geological Society of Washington, D. C., to study the big glaciers of Alaska. They will remain in Alaska pursuing scientific investigations until the latter part of September, studying the glaciers in the Yakutat Bay and Prince William Sound regions.

Charles J. Capen, said to be the oldest school teacher in the United States, and connected with the Boston Latin School for more than sixty years, has been retired from active service by the school board.

Oliver S. Westcott, who has taught in the Chicago High School almost continuously since 1867, recently surprised the school department by resigning. He has held the position of principal of the Waller High School continuously for twenty-six years.

Miss Isabella Graham Prince, aged 80 years, and her sister, Mary Gray Prince, aged 76 years, who have been engaged in educational work in Japan for twenty-five years, have recently returned to the United States. They are natives of Portland, Me., and were teaching in San Francisco when they were asked by the Japanese government to come to that country.

Miss Nannie Himes, who resigned the principalship of a school at Evanston, Ill., last week, had been a public school teacher for thirty-six years. The people of Evanston gave a reception in her honor, and she received many valuable gifts, including a purse of $2500.

ARMY AND NAVY MEN.

MAJ.-GEN. ELLIOT, commandant of the United States Marine Corps, has ordered the discontinuance of extraordinary physical tests, as not being in accord with the requirements for such exercise as will demonstrate the physical fitness of the men in the service.

Ensign B. H. Steele of the cruiser Colorado will have the distinction of commanding the smallest fleet which ever represented the United States navy. The fleet will consist of a baby torpedo boat Manly, and two steam launches, which will represent the navy at the Lake Champlain tercentenary ceremonies to be held on that historic body of water July 5 to 9.

Col. John L. Chamberlain, inspector-general, is relieved from duty as inspector-general of the Department of the East, and will sail from San Francisco for the Philippine Islands for duty as inspector-general of that division.

Officers to command the medical corps camps to be maintained this summer, in connection with camps of regulars and militia, for instruction of medical officers of militia, have been selected. Maj. Albert E. Truby, of the medical corps, will command the hospital camp near San Francisco; Maj. Powell C. Fauntleroy, medical corps, that at Sparta, Wis., and Maj. Frederick P. Reynolds, medical corps, that at Antietam, Md.

Surgeon Edward R. Stitt of the navy, who has been on duty as instructor in tropical diseases in the Naval Medical School in Washington, has been ordered to command the naval hospital at Canacao, P. I.

Rear-Admiral Mordecai T. Endicott, retired, who has been performing active duty, has been detached from the service, and ordered home. He has been assisting the Department of Justice with claims against the government in connection with the bureau of which he was formerly chief.

Col. Ernest H. Ruffner, Corps of Engineers, stationed at New York City, has been placed on the retired list by operation of law on account of age. He is from Kentucky, and his entire service has been in the engineer department, in which he reached the grade of colonel in September, 1906.

Brig.-Gen. Albert L. Mills, recently relieved from command of a department in the Philippines, has gone to Atlanta to assume command of the Department of the Gulf.

Two more high ranking naval officers on the retired list, performing active duty on full pay are likely to be relieved of duty under the policy of the naval administrtaion detaching retired officers from important assignments. They are Rear-Admiral R. D. Evans, who has been on special duty with the general board since his retirement in August, 1908, and Rear-Admiral W. S. Cowles, chief of the Bureau of Equipment, who was also retired last August.

OVER THE SEA.

THOMAS HARDY, the English novelist, has just passed his seventieth year. He only rarely visits London, and the number of literary men who have ever met him is small. He is now busy on his great world-drama, "The Dynasts."

King Edward has a partiality for Tuesday. He was born on a Tuesday in November, 1841, and was married on a Tuesday in March, 1863. It was on a Tuesday, too, in December, 1871, that he passed the crisis of his one terrible illness—an illness, as all the world knows, which came within an ace of proving fatal—and, lastly, he succeeded to the throne on Tuesday, January 22, 1901.

Lord St. Davids, the eldest son of a baronet whose dignity dates from 1621, enjoys the distinction of being quite the tallest man in the House of Lords, his stature surpassing that of even such very tall men as Lord Pembroke, Lord Dunmore, and the Duke of Somerset. His brothers, two of whom still sit in the House of Commons, are nearly as tall, and, when he was still a member of the lower chamber it was calculated that he and his two brothers there represented between them a total length of 19 feet 2 inches of Philipps.

Frederick Taylor, a member of the Royal Geographical Society of London, who has been exploring out of the way corners of the world for upward of forty years, has arrived in New York.

Admiral Alfred von Tirpitz, the German Secretary of State for the Navy, who has been Minister of the Admiralty since 1901, is of plebeian origin, having been born in Kustrin in 1849. He gained his naval knowledge at sea, in actual service, and under circumstances which have shown him the necessity to the fatherland of possessing such a fleet as present plans contemplate. A cadet at 16, at 20 a lieutenant, and at 25 a lieutenant-commander, after twenty years of service he was flying the pennant of a rear-admiral, and was known as a responsible officer, with a habit of thinking for himself and a wholesome contempt for the traditions of bureaucracy.

Rev. Hensley Henson, D.D., canon of Westminster Abbey, who has been delivering a series of lectures at Yale University, is visiting in Seattle. He is a member of the chapter of seven, who, with the dean, constitute the executive authority under the law, and decide who of the famous dead shall be honored with a last resting place in the abbey.

King George of Greece has been several times on the point of abdication. For he is heartily sick both of Greece and of its people, among whom he has been unable to find any one reliable and loyal friend whom he can absolutely trust ever since he went there as a seventeen-year-old Danish prince and British midshipman, in 1863, to assume possession of the Hellenic throne. He is very rich through wealth not in any sense of the word derived from Greece, but from other sources—he won a fortune through speculation in American grain at the time of the Turko-Russian war by the advice of the late Gen. Meredith Read, United States Minister at Athens.

PEOPLE OF THE COAST.

DR. LOTZ, Mayor of Orting, Wash., has received notice from the United States Marine Hospital, Washington, that his treatment for contagious diseases is being investigated. The treatment discovered by Dr. Lotz, it is claimed, will eliminate scarlet fever, smallpox, blood poison and similar diseases from the human system in from thirty minutes to an hour, leaving the patient in usual health. Tests have been made in which smallpox was eliminated in from fifty-five to seventy minutes, scarlet fever in an hour and a half, blood poison in an hour and malaria in twenty to thirty minutes.

J. P. Price, who has lived fifty-one years at Forbestown, a small mining camp, paid his first visit to Oroville in nine years recently. For the first time in his life he saw a moving-picture show. He laughed so heartily that he fell from the chair and he was forced to leave the show. Mr. Price is justice of the peace of Forbestown, for which he receives the munificent salary of $5 a month. Since his appointment eight months ago he has not had a single case.

Louis Phelps of Hobson, Wash., has just completed a walking stunt of 216 miles, holding a plow and driving two horses the entire distance, on a bet with a friend. The walking was to be done during June, plowing William Benninghoff's orchard of prune trees.

Tom Hopper, the veteran scout and hunter of Spokane, Wash., has set a record by bringing in twenty bears between April 15 and June 10.

Capt. J. H. Black of Honolulu, who was one of the first gold seekers to arrive in San Francisco Bay in 1849, has come back to the United States to visit his sister, whom he has not seen for forty-eight years. Capt Black was a mariner for many years after he came to this Coast in 1849, and traded to the Siberian coast and to Alaska, as well as to China and the islands of the sea. Later he went to Honolulu, where he became royal printer to Kamehameha V, and to Lunalilo and Kalakaua. He was for ten years owner of the "Hawaiian Gazette in the old days. This is Capt. Black's first visit to the Coast in a quarter of a century. He is 79 years of age.

Allan Herbert of Honolulu, an octogenarian, is taking a 10,000-mile hunting trip through the wilds of Oregon and Washington, traveling by a motor car, and accompanied by a chauffeur, rifle and frying pan.

Mrs. Mary Keller of Alameda will celebrate her one hundredth birthday July 22. She is enjoying good health and spends much of her time knitting rugs, of which she has made many, to give her friends and relatives. Her mats and rugs are of a kind rarely seen now. She chooses her yarn and weaves her mats as she did when a child in Germany and her handiwork is greatly prized.

IN THE LIMELIGHT.

Senator Hughes of Colorado is said to get an annual retainer of $75,000 from the Denver traction companies.

Jacob S. Coxey, who led the famous Coxey Army to Washington in 1894, is the owner of an arsenic mine in Virginia, and is in Washington advocating a duty on arsenic.

Vice-President Sherman has surprised the members of the Senate by wearing a blue cotton suit of clothes, the material of which was grown in Muskogee county, Ga., and ginned, spun into thread, woven into cloth, dyed and tailored in the same county. It was presented to the Vice-President through Representative Anderson, who comes from Muskogee county. The Georgia Senators do not claim to know the name for the particular kind of cloth of which the suit is made, but they insist that it is not made of cotton bagging.

Speaker Cannon is the recipient of many peculiar gifts. Recently he received a small stick of licorice inclosed in a common envelope, without a word of comment. Some time ago a match and a piece of bologna sausage were sent to the Speaker, but the name of the sender was not given.

Senator Murray W. Crane began to learn the paper-making business by working as a rag picker, the lowest position in a paper factory.

Representative Hardwick of Georgia is the son of a Spanish Princess, who is a cousin, several times removed, of the present King of Spain.

Otis McNelly, until a few weeks ago chief officer and largest stockholder in the bank at Blue Mound, Ill., which bore his name, is now working as an ordinary carpenter at $3.50 per day. When the crash came, McNelly's snug fortune was swept away. Not daunted, however, he donned overalls, secured a kit of tools and went to work as a carpenter, in which work he became proficient earlier in life.

Representative William B. McKinley of Illinois owns and operates 800 miles of trolley lines, said to be the biggest trolley system owned by any one man.

William E. Sanderson, Mayor of Springfield, Mass., appeared the other night as a black-face minstrel at a benefit performance at a theater.

The world's record for cotton picking is held by Miss Margaret Montgomery of Stillwater, Okla. In a four-hour contest she picked 350 pounds, or eighty-seven and one-half pounds an hour. She defeated crack cotton pickers from all parts of the cotton-growing belt, averaging about five pounds an hour more than her nearest competitor. Miss Montgomery is the daughter of a wealthy cotton grower and she picks only for her own amusement.

Elijah B. Sherman, 77 years old, has been a master in chancery of the United States Circuit Court at Chicago since 1879, and is much esteemed by the lawyers of that city.

A Compact With God.

Van is 7 years old and hates to go to Sunday-school. One day he found his best loved friend, the house cat, as old as himself, stretched out on the ground in the garden. His cries brought his mother, who did all she could for a poisoned and apparently fast dying cat, but it seemed of no avail.

As a last deseperate resort Van knelt down beside the poor creature, and, clasping his hands, upturned his tear-stained face and prayed, "Dear God, make my cat well! Make her well! Oh, dear God, if you will I'll go to Sunday-school every time this summer and not wait to be spanked!"

The cat got well, and Van faithfully kept his compact with God—[Lippincott's.

China's Substitute for Corn Starch.

Cornstarch, so much used in America for food, is not in demand in China, as the natives use for similar purposes the water in which they have boiled their rice—congee water. This liquid when cold sets into a thick, viscous and transparent jelly, which is colored, sweetened and eaten as Americans eat blanc mange.—[Exchange.

Great Stream of Hebrew Em Will Be Turned to America, Should Turkish Government for an Autonomous Jewish Co

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENC

LONDON, June 10.—Of course the Zionists at their convention in New York this week didn't take kindly to the plans of the Jewish Territorial Organization as enunciated by its prophet-in-chief, Israel Zangwill, the novelist and playwright. But apparently, Zangwill's faith is unshaken in his big plan for making the reputed original Garden of Eden bloom again like the rose. Two difficulties only stand in the way—one of them being the slight chance that further investigation may not uphold the optimistic accounts of Mesopotamia as a land of colonization, the second being that negotiations now in progress between the "Ito"—as Zangwill has christened the organization—and the new government of Turkey for the acquisition and redemption of the swamp land and desert that is ancient Assyria may come to nothing. In either of these contingencies the great stream of Jewish emigration, probably, will be turned henceforth to the United States, "that land," says Zangwill, "of liberty and happiness; that land with no state church, free from military unrest, the contending national jealousies, the wars and massacres of Europe; that land so vast that the whole Jewish population of Russia could be tucked away in almost any one of its fifty States and Territories." The novelist added that this stream of emigration would go to the West, he hoped by way of Galveston.

Israel Zangwill,

the new Moses who wishes to lead the Jews to a land of promise in the cradle of the human race.

In the United States, however, there is, of course, no possibility of the formation of a great Jewish community which could in time become self-governing. And, to the minds of Zangwill and the other leaders of the "Ito," eventual self-government is inseparable from the idea of a "land of refuge" for the Jews. "You cannot build a battleship without a water-tight keel," the novelist phrased it in a recent speech; "no more can you build a land of refuge without an autonomous basis. Give somebody else a chance to say who shall go in and who shall come out, and where is your land of refuge?"

Thus it is that for several years past, or since their official severance from the Zionist movement, whose object it is to regain Palestine for the Jews, the members of the "Ito" have been canvassing the possibilities of various sections of Asia and Africa as sites for the new Judea. The plan is that this colony shall have the roots of its existence in agriculture. It is recognized that its population could not for centuries be strong enough for complete independence, but it is believed that under the protection of a suzerain power it might fairly soon enjoy a considerable share of self-government.

AN ASPIRATION.

According to Mr. Zangwill and those associated with him Zionism is an aspiration, not a plan. "Palestine used to be a prayer," says the novelist in a letter to me on the subject; "it has changed into a programme, but it has not yet become a project." Zangwill supports his argument by pointing out that after twelve years of Zionism the Jew still is forbidden to enter Palestine, so he proposes to give up the Palestine idea for the present; hence the Zionists' wrath.

While working with a different aim, however, the members of the "Ito" all along have made it plain that they not only would welcome, but felt they had a right to demand, the coöperation of the Zionists, in fact all sections of the Jewish race, once they had discovered a suitable territory for their vast schemes of colonization. This is a point regarding which Israel Zangwill is emphatic. "So gigantic a task as that of building up a Jewish homeland," he says, "cannot be left to a minority of Jews or a single organization. It requires our whole people."

As practical evidence that it did not regard itself as a private syndicate, Mr. Zangwill's organization called to its assistance a council of elders to sit in judgment on its plan, if it should be so fortunate as to find one. To the five elders who originally formed the commission have now been added Daniel Guggenheim, the American silver king, and Judge Sulzberger, who was recently offered the post of American Ambassador in Constantinople.

Three years ago, it may be remembered, a territory practically ideal for its purpose was offered to the "Ito" by the British government in the heart of Africa. Perhaps Mr. Zangwill is right in declaring that this plan came before the Jewish people was ripe for it and that Zionism had confused them with its claim on their loyalty to a Jewish polity that did not then exist. At all events, the offer had to be declined owing to the lack of support which the "Ito" received in its advocacy of acceptance.

POWER TO ELBOW.

Since then, however, the selection has changed a lot. The leaders of the "Ito" have succeeded to a large extent in winning over to the idea of a Jewish homeland "those powerful Jews" who, as Zangwill puts it, "would have nothing to do with undiluted Zionism, yet without whom nothing can be done." One of the most notable of these is Joseph Fels, formerly of Philadelphia, who showed the practical nature of his sympathy at the recent

Great Stream of Hebrew Emigration from Europe Will Be Turned to America, Says Israel Zangwill, Should Turkish Government Refuse to Cede Territory for an Autonomous Jewish Colony in Mesopotamia.

POWER TO ELBOW.

Since then, however, the selection has changed a lot. The leaders of the "Ito" have succeeded to a large extent in winning over to the idea of a Jewish homeland "those powerful Jews" who, as Zangwill puts it, "would have nothing to do with undiluted Zionism, yet without whom nothing can be done." One of the most notable of these is Joseph Fels, formerly of Philadelphia, who showed the practical nature of his sympathy at the recent gathering of the Jewish Territorial Organization by promising to give half his fortune to help on the Mesopotamia scheme, on condition that the land be communally owned.

Disappointed of obtaining the promising territory in East Africa, the leaders of the "Ito" turned their eyes upon two vast famous districts of Western Asia, both associated almost as closely as Palestine with the early history of their race—Cyrenaica and Mesopotamia. At the beginning the former country, which lies next door to Egypt and regarding whose suitability for colonization reports were rose-colored, was favored over its even more historic neighbor, because of its possession of a coast line and its proximity to Russia and to Palestine. Plans for its colonization practically were complete when it suddenly turned out that the country water supply was a long way from being adequate, and the project of acquiring Cyrenaica was dropped forthwith.

As yet, it is true, the "Ito's" geographical commission has not reported upon the prospects for creating a Jewish homeland in Mesopotamia, but there is uncommonly good reason to believe that this land—the birthplace of Abraham, the Assyria which is described in Isaiah as "the work of my hands"—will receive the strongest of recommendations to the descendants of the prophet. Although at present this region, through which flows the Euphrates, one of the four rivers mentioned in the Bible as watering the Garden of Eden, now lies a desert, the greatest authorities on the subject in the world are unanimous in the opinion that it veritably can be made to "blossom like the rose."

MESOPOTAMIA.

Nor will this be more than a return to its ancient condition, all writers from Herodotus down having described Mesopotamia as the most fertile and fruitful country on earth. Like its great neighbor, Egypt, the country fell into decay for lack of irrigation, and like the land of the Pharaohs, by irrigation is it to be redeemed. If anything, in fact, the prospects for its reclamation are brighter than were those of Egypt.

For information regarding these prospects Mr. Zangwill, when first the "Ito" began to consider Mesopotamia, turned to the writings of two great authorities, the renowned orientalist, Dr. Paul Haupt of Baltimore, and Sir William Willcocks, the engineer who irrigated Egypt. It proved to be the opinion of both of these that a region in Mesopotamia the size of Palestine could be irrigated and turned again into a granary to support a population of millions. Even the country around it was said to be thinly populated, so that there was apparently room for indefinite extension of the Jewish area with the growth of population.

ORIGIN.

The "Ito's" original scheme for the reclamation of this country and the founding of a Jewish colony there was formulated some two years ago by Israel Zangwill and Sir Andrew Wingate, who has had an extensive experience of irrigation in the Punjaub. This scheme provided for both railways and irrigation works, with Jewish laborers employed on both. The cost of the irrigation works in this initial scheme was $40,000,000, and the value of the land after reclamation was estimated at $150,000,000. Financial support being forthcoming it was believed that there would be comparatively little difficulty in obtaining the necessary charter from the late Turkish government.

In thus laying their plans, however, the "Ito" leaders reckoned without a certain shrewder financier than the Jewish bankers upon whom they reckoned for aid. This was the Sultan Abdul Hamid. He also had been dipping into the works of Sir William Willcocks. Mesopotamia, of course, is Turkish territory, and, no little impressed by what he had read, the ex-Sultan sent for Sir William Willcocks, who has traveled over Mesopotamia and made a report even more favorable than his early ideas, and showing how "for an expenditure of $37,000,000 more than 3,000,000 acres in ancient Chaldea can be made available for settlement and to produce a revenue of nearly $5,000,000 a year."

Sir William Willcocks has entered into a five years' agreement with the Turkish government, with a credit of $500,000, and already has begun work. Under the Turkish constitution, the scheme now has passed into the hands of the Minister of Public Works in Constantinople, who has just presented Sir William's report to the Grand Vizier. There is little doubt that Turkey, once she has settled down, will wish this work to be carried through. Her resources and energies will be sufficiently taxed, however, by the great labors before her in nearly every part of her large, neglected empire.

"The question, therefore, is," says Zangwill, "whether the Jewish people should not seize the opportunity of doing this particular piece of work, and by a contract with Turkey provide the capital, the labor and the population for the regeneration of Mesopotamia."

MUST HAVE LAND.

The leaders of the "Ito" have entered into negotiations with the Turkish government, but up to date no agreement has been arrived at. Nothing, the "Ito" leaders declare, will satisfy them but a definite grant of territory. "We must have proper agreements," says Zangwill, "proper understandings, proper delimitation of the land we are to occupy. If Turkey is to have us and not America, it must offer us something better than we can get across the Atlantic. I have written this to Ahmed Riza Bey."

HAYDEN CHURCH.

Sunset on the Water.

The sun is sinking over the hill,
And the sky is red with a soft, bright glow,
But twilight comes—the red glow fades—'til
Marvelous colors come and go.
The sky is changed to pink and to blue,
And the near lying clouds are purple lined,
They range from a light to a deep, dark hue—
A sight more glorious one could not find.

The water glides on with a sleepy air,
And a mirror is formed on its quiet breast,
It knows not what is reflected there
As it tranquilly moves in peace and rest.
But softly falling, now there, now here,
Are the shadows of trees on side and end,
And there between these shadows clear,
The water reflects the harmonious blend.

A pink and green, and a golden light,
And a yellow tinge which is creeping through Linger with radiance mellow and bright—
Then slowly, slowly, fade from view.
The sun has set and the night draws near,
And the water flows on with a rippling sigh.
Then one by one the stars appear—
A beauty new illumes the sky.

CHAPTER I.

THE EDGE OF THE QUARRY.

Towards the close of a November day a young man emerged from a plantation on the summit of the Stonewold Mills, paused for a moment to light his pipe, and then walked down the hill with his eyes fixed on the valley lying a thousand feet beneath him.

He was a tall, broad-shouldered young man, and his mere bulk and height suggested great physical strength. But John Shil, estate agent to Sir Robert Tankerlane, was even stronger than most men of his size. A clean, wholesome life, lived in the open air, a daily round of hard exercise, a mind that found no attraction in the vices that so often sap the mental and bodily vigor of a man, had fashioned a superb specimen of manhood from the stout material which nature had so generously supplied. His face, tanned with constant exposure to sun and wind, was not remarkable for its beauty, but it was an honest, manly face, and a close student of human nature might have discovered more in it than was apparent to the good folks of Laverstone. They only saw a genial, good-hearted young fellow, who took life easily; but there were depths in John Shil's nature that had not yet been stirred by the circumstances of his simple life.

As he walked down the hill, the sun, a mere dull red globe, sank toward the western horizon, and the mist of a November evening covered all the valley beneath him with a carpet of gray fog. The light still lingered on the upper slopes of the Stonewold Hills, but darkness was creeping up from the plain.

Behind him, on either side of him, as far as the eye could reach, lay the 25,000 acres of the Tankerlane estate. For miles in every direction, every inch of ground, every house, every tree, every stick and stone belonged to Sir Robert Tankerlane. Twelve entire villages, twelve advowsons, more than seventy farms, feudal lordship over nearly four thousand human beings, were all in the hands of one man. A well-known writer, who once spent a summer in a farmhouse on the estate, is reported to have said that the very air belonged to Sir Robert, that the wind seemed to whisper his name in the trees, and that the little brooks, as they babbled over the stones, murmured, "Tankerlane, Tankerlane, Tankerlane."

John Shil, as lieutenant of his lord and master, was responsible for the management of the whole of this vast territory. But, as he walked down the slopes and saw the darkness blot out the clustered villages, and broad fields, and wide stretches of woodland, his thoughts were not in any way concerned with the cares of his office. They were centered in one small farmhouse, which lay close to the foot of the hill.

This house was the home of Laura Vane, a mere slip of a girl, negligible item in the population of the Tankerlane estate. But to John Shil she represented all the glory of heaven and earth, for she had promised to be his wife, and he loved her with all the strength of his heart. As yet love was the only passion that had entered into his life. As yet it was all-absorbing—a lord paramount that rode triumphant over his whole nature.

Half-way down the hill the path ran through another large plantation. As the young man passed through the little gate, and entered the shadow of the trees, the gray twilight deepned into almost total darkness. The white, stony path showed like a dim thread in the gloom, and the pattern of the branches overhead stood out against the sky. But John Shil could see little else, and the wood itself was a mere wall of branches on either side of him.

In a few minutes he reached a large open space in the center of the plantation. The path here ran by the side of a large quarry, from which in the days gone by the Tankerlanes had taken many thousand tons of stone for building purposes. It had not, however, been worked for nearly fifty years, and the wood had been planted to conceal the ugly scar it had made on the hill. On one side it sloped gently up to the surface, but on the other there was a sheer drop of eighty feet to the bottom, and the edge was protected by a wooden rail.

As the young man emerged from the darkness into the gray twilight, he heard the sound of footsteps, and a few moments later the tall figure of a man came striding up the hill toward him. The two men met almost in the center of the clearing.

"Evening, Ben," said John Shil, curtly, as the hulking form of one of the farmers on the estate came close to him. He did not like the man, for Ben Holland had an evil reputation in the district, and the brutal ferocity of his temper had marked him out as a dangerous and difficult fellow to deal with. The young agent was also aware that the man hated him with a fierce and undying hatred, for the farmer had been an unsuccessful suitor for the hand of Laura Vane.

The man did not reply to the salutation, and John Shil would have passed on without another word, but Ben Holland stopped, and his huge body blocked up the center of the pathway. On one side lay the thick undergrowth; on the other side the rail at the edge of the quarry. There was scarcely room for two big men to pass, save by each other's courtesy. John Shil could have pushed by, but, as agent of the Tankerlane property, he had a certain dignity to preserve. He stopped, as though he had something to say to the man who had barred his progress.

"I'd have a word with 'ee," said the man hoarsely; "I'd have a word with 'ee, Mr. Shil."

"About that arable?" replied the agent coldly. "It's no use, Ben; Sir Robert has decided not to turn any more arable into pasture."

"Hang the pasture," the man said roughly. "I s'pose you thinks I haven't a mind above turnups and pasture and sich like."

John Shil did not answer. He had never studied the state of Ben Holland's mind, but he knew well enough what was in it at that moment.

"This be a narrow track," the man continued, "and there be no room for two big men like we. One of us must stand aside to let the other pass. Which be it, Mr. Shil, you or I?"

The estate agent did not answer. He understood the rude allegory implied in the farmer's words. It was no question of precedence in a narrow path. It was the hand of the woman they both loved. Yet he could not trust himself to speak. His face was already white with fury, and his great body trembled with the violence of his thoughts. A single word would break through the control he had placed upon himself. He could not trust himself to speak.

"You be a great man in these parts," continued Ben Holland with a sneer, "small wonder you're sich a fav'rite with the gals. There's a lot of power in those white hands o' your'n. I be just a farmer working for my bread. I haven't got nowt to offer. I can't give Sam Vane new fencing and barns and pasture where he want it, nor paint his house, nor be easy in asking for the rent. I can't do nowt of this, Mr. Shil, and you've the advantage of the likes of me; but as man to man, I tell 'ee that I've a strong pair of hands."

"If you wish to fight," said John Shil slowly, and with a ghastly attempt at a smile, "I'm afraid I can't oblige you. If you wish to force a quarrel on me, you will, I fear, be unsuccessful. Good-night. The path is open to you," and he stepped aside, thrusting the thick undergrowth back with his broad shoulders. But Ben Holland did not pass.

"You be a poor thing, after all, Mr. Shil," he said, with a sneer, "for all the great talk I've heard of you. I may be but a farmer, but I'd let no man stand in my path, and I'd step aside for no man, either."

"The path is open to you," said John Shil, hoarsely. "I do not seek to quarrel with any man."

"No," sneered the farmer, "you'll be getting your own back some other way. You'll not forget tonight, and I'll feel your whip on my back one of these days. I shouldn't wonder if the rent of my farm isn't raised 'fore long. You've the power to deal with better men than yourself. That's how you got the gal. She's for the highest bidder, she is. But there be those that can bid higher than you, Mr. Shil."

"Silence, you scoundrel!" cried the young man, no longer able to keep guard over his tongue, "you're not fit to scrape the mud off her boots, and if you dare to——"

"Ah, that touches you up, doesn't it?" the farmer interrupted with a brutal laugh; "another bidder, eh? Mr. William Tankerlane'll bid too high for you, John Shil. You'll not want to marry the girl when you know all I know. He's bid already, you fool, and the goods have been knocked down to him. Soiled goods by now, I warrant, to be passed off as new—ah!"

The man's words came to an end in a cry of rage and pain. John Shil's fist had shot out of the darkness and caught him on the black-bearded jaw. It was a terrible blow, struck with the full strength of a strong man stung to madness.

Ben Holland staggered back, and before he could recover himself, John Shil got in his right hand on the man's heart and the huge body reeled over on to the fence which bordered the quarry.

There was a crackle of splintering wood, a yell of terror, and then, motionless as a stone, John Shill waited for the sound that he knew must follow—the crash of the heavy body on the bottom of the quarry far beneath.

But there was no sound save the rattle of the stones and pieces of wood that the force of the impact had sent spinnig into the depth of the pit.

Then a cry for help rose into the night, piercing, agonizing, terrible in its intensity. John Shil sprang forward, and in the gray light he saw two dim hands gripping a tiny bush close to the roots. He saw the bush slowly straining up the meager soil around it. He saw, too, that it would be but the work of a moment to catch hold of the man's wrists and draw him up into safety. All this he saw, and yet he did not stretch out his hand.

He stood motionless for nearly half a minute. It seemed a hideous eternity, with the shrieks of lost souls ringing in his ears. He watched the roots of the little bush slowly tear themselves out of the soil, and the sight fascinated him. He saw the dim hands shift their position to the soil itself, and he heard the sound of the man's finger-nails on a patch of bare stone. And all the time the devil whispered to him that the man must die. Then, suddenly, as lightning breaks from a dark sky, the blinding truth burst through the clouds of passion and showed him the danger to his soul. With a bitter cry he flung himself forward and stretched out his hands to save his enemy. But he was too late. Even as he moved, the edge of the quarry broke away, clutched wildly at some fingers, brown with earth and crooked like claws, missed them, and fell on his face, with the gulf beneath his outstretched arms.

There was a crash on the stones eighty feet beneath him, and then silence.

For a few moments he lay there, too stunned with horror to move. Then he staggered to his feet, and made his way along the edge of the quarry till he reached the side which slanted gently down to the bottom.

With the aid of a few matches he reached the place where Ben Holland's body lay wedged between two great pieces of yellow limestone. A very brief examination sufficed to tell him that the man was dead. The face was battered out of all recognition. John Shil blew out the match and was glad to be in the darkness.

CHAPTER II.

"GOD SHALL JUDGE."

In the parlor of the Upper Leaze Farm a young girl sat before a roaring fire of oak logs, and saw bright visions of the future in the flames.

There was no lamp or candle in the room, but the fire, which blazed in a large, open stone hearth, filled the whole apartment with a fierce orange light, in which the shadows danced and swayed unceasingly. The room itself was large and low-ceilinged. The stone floor was partially covered with a faded square of carpet. The walls were paneled to a height of four feet from the ground, and the space above was painted white and adorned with half a dozen engravings of some merit. The furniture was insufficient for the size of the room, but it was all good. The only ornaments were a few brass candlesticks, an old china bowl, and a Crown Derby tea service carefully guarded in a glass-covered corner cupboard. The general effect was simple, but pleasing. It was in rare contrast to the majority of "best parlors" to be found in the ordinary farmhouse, and bore evidence to the taste and culture of at least one resident in the house.

This quiet and graceful picture of an English home was crowned and completed by the beauty of the young girl, who was the only occupant of the room. Her thick auburn hair glittered like burnished copper in the light of the flames. Her face, not so perfect in outline as to be devoid of character, was yet of a rare loveliness. It was a strong, noble face, of a type not often found among the women of the present day. It belonged to sterner times, when women were called upon to do great deeds for God or their country, when they died as martyrs at the stake, or faced death amid the blazing ruins of their homes.

Yet there was a wealth of tenderness in the eyes of Laura Vane as she gazed into the firelight and thought of the man to whom she had given her heart. She had no fear for the future. He was a man worthy of a great love, a clean-minded, honorable gentleman, as yet almost a boy in comparison to her own developed character and intellect, but a boy with all the promise of strength to fight the battle of life. Many men, in all ranks of life, had sought the hand of Laura Vane, but morally and mentally John Shil towered head and shoulders above them all. She thanked God that her love had been bestowed on one who was worth of the love of any woman, for love, like Samson, is both strong and blind, and often wrecks the temple of its own happiness.

Laura Vane had been born in humble circumstances; she was a daughter of the soil, and her childhood had differed in no wise from that of other children in a similar position. But as she grew older, her father, recognizing the fast that her young beauty was already attracting attention, and that she was probably destined to a marriage above her station, resolved to spare no expense in her education. From the national school at Laverstone she was sent to a "ladies' college" at Cheltenham, and three years at this desirable establishment worked a great change in external graces and accomplishments. But, at heart, Laura Vane was unchanged, and it says much for her strength of character that she returned to Laverstone with genuine pleasure, and entered into all the detafls of her home life with heartfelt enthusiasm. She worked from early morning until dusk—the daughter of a simple farmer. Then she changed her clothes—"dressed for dinner," as her father called it—and Sam Vane, a rough old farmer, found his reward for the day's work in gazing at his daughter's beauty and listening to the sound of his daughter's voice.

Such was the girl who had promised to become the wife of John Shil, a woman who would have graced and beautified any position of life to which she might have been called; a strong, beautiful, tender-hearted woman, little dreaming, as she gazed into the fire and thought of her lover, that she would need all her strength and all her love to support her in the days to come.

Her reveries were broken by a loud knocking at the hall door, and a few moments later there was a sound of footsteps on the stone flags outside, and the ring of a voice that quickened the beating of her heart. She rose to her feet and moved forward a pace or two, as John Shil entered the room.

He closed the door behind him, and came unsteadily toward her. A mere glance at his face was sufficient to tell her that something unusual had occurred. It was pale and stern, and there was a look in the eyes that frightened her. They were the eyes of a man who had sinned, and who is afraid of the consequences of his sin. Her greeting died away on her lips, and she held out her hand in silence.

To her surprise he stopped, looked at her hand for a second or two, and then shook his head. As a rule he greeted her with a kiss and an affectionate embrace. Now he stood six feet away from her, and for the moment it seemed as though the whole world lay between them.

"No, Laura, no," he cried, suddenly and fiercely. "Not even your hand—till I have told you. Is your father in?"

"No, Jack," she replied calmly; "he has gone to Brandersham to buy some farm implements. He will not be back until 11 o'clock. What has happened? Come and sit here by the fire and tell me." She spoke quietly, almost soothingly, as a mother might speak to a child. He came forward slowly, and did not look at her, as he flung his great body into an armchair. For a few seconds she looked down at him, half in pity, half in fear. But whatever her feelings were, she let no trace of them be seen by the man who might need her help and sympathy. She sat down on the opposite side of the fireplace. John Shil's face was buried in his hands, and for a few moments neither of them spoke. The woman was the first to break the silence.

"Well, Jack," she said quietly, "what have you to tell me?" A meaner woman would have asked him why he had refused to take her hand, and might even have spoken in a tone of annoyance. But Laura Vane knew well enough that her lover had intended no discourtesy, and that the act was inspired by a high code of honor, rather than by a desire to wound her feelings.

He did not reply to her question, but remained motionless as a statue. She looked at him, and prayed quietly for strength. She knew now that something terrible must have occurred to so crush the strength and courage of the man.

"Come, Jack," she said cheerfully, "cowardice was never one of your faults."

Then he slowly raised his white face from his hands, looked into the eyes of the woman who loved him, found perhaps strength of purpose, and told her all, omitting nothing, concealing nothing, sparing himself and her not a word of the whole truth.

Laura Vane listened to his narrative in silence, with her eyes fixed on the fire. When he had finished she did not look up from the dancing flames. The whole world swarm in a blaze of fierce light.

"Laura," the man cried hoarsely, "look at me, speak to me—forgive me for what I have done. I was blind with passion. I did not intend—I was too late. I did not know what I was doing. I was too late—surely God will forgive me for those few moments, and you—surely you will forgive me, Laura."

"I was not thinking of that," she replied slowly. "I was thinking of what might happen, of whether—the truth will be known. Forgiveness? There is nothing for me to forgive. The blow was struck for me; any honorable man would have struck it; and, as for what followed ——" She paused, not knowing how to choose her words, and the face of Ben Holland seemed to leer at her from the heart of the flames.

"And as to what followed?" the man echoed.

She raised her head and looked at him. His pleading eyes were fixed on her, and his face was haggard with the agony of his soul. His strong hands were clasped together, almost in an attitude of prayer.

"And as to what followed," he repeated, "those few moments when I let a man die without stretching out a hand to save him. We must face the truth, Laura, you and I. It is no use shutting our eyes. I murdered Ben Holland."

She rose to her feet with a look of horror on her face. The word murder had not yet passed between them. It was almost too brutal a word for a woman's ears.

"Yes," he cried, springing to his feet and facing her, "that is the truth, and we must face it."

She came close to him and laid her hand upon his arm.

"God alone is the judge of our thoughts and actions," she said quietly. "But as for myself—see, I do not shrink from you."

Her calm voice, and the look of love on her face, brought fresh hope to the man's heart. He bent down and kissed her reverently on the forehead.

"God shall judge me and deal with me as I deserve," he said gravely. "I will put myself into the hands of my fellow-men, and they, too, shall judge."

"No," she cried sharply, as though the words had stung her, "you must not do that. You must keep silent. What has been done has been done. Confession is not atonement. God will judge you, not your fellow-men."

The man stared at her in amazement. He did not understand how such words could fall from the lips of an honorable and high-principled woman. He did not realize that the first natural instinct of a woman is to shield and protect those whom she loves, and that she will do this with her life and even with her honor.

"I would rather confess," he said lamely. "The truth must come to light some day."

"You must not confess," she answered firmly; "you must keep silence—for my sake. You can do no good by confession. God, not your fellow-men, must judge you. Promise me that you will keep silence."

"I promise," he said in a low voice. Then, clasping her in his arms, he kissed her on the lips, and left the room without another word.

And, when he had gone, the woman's calmness and courage broke down under the strain, and she sobbed bitterly in the silence, praying to God that He would be a merciful judge.

Mrs. Charles Nagel.

Wife of the Secretary of Commerce and Labor Belongs to Well-Known St. Louis Family and Is Well Equipped for Her High Post.

BY MARGARET B. DOWNING.

WASHINGTON, June 28.—In the group of new Cabinet chatelaines, perhaps the least known to Washington society up to the present time is the wife of the Secretary of Commerce and Labor, Mrs. Charles Nagel of Saint Louis. Mrs. Nagel is in deep mourning and she has made but two short visits to Washington since her husband assumed the youngest of the Cabinet posts. But during those brief sojourns she met her future colleagues and she received the visits of the women with whom she will be most intimately associated when the season opens next autumn.

The most arduous part of Mrs. Nagel's mission to the capital was to secure a home for next winter, and her quest proved successful. The Secretary signed a lease for the mansion at No. 1731 K street, recently the home of Lieut.-Gen. Chaffee, and with his family will take possession next autumn. This home is within the circle of the capital's most brilliant social locality. It is close to the residence of the Secretary of State and its immediate neighborhood is redolent with the memories of distinguished public men. The Chief Executive as Secretary of War lived within the square, and Fairbanks as Vice-President had his home just across the intersection of Connecticut avenue. According to their friends, the Nagels will add new traditions to the famous locality. Leasing such a commodious home is in itself the token of their hospitable purposes.

Mrs. Nagel becomes the mistress of three homes, for it is her present intention not to dismantle the residence in St. Louis, which is filled with art treasures, but rather to collect new ones in this environment. Like her husband, she possesses a sincere appreciation of art. Her interest in the Art Museum of St. Louis, of which Mr. Nagel is the director, is not of the prefunctory kind. She delights in every effort to promote esthetic tastes, and she is herself no mediocre judge of artistic merit. Mr. Nagel, according to his friends, is rather a silent man in general conversation, but mention pictures and he will become enthusiastic over atmosphere and values and perspective. Mrs. Nagel can talk art with a critic and to this rare talent she can add that of knowing how to discuss music and literature and the important issues of the day.

About June 15 Mrs. Nagel and her four children took possession of the beautiful summer home which the Secretary purchased six years ago near Marion, Mass. As in the selecting of his Washington residence, Mr. Nagel seemed swayed by the traditions of statecraft, for within sight is that exquisite little inlet illustrious in recent national history as Buzzard's Bay. If one wished to judge exactly what kind of people are the Nagels, a visit to the summer home would furnish the key. The air of seclusion which the mansion takes, set back in a forest, suggests the quiet necessary for the student and the adaptation of forest, water front and cultivated lawns, the cultured and devoted lover of nature.

Mrs. Nagel delights in the restful four months which she enjoys each year near Marion, and she spends a good part of the winter pondering improvements for a home and surroundings which already seem perfect. The entrance to the private grounds is a massive gate of rustic wood, which swings from one giant pine to another. There are inviting rustic seats and arbors, over which the natural vines of the region have been carelessly trained. The mansion is pure colonial and the verandah, which is Mrs. Nagel's pride, is a delight. Big, restful chairs, with bright cushions and pillows, deep, embracing settees in dull grays and greens, with lively cretonne adjuncts and rugs of every hue and of every sort of make, from the dainty flowered mattings of Japan to the heavy fiber rugs which come from the West Indies, suggest a summer of contentment. Big urns aglow with nasturtiums and geraniums; on the lawn a profusion of handsome flowering shrubs make a splash of color against the dark background of the forest or the sparkling waters of the inlet.

A pretty boathouse, in which are canoes for the venturesome, and sailboats and yachts and rowboats may be seen through the woods. Mr. Nagel, like all the residents of this section, is a follower of Isaac Walton. In his holiday attire and accompanied by his son, young Charles Nagel, just turned 14, he is a familiar figure in the shallow waters of the inlet. He fishes for hours with a persistency worthy the results of the greatest teller of fish tales, and it is said that on occasion he can relate stories which put all other efforts out of the running. The entire family takes unbounded pleasure in the sea bathing, and the bath-house is not only a graceful spot on the shore, but is fitted up with every convenience and luxury. The estate, which is a large one, is partially under cultivation, and Mrs. Nagel has the comfort of partaking during the summer of the fruits of her own vine and fig tree, figuratively speaking. She, like many of her illustrious summer neighbors, is proud of her housewifery accomplishments and her culinary skill. The Nagel home is near the camp of the Adventists, and throughout the season streams of people come within a distance which enlivens but does not intrude. A visit to the camp is always a treat to the visitor, and Mrs. Nagel and her little girls often walk over and listen to the exhortations. The scenery around the region is superb and from the high bluff near by the little village of Marion spreads out in picturesque outlines. With all the advantages of solitude, the estate is easily reached over the New Bedford and Onset line. The Secretary will not be able to spend as much time as customary this summer at his charming home. Like his fellow-workers in Cabinet posts, he will snatch his vacation in broken periods throughout the heated term.

There are three little girls in the Nagel family besides the eldest daughter, Miss Hildegarde, and the boy, Charles Nagel, Jr. They are Edith, who is 10; Annie Dorothy, 7, and the baby, Mary Shepley Nagel. These little ones will all come to Washington in October, and will enjoy a novel experience if their parents permit it. The present Cabinet circle is made up of members past middle age, and these small girls will be a class by themselves. The Ballingers have a small son, but he will not come to Washington this year, and all the other "Cabinet children," as the term goes, are grown-ups, and many have little ones of their own. Juvenile Washington is a gay place, and last year one matron who permits her entire family to mingle in fashion's throng complained that it cost her as much to get her ten-year-old boy and seven-year-old girl fitted up for fancy parties as it did to dress her débutante daughter, and to keep the older boy in college. The youngsters have their seasons of gayety, and the little Misses Nagel can enjoy life to the fullest if their mamma is not too strict.

Miss Hildegarde Nagel is the daughter of the Secretary by his first marriage to Miss Fannie Brandeis of Louisville. She is just now traveling in Spain with her two cousins, the Misses Adela and Amy Brandeis of St. Louis, with Mrs. Florence de Mele of the same city as chaperon. The party has visited all of Moorish Spain and the principal Christian strongholds prominent in the stirring times of Ferdinand and Isabella. Miss Nagel and her companions will tour the cathedral cities of France in an auto, and will sail from Havre the end of September. She will join her parents in Marion for the autumn season, and will come with them to Washington. She has already completed her education, and will make her formal entrance into Washington society during the "little season," which is counted in the social divisions of time between late November and the opening of the official amenities on January 1. Should the rumor prove true that Miss Helen Taft has decided to make her début this coming winter instead of returning to prepare for her degree in Bryn Mawr, Miss Nagel will join the ranks at an epoch-making juncture. With the Misses Meyer, daughters of the Secretary of the Navy, she will be among the specially honored maidens who make an inner circle at the White House fetes.

Mrs. Nagel, formerly Miss Annie Shepley, is the daughter of John R. Shepley, an honored lawyer of St. Louis. She was highly educated in her home city, and to this has been added the advantages of foreign travel and study. Her marriage to the Secretary took place in her father's home in May, 1895. She has always been identified with the cultured and rather reserved element, but she has taken a leading part in all the western metropolis has accomplished socially. During the Louisiana Purchase Exposition, the Nagel home was a rallying point for the myriads of prominent guests. Especially were the distinguished Germans entertained. Mr. Nagel takes pride in his pure Teutonic descent and in the admirable part which his parents took in wresting a portion of their adopted home from the wilderness. His father was a skillful physician, Dr. Herman Nagel, whose memory is yet revered in the Bernardo Valley of Texas. His mother, who was Fredericka Litzman, was also of a splendid old German family, and she was a fitting helpmate to a pioneer practitioner. Both brought love of music and art and good literature to the trackless wilderness of Texas, and the colony of which they were leading spirits, continues one of the most cultured and advanced in the Lone Star State.

Mrs. Nagel is altogether the home type of woman, but she is the firm adherent of making home something which can well absorb one's best interests. She will add another to the group of official women who hold similar views. Beginning with Mrs. Taft, who is essentially a lover of home and its duties, the new official world should commend itself to the admirer of the old-fashioned feminine type. Mr. Nagel, a successful man of affairs, craved a home which would satisfy the artistic taste which is part of the well-born and well-educated German, and in Mrs. Nagel he has found entire sympathy. The close association of the Nagels with the Annheuser-Busch firm has brought them into the closest communion with the music and art-loving Germans, who make such an elevated and useful colony in St. Louis society.

In appearance Mrs. Nagel is one of the most striking figures among the social assistants of the First Lady of the Land. She is the tallest in the circle, for this "Boudoir Cabinet" is composed almost entirely of the petite type of woman. She is a brunette, slender and graceful in appearance, with charming manners, and that air of repose which makes the ideal hostess. It is not yet decided whether Mrs. Nagel will lighten her mourning sufficiently to permit her to take her place at the White House levees during the early portion of the winter. It is believed, however, that she is coming to the capital prepared to fill her social duties to the last letter. Washington has always decreed that public personages are permitted only a short period to mourn for private griefs. The Nagels are members of the Episcopalian church, and during their residence in Washington they will attend St. John's in Lafayette square.

MONTH OF SUCCESS

CHEE FOO TALK OF TOWN

Citizens' Crowd Dean's Drug Store Daily to Try the Miraculous Power of His Medicines.

The great Chee Foo has been nearly a month in our city, and the crowds that have visited him at Dean's Drug store have numbered thousands. His success here has been phenomenal and his New Life Remedies have proven a blessing to the sick and the afflicted, as all who have tried their wonderful curative power have been cured or much benefited, and the name of Chee Foo will live for many years in the hearts of many of the poor and needy. It is rumored that Chee Foo has given much medicine and even money to charity since he has been with us, and he has never been known to not help a person in sickness or in distress. Chee Foo said to a reporter for the paper: "I have been so busy since I came here that it has been almost impossible for me to get around and see your beautiful city as much as I desire; but I have noticed and am surprised that for so large a city there are but a limited number of poor people in Los Angeles." "It shows," said Chee Foo, naively, "that everybody is on the hustle and bustle here and making money. Los Angeles is a grand city and has a great future, and I am so infatuated with the city, the people and the climate that all in all I expect to purchase some property here."

Chee Foo will be at Dean's Drug store, 214 South Spring street, all next week daily, between the hours of 9:30 and 5 p. m.

Are You Looking

IF SO, HAVE AN INCOME FIRST—IT SAYS TOM MA

By Thomas L.

NEW YORK, June 29.—This city offers a great many advantages to those who are looking for a job. It has the finest hotels in the world. The motor service is also very good. One can hire a six-cylinder car at not over $30 an hour, and this will be found a great help in answering advertisements. The old method of applying for a job by walking from door to door has all gone out. It was useful in its day, but too slow. Now you can cover the whole dry goods district in an hour and a half, and be told that your services are not wanted in from fifty to seventy-five places.

Some use hansom cabs, but this distinctly creates a bad impression. To drive up to the door of a prosperous concern in an ordinary hansom and apply even for the position of office boy is not good form. You may have the best reference in the world, but the hansom cab is bound to queer you with the most reputable firms.

You may have to wait for some little time before you get your job. But the days pass quickly in a delightful place like this. A friend who has been seeking employment for some months now offers the following programme as being quite correct but not too stilted:

"I rise," he informs me, "at from 9 to 9:30. While my man prepares my bath I run over the morning papers hastily and select the most promising advertisements. At breakfast he sorts them over, and promptly at 10 o'clock I start out in my motor with the addresses in the regular order. I make a rule never to call on any one before 10 o'clock. The heads of most firms, or the managers of departments, rarely finish their mail before that hour.

"On arriving at a place where help is wanted I usually send in my card, always making a point to take my turn with the rest. It is never well to force oneself. Once in the presence of the man who wishes to employ some one, I briefly state my requirements, offer him a Havana, and, leaving my telephone number, request him to call me up later. By 12:30 I have finished. I then take a light luncheon and a siesta in my room, waiting for calls, until about 4. After this hour I am safe in going out, and I usually take a spin up the boulevard, or if the weather is particularly good I run up to Tuxedo or down the coast.

"It's rather pleasant answering advertisements. One meets so many queer people. Besides it gives me a regular occupation. It is so much better than having nothing to do."

WHAT SHOULD BE DONE.

My friend is fortunate in the fact that he has a private income of his own. Occasionally one hears of others in New York who are looking for jobs and who have no private incomes. Many of them are men and women of refinement and culture and ability, and yet they are obliged to use the surface cars, wear custom-made clothes, and in general present such a forlorn and unprepossessing appearance that they are fatally handicapped from the start. For it is singularly true that when some one who asks you for something conveys the impression that he is suffering for the lack of it, you never feel like giving it to him.

I maintain, therefore, that something ought to be done about all the people in New York and other places in this country who are seeking emploment

Are You Looking for a Job?

IF SO, HAVE AN INCOME FIRST—IT MAKES YOU FEEL EASIER, SAYS TOM MASSON.

By Thomas L. Masson.

NEW YORK, June 29.—This city offers a great many advantages to those who are looking for a job. It has the finest hotels in the world. The motor service is also very good. One can hire a six-cylinder car at not over $20 an hour, and this will be found a great help in answering advertisements. The old method of applying for a job by walking from door to door has all gone out. It was useful in its day, but too slow. Now you can cover the whole dry goods district in an hour and a half, and be told that your services are not wanted in from fifty to seventy-five places.

Some use hansom cabs, but this distinctly creates a bad impression. To drive up to the door of a prosperous concern in an ordinary hansom and apply even for the position of office boy is not good form. You may have the best reference in the world, but the hansom cab is bound to queer you with the most reputable firms.

You may have to wait for some little time before you get your job. But the days pass quickly in a delightful place like this. A friend who has been seeking employment for some months now offers the following programme as being quite correct but not too stilted:

"I rise," he informs me, "at from 9 to 9:30. While my man prepares my bath I run over the morning papers hastily and select the most promising advertisements. At breakfast he sorts them over, and promptly at 10 o'clock I start out in my motor with the addresses in the regular order. I make a rule never to call on any one before 11 o'clock. The heads of most firms, or the managers of departments, rarely finish their mail before that hour.

"On arriving at a place where help is wanted I usually send in my card, always making a point to take my turn with the rest. It is never well to force oneself. Once in the presence of the man who wishes to employ some one, I briefly state my requirements, offer him a Havana, and, leaving my telephone number, request him to call me up later. By 12:30 I have finished. I then take a light luncheon and a siesta in my room, waiting for calls, until about 4. After this hour I am safe in going out, and I usually take a spin up the boulevard, or if the weather is particularly good I run up to Tuxedo or down the coast.

"It's rather pleasant answering advertisements. One meets so many queer people. Besides it gives me a regular occupation. It is so much better than having nothing to do."

WHAT SHOULD BE DONE.

My friend is fortunate in the fact that he has a private income of his own. Occasionally one hears of others in New York who are looking for jobs and who have no private incomes. Many of them are men and women of refinement and culture and ability, and yet they are obliged to use the surface cars, wear custom-made clothes, and in general present such a forlorn and unprepossessing appearance that they are fatally handicapped from the start. For it is singularly true that when some one who asks you for something conveys the impression that he is suffering for the lack of it, you never feel like giving it to him.

I maintain, therefore, that something ought to be done about all the people in New York and other places in this country who are seeking emploment and who haven't the proper regalia. There's no justice in it. And we pride ourselves on being a just people.

Every man who is honestly looking for a job ought to be fitted out properly by the government. He ought to be given a fair start. He ought not to have to worry about himself while he is doing it. He ought to have free board at a good hotel, wear the best clothes, and have the services of a decent motor car. He ought to be made to feel that there is no hurry about it, that he can take his time. Only in this way can he bring himself to the highest point of efficiency and be in a position also to make the best terms. Why not? This isn't socialism. It's sense.

A BUSINESS PROPOSITION.

In the first place, if all the people who are looking for jobs had money enough to spend while they are doing it things would never run down very much. The moment that business began to lag, why more people would be thrown out of employment, but as they would all have money to spend the whole matter would right itself instantly. tI would work exactly on the same principle as the monorail car. The harder you spin the top inside the car the easier it will stand up. That's the only thing that is really needed in this country—to put all the people who are seeking employment on a self-respecting basis. Give them means enough to ask and receive what they are entitled to.

It may be objected that this privilege would be abused. What would be the use of getting a job, if the mere act of looking for one, without getting it, was in itself self-supporting?

But this argument only goes to show how near-sighted some people are. It really illustrates in a striking manner our most fundamental and monumental defect. This defect is the tacit assumption on the part of everybody that no one is going to do anything worth while when he is bribed; that if he is helped in any way he is going to abuse the privilege.

But which is better—for a man who is looking for a job to be placed in a position beforehand, where he is independent enough to command the best price for what he can do, or to be forced into the position of taking what some one else throws at him? There would be a proportion, of course, who would go wrong at this. But they would go wrong, anyway. Better give them enough money to drink themselves to death or wind themselves up in other ways.

PAPA AND MAMMA.

It is hard to retain your self-respect when you are out of a job if you have no money to do it on. That is the trouble with most of the people. They don't prepare for it. They don't save up. Many of them hamper themselves with families beforehand and foolishly spend all they make, and then when they get so old as no longer to be useful, they are thrown out of employment and have nothing to enjoy themselves on while trying to place themselves elsewhere. A good many of them fondly hope that the children they have raised, or are raising, will be an asset. That's a nice pipe dream.

When papa, who has been putting up for the boys all his life, presenting them with a college education, a domestic faro outfit, a bartender's guide, a broker's account in Wall street and other useful things like these, comes down to breakfast some morning with a pain in his back and a rheumatic cloudburst that has settled over his whole anatomical territory and gives him all the marks of a has-been, what do the boys do? Do they take him gently aside and tell him that it's all right, that they've been expecting and preparing for it, that they've clubbed together and bought him a farm in the Berkshires and a life annuity, and that from thenceforth they are going to cluster around him and read aloud from the sporting columns and bring him ice water and dust him off properly ever morning and evening?

Did you ever know any set of boys to do that? If you did send me their addresses and I will be glad to star them through the country at popular prices.

No, the boys are not built exactly that way. When papa gets his blue envelope on Saturday the chances are that Harold, his eldest, is doping out a honeymoon tour on the continent with the girl he met last season in the mountains; that Clarence, his joy and pride—up to eight years of age—is sitting on the bleaching boards up at the ball game, and when not doing that is blowing in his fifteen per on the ponies; that little Arthur, that promising baby, who held the neighborhood in thrall with his wonderful sunny hair and cheery disposition, is selling genuine briar-root pipes for 25 cents each behind the counter of a popular cigar store, and drawing as high as $8 a week.

NOT A SURE THING.

Papa, dear, don't bank on the boys too much. Start a rake-off for yourself and the old lady early in the game, and when you begin to feel the first rheumatic twinge arrange to have enough dividends coming in so that you can accompany Clarence occasionally to the ball game and be able to pay your own way, and so that you can take your place in the bald-headed row or put a fiver on the chestnut mare that you have inside information about. For it ought to be the privilege and the pleasure of every man to save up enough money to be a dead game sport for the last ten years of his life. That is the period when he doesn't even have to be moral any more. And as for the old lady, if she is of the right sort she will cheer him on. She will say, quite properly, that he has earned it all.

But don't bank on the boys. They didn't come here of their own free will. They had no choice in the matter. And you will find that, while they may be slow in absorbing other intellectual ideas, this one will get permanent board and lodging with them from the start.

AND THE GIRLS—EH?

And papa, dear, don't bank on the girls either. We have known some beautiful girls—in fairy stories—to marry some prince of industry, and when papa grew old to build him a brownstone front and place at his disposal the accrued interest on a million or so in such a way that he could collect it without having it rubbed into him. But in general, speaking in a broad sense and regarding the matter in the white light of publicity and truth, I believe I am right in saying that girls don't act that way.

The chances are about even that sweet little Estelle, who was the life of the school and always helped mother and never cared to read any but the nicest books and always went to Sunday-school and never left her room in bad order, will come home some day with a Willie boy from East Aurora who will sit around and smoke cigarettes and consume good food for the rest of his life and spend the $6 a week he is earning in one-two-three shots.

The probability is that Mabelle, who stood at the head of her class in the high school and learned how to keep books and be a trained nurse by correspondence before she was 18, will at 30 be the mother of seven children and show up every month just before the first with a wan smile and a touch in her tired voice for enough sheckels to help Claude—who is a book-keeper—to pay the rent.

The chances are that Clotilda—who was flighty and no one thought would amount to anything—will marry wealth, and be so absorbed in the occupation of holding her end up in society and so afraid that her parents will be known that when she drops around in her motor car about every six months she will give papa the tips of her fingers and in a far-away voice will regret that the multiplicity of her engagements prevents her from having the pleasure of the visit that she had been looking forward to so long.

A SMALL CONTINGENT.

In the meantime I call attention to something. I do not want to overstate the case. I want to be truthful and exact. Far be it from me to exaggerate. With all due respect, therefore, to every one concerned, I believe I am entirely safe in saying that there are a number of people today right in New York who are looking for jobs.

Are thees people entitled to what they are looking for? That is the great question.

Did you ever see an economic law? I ask you in all fairness what would you do with one if you saw it? And would you feel that you had to make room for it, to salaam to it, and treat it generally as if, while it was walking around you had nothing much to say?

Of course an economic law is an economic law. You cannot get around that. You may call it something else. You may say that it isn't a fit person to have around. But you could say the same thing of a New York policeman, and it wouldn't make the slightest difference. He would keep on clubbing you just the same.

And that is really what is the matter with all the people—and the rest of us—who are looking for jobs. They insist upon maintaining an economic law. This unpleasnt official, for example, declares that those who render a service are didived into two classes—namely, the man whose work is necessary to the machinery of the business but who doesn't add anything to the profits, and the man whose service increases the profits. If the first man can be replaced by some one else for less money who can make the machinery run a little easier then the economic law says that it must be done. The economic law says that there is so much competition that if this wasn't done the whole machine might stop.

Then there is the second man. He can make his own terms more or less. All he has to do is to demonstrate that the people who own the machine can double their incomes if they employ him, and they've got to give him his price. He's the man who knows how to make two blades of grass grow where one grew before.

The probability is that this man was behindhand in his studies at school. He may not have a good memory; he may be poor at book-keeping; he may be impossible in many ways, but he usually has one of three things; he has imagination or originality or nerve. When he has only one he gets four or five thousand a year; when he has two he gets fifty thousand a year; when he has all three he is what you may call, for want of a better term, a financial lalapaloosa.

Recently I went into a store to purchase a certain article. The manger of the department happened himself to greet me. I made known my want.

"We have it," he said, doubtfully, "somewhere, but I can't locate it just now. If John were only here!"

"Who's John?" I asked.

He looked at me in amazement, tinctured with incredulity, in just the sort of way that a man whose ideas are all focused on one small field would look at you if he thought you didn't know just what his field contained.

"Don't know John?" he said. "Why, I thought every one near here had heard of him. John is a wonder. He has a head on his shoulders! Now there are over ten thousand articles in this room, each different with a different price. John can locate every one instantly and give the price. Never knew him to be wrong. We've all got so we can't think without him. Marvelous brain!"

"How much does John get?" I asked, presumptiously.

"Let's see," replied the manager, reflectively, as if he had to jog his own memory. "Why, John has been with us ten years now, and I believe he gets $12 a week."

Kind Hearts--Good Deeds

> "How far that little candle throws his beams!
> So shines a good deed in a naughty world."

Benjamin Kreiger, a San Francisco boy, lost his life in attempting to save the lives of his companions in the explosion on board the United States battleship Georgia two years ago. There was plenty of praise for his sacrifice, but several prominent men of the Jewish faith believed something more was due to his memory, and so they raised the money for a beautiful monument that should properly commemorate his heroism. The monument will be dedicated in the Eternal Rest Cemetery in San Mateo today.

Miss Mary Harriman, eldest daughter of E. H. Harriman, has taken one of her father's Erie ferry boats and turned it into a man-o'-peace to fight tuberculosis. She has given the boat to the Brooklyn Committee for the Prevention of Tuberculosis and the Brooklyn Red Cross Society. Hammocks, steamer chairs and other conveniences for out-in-the-air sleeping will be arranged for the accommodation of 300 men, women and children.

Three meals a day will be served on the boat and between meals the patients will get all the milk and eggs they are able to eat. For the commissary department Miss Harriman will forage on her father's country place at Arden, where the milk is famous and the farm products the best that money can command. A free bus will be run to the boat from Brooklyn stations for those who cannot pay car fare.

James Holt, captain of the baseball and football teams of the Lick School of Mechanical Arts saved the life of Mrs. Cora Marrett of Redding last week. While swimming in the Sacramento River she was seized with cramps and her screams attracted Holt's attention. Before he could reach her, however, she had sunk thrice beneath the surface. Holt plunged to the rescue and grasping the drowning woman by the hair dragged her to the bank. Mrs. Marrett suffered no ill effects from her accident.

A drinking fountain, to cost not less than $30,000, is to be erected on the grounds of the University of Pittsburg in memory of the late Chris Magee. The funds for the same are provided by the will of his widow, the late Mrs. Eleanor L. Magee.

Mrs. Magee also provided for the erection of the Magee memorial hospital on the home property in Pittsburgh. The funds provided for the purpose will enable the erection and maintenance of a hospital after the most modern plans and with all the latest equipment known to medical science.

A broken brake on an automobile compelled Harold Gibson of San Rafael to take a considerable risk a few days ago. He was accompanied by Miss Caroline Burtis. The machine was stopped near the top of a hill, and finding that he could not himself repair the brake he threw his lighted cigarette beneath the automobile and started down the hill on foot. In a few minutes an explosion of gasoline set the machine on fire and started it running down the hill with Miss Burtis imprisoned behind the steering wheel. As it passed Gibson he sprang for the front seat and though stunned by the impact and cut by the glass windshield which he broke with his left hand, he secured hold of the steering wheel and at the bottom of the hill turned the machine into a hedge, where the fire was soon extinguished and the auto saved from complete destruction.

Miss Helen Frick, daughter of H. C. Frick of Pittsburgh, has just given 150 acres of land in the east end of Pittsburgh to the children of that city as a park. The property is said to be worth in the neighborhood of $300,000 and will be known as Frick Park. At her recent début Mr. Frick is said to have told his daughter that he would give her anything for which she could ask to commemorate the event. The young débutante asked for a few days to think over what she wanted and then asked for the east side property and promptly turned it over to the city.

Mrs. A. A. Anderson of Greenwich, Conn., has given $5000 toward a parish building to be devoted to the social and educational purposes of the deaf and dumb.

The dog is a noble animal, compared with man, because he never borrows your money to spend on midnight suppers for chorus girls, and because if he did he would pay you back, instead of blackguarding you to your friends for a skinflint.—[New York Press.

Betty Writes What She Thinks About the Way to Sell Goods; Also About Suffragettes.

Well, I was just about tired out waiting for some of those Sextette girls to speak up and help a body get hold of some of those uplifting ideas of theirs. I suppose maybe they thought I was just joking, but I wasn't, for I tell you it seems to me that living in this world is anything but a joke. At any rate, if it is, I don't see the point of it.

Maybe it's because I don't keep still long enough—I mean in one place—for, of course, I have to talk. How could a girl get any fun out of life if she couldn't talk? Now, there is that girl next to me at the ribbon counter. My! What a glum thing she is; "dignity" she calls it, and thinks I am just too flighty for any use. I notice, though, that my sales count up a good deal more than hers do. I tell you, where you have to deal with all sorts of folks you just can't keep on your high horse all the time; if you do you are sure to take a tumble sooner or later, and then what an awful come-down it is!

Now, that girl makes me tired. If anybody asks to look at something, she must smooth up her pompadour, tuck in her back frizzes, feel of her belt behind, and fuss up several other things before she begins to wait on them. I don't mean to take her customers, but sometimes when I'm not busy I get so interested watching to see how long it will take her to get fixed that first thing I know the customer has stepped along to me and asked for what she wanted, and I'm so rattled that I just go and get it for her instead of sending her back to the "Queen," as I ought to. That's what we call her—she's so tall and stately and proper.

Now, as you will likely guess, I am short and fat, with "auburn" hair that's frizzly all over; I just can't keep it smooth. I get a lot more fun out of life than the Queen does, and it pays better, too, I think, for I talk and laugh with everybody and they usually come back—and that pleases the manager, and so I get the best of it all round. But, really, it would be awfully hard work for me to be cross very long at a time. I get mad, of course, just like other folks, but it's too hard work to stay so, and first thing I know I am smiling at something and then it's all over. I shouldn't know how to manage so much dignity if I had it, so I guess I shall have to trudge along the way I am and do the best I can with things as they are.

I expect that editor will be telling me pretty soon to stop and take breath, for I go galloping on, stringing everything together like beads on a kindergarten string—red, blue and yellow, all mixed up without any plan or much of any idea, either.

And that's just why I wanted to hear from those Sextette girls again. Their letters sounded to me as if they wanted to help other folks learn some of the things they knew, and I was sure I needed to know a whole lot more than I did about a good many things, so I wrote that letter to the editor and she put it in the paper, just to show, I guess, how much—or, rather, how little, some girls do know. I was glad she understood that I really meant what I said and wasn't just making fun.

I've been wondering why somebody didn't have something to say about that woman's rights business, for it seems to me of all the foolishness the women ever did get into that's the worst. Mercy knows I've got more rights now than I know what to do with. How I should ever be able to earn anything, if I had to go prancing around, voting for this, that and the other, as they want us to, is more than I can tell. I think if the men folks can't run that part of the business without help from the women they had better get busy and study up how to run a government from some of their grandfathers. They made a pretty good job of starting the country in the right direction, it seems to me, and the grandmothers had precious little to say about it, either. All they tried to do was to keep the men in good fighting trim by giving them lots of good things to eat and keeping the home tidy and comfortable, and the children quiet and well behaved.

It seems to me there is chance for a lot of improvement in all those ways right now, without hunting round for the business which ought to belong to the men.

Well, I guess I have said more than enough this time, but I hope the editor will publish it, because I should like to hear what some of the other girls think about things. I am afraid I haven't said things right or written them right, either, but hope you will know what I mean.

HIS RUDE AWAKENING.

A Story of Orange Packing, and, Incidentally, of Love, in Four Chapters.

CHAPTER IV.

When Somerset came to himself, after a moment or two, his sister was saying:

"I saw her this afternoon, and learned it then. She is perfectly in love with him. She says he is so thoughtful of others, always ready to sacrifice himself——"

"Which I am not," Somerset thought.

"That he is so modest——"

"Which I never was," Somerset said to himself.

"Not the least bit of a baby about a little physical discomfiture——"

"I am just a great big baby! I admit it and I am ashamed of it," the man's thoughts answered.

"Always perfectly honorable——"

"He would not stoop to bribe a coachman as I did," conscience supplemented.

"A perfect gentlemen——"

"Who can forget about imaginary hurts long enough to answer a lady politely," concluded Somerset to himself.

He got up suddenly and pushed his sister into the hall.

"Tell the cook I want stuffed jellyfish legs fried in goose grease for dinner."

Then he locked the door.

After an hour he gave expression to these conclusions:

"Bah! I do not care so very much. She is not half the lady that Miss Small is!"

He went down to the library.

"Father——"

"Y-e-s?"

"I am tired of my mean, weakly self!"

"Well——"

"I want to be a man!"

"W-e-l-l——"

"Shall I——" desperately. "Shall I go back to the packing-house in the morning?"

"Of course!" and the finality of the tone ended the interview.

Every one was surprised when Mr. Algernon Percival Somerset went back to his work, and plunged into it with an energy which they had never dreamed that he possessed, doing all kinds of disagreeable jobs and working overtime without murmur. People were more surprised when he went back to the university and finished his last two years with honors. When his father deeded him twenty acres of the best Somerset orange land, yielding $5000 a year, and built him a handsome bungalow on the corner, gossips began to talk. Then the community was suddenly electrified—A. P. Somerset had quietly married pretty, young Miss Small, whose crippled, widowed mother did not have a cent!

MARGUERITE WINNIFRED.

(The End.)

A PRESIDENTIAL MESSAGE.

Not from President Taft, But from the President of Each and All—Some Good Advice.

Dear Each and All Girls: You remember that I said in accepting the office of president, in which you placed me, that I would lead you a merry race.

My conception of a merry race is one that ends well; one in which the racers arrive at the goal in good condition of mind and body, unwearied with the struggle; not panting with the heat and out of breath with undue exertion, or lagging behind or dropping out altogether, but to finish with the head up and the eyes glowing with love and enthusiasm as the goal is reached, knowing that even though others are ahead, we, too, may win the race if we are true to the self within, and are true when we are loyal to the best principles of life and nature.

The first thing we must do in this race is to start right. Let us look over the ground and see just what it is we wish to accomplish. Do we wish to go on with the chapters that are already organized? Do we wish to organize others? Do the non-resident members wish to organize correspondence chapters? All of these questions must be asked and answered at our next general meeting, which is to take place Wednesday. Other matters of interest at this meeting will be the election of a corresponding secretary, confirmation of chairman and secretaries of existing chapters, and new chapters to wheel into line. Many of our members wish the date of the general meetings changed, as it conflicts with the date of parent-teachers' associations, to which they belong.

All present chairmen and secretaries of existing chapters are earnestly requested to be present at next general meeting to state their plans concerning the work of their respective chapters for the coming year. If they cannot be present, endeavor to send a written statement to the recording secretary, Mrs. Lucy S. Mitchell, No. 345 Clay street, Los Angeles, so as to reach her by the Wednesday morning mail in time for the general meeting.

Any member who has an effective plan of work to carry out is cordially invited to make it known so that we each and all may learn how to work for the common good. Each member is invited to bring a new member and each one may feel free to join some chapter or act as chairman of an initiative chapter. This invitation is extended to each and every girl between the ages of 7 and 177. Those who are younger or older are expected to smile, and we hope that you will live up to our expectations. Every girl who reads this department is invited to affiliate with us. The power of affiliation with organization work is one of the secrets of long life. It is also one of the secrets of real life. One can accomplish alone great deeds for the good of humanity, but can inspire others, and be inspired to greater good by affiliation with others in the same line of thought. Thus, you will reach out to true companionship, one with the other, and be the means of making many life-long friendships with the privilege of correspondence.

A number of our chapters have taken responsibilities that are adverse to their work. This has greatly hampered their activity along the particular line in which they started. The result has served to discourage members. The remedy is to keep to the line and refer any matter that does not pertain to their line to the general officers for placement. This can be done effectively by organizing a new chapter or appointment of a committee to attend the matter.

There are a number of girls asking "What can I do?"

That is a question that each must answer for herself. There are so many things to do that it is hard to enumerate; but, here is a work to which each one of us can lend our influence, that of the beautifying of our cities, avenues, streets and parks. There are no better articles printed on this subject than those in The Times weekly Magazine. A study of these weekly articles will greatly improve our education along the line of civic beauty. As one looks from the back door on the back yards in the block, what a pleasure it would be in this day of knowledge of sanitation and cleanliness and good will, if all of the back yard fences could be taken away and the back yards parked and planted with trees and flowers and gardens. Growing vegetation in the heart of each block would mean better health for the inhabitants of the block. This is a work that never will end while a city is growing. Wherever there is a city there are unsightly back yards and vacant lots, which would furnish employment to many in converting them into beauty and use. Let us use our influence for this purpose wherever this page is read. There is another subject I wish to bring to your remembrance. A number of worthy young people are trying to earn scholarships by taking subscriptions for The Times. Let us seek to help them, especially those who belong to our society. These two items of work will give us each something to talk about, at least. While you are workers, our writers, and last, and send a thought to our shut-ins, our wrokers, onur writers, and last, and least, to your own president.

"ARIEL."

Appreciates the Authors.

The following note was written to one of the Author girls by an aspiring writer who has joined comparatively recently, who prefers her name not to be given in this connection, that readers may not identify her. If the Authors' chapter ever feels discouraged over their attempts to help their fellow-tyros, this letter ought to fill them with a burning zeal that would not let them pause until they had found and fanned into a flame the smothered literary impulses of every heart in which is hidden the spark divine. How inexpressibly sweet will it be to them when these whom they have helped win crowns of fame and honor.

The note of appreciation, written to the chairman of the Authors' Chapter, reads: "I thank you again and again for words of encouragement. I shall try so hard to show your faith in my literary ability is not to meet with disappointment. I hope some day to write something good, just to feel you will say, 'I told you so.' My highest, I might say wildest, hope in the literary line has been to have something published in a magazine. When I gain more confidence and learn where to send a manuscript to have it published, I will try my luck. I enjoy reading the Each and All page and it is the first thing I look for Sundays. Some of the verses are in my scrap book and are a constant source of inspiration to me."

Maisie's Vision.

"Oh, yes, Maisie is good, all right, but really she is one of the most unsatisfactory persons. She is so vacillating, so variable, that you cannot understand her. Today she is all enthusiasm over one thing, tomorrow she is on a different line altogether, but she lacks will power to carry her through. In fact, she never seems sure of herself." So said her friends, and Maisie knew full well their criticisms were true. Today, as she thought of the many lines of work she had taken up, only to tire of in a short time and drop, she felt thoroughly disgusted with herself and the world in general, and in this mood she fell asleep.

Immediately she found herself walking in a very strange land; indeed everything seemed to be left in an unfinished state; all around her were unfinished buildings, with flowers and trees around each one, but the flowers had petals on only one side, while the fruit on the trees was only half formed. Maisie stopped before what would haev been a beautiful building if it were only completed, and walked in. Once inside she saw many beautiful things, but like everything else there, all were in an unfinished state, half-painted pictures, half-written music, many other things only just begun and then left. At last she asked herself the question, "Where can I be?" Immediately a voice beside her replied, "This is the land of unfinished desires; all things, whatsoever you have desired and never finished are here. See all that unfinished music, the result of your one-time intense desire to be a musician, such as your friend Mabel; you started and had all the talent with which to succeed, but, at that time, you became interested in the pictures Ada painted and instantly you decided to become an artist, so that is where all those half-finished pictures came from. It's a pity your desires did not stay with you, for they would have been beautiful if you had finished them. Yes, you have had golden opportunities; so much material has been given you to work upon, but it has all been wasted, for you never stayed long enough at any one thing to excell in it."

Maisie hurried out to escape the truth that was being hurled at her, but her new-found companion went also and once outside began again:

"That building we were in represents yourself, just how grand and beautiful it would have been when completed you can judge for yourself."

Maisie, in order to turn the conversation, remarked upon the peculiarity of the flowers in having petals on only one side, and the trees in having only half-formed fruit.

"Yes," replied the stranger, "those flowers represent the kind words you desired to speak, but did not. The fruit on the trees represents the kind deeds you desired to do, but changed your mind before you did them. You might have had a magnificent garden of flowers and a bountiful harvest of fruit if you had only carried out your desires."

Then Maisie awoke and before many weeks Maisie's friends began to whisper among themselves of the wonderful change that had taken place in her. When questioned, Maisie said she was finishing up her unfinished desires. She declared she had had a vision, but her friends laughed and said it was only a dream.

ESTELLA BUHLINGER.

Education.

The majority of people seem to think that education means a process by which the top of the student's head is taken off and into the empty space is poured some Latin, some Greek, a little rhetoric, some music to give culture, a dose of mathematics for practicability and so on, until the empty head space is full. After carefully sealing the head the student is set free, and although his head is stuffed so full it aches, he is turned loose into this world as a finished product of education.

You who have studied Latin, know that the word education is derived from the Latin word educo, meaning to draw out, not a "stuffing in" and "sealing up" process. One writer has said, "Though we travel the world over to find the beautiful, we must carry it with us or we will find it not." If the power of thought is in us, why the process of trying to drive more in, in place of coaxing thoughts out to the light where they belong? When we raise flowers we put them where the sun is warm, water and cultivate the ground about them, and with much coaxing they are drawn from their hiding places and unfold their beauties to the great light of day. The same process gives like results with the human mind and heart.

I once knew a girl who had it within her to become a first-class dramatic reader. She went to a teacher for education, who, although an intellectual woman, used the process of filling the head and heart full of instructions and rules, by which she was supposed to become proficient in her art. The result was not the most favorable. Each pupil was like the teacher and when you heard one recite you heard all. They had no individuality and were like so many jointed dolls. The girl changed instructors. The new teacher was a keen judge of human character, and emotions. Gently she drew from its hiding place the girl's talent, giving her pictures to portray that suited her temperament, thus continually drawing from her the best she had to give until every day brought new power and beauty.

Our system of education is not the best, our environment could be better, and conditions are not conducive to educate or draw out poetry and beauty in thought. Let us not be discouraged, but rather may we each be in a condition that every refining and helpful thought we receive, may touch like a thought in our own mind and heart, giving birth to larger thought and greater capacity for usefulness.

MOTTO.

"Have you had a kindness shown?
Pass it on.
'Twas not given for you alone—
Pass it on.
Let it travel down the years,
Let it wipe another's tears,
'Till in heaven the deed appears—
Pass it on."

July 1 was one of the hottest days of the season, but the unwonted heat made the discussion of Sunshine plans for the hot weather all the more necessary. There was a good attendance at the meeting in the room kindly donated each month by the Chamber of Commerce.

"Good Cheer" plans for the summer included outings for little children, the Los Angeles branch of Sunshine, co-operating with other workers for the betterment of childhood.

Five dollars was voted to the King's Daughters Day Nursery, and $5 to the Volunteers of America. It was also decided to send Rev. Dana Bartlett donations for three branches of his work in the Eighth Ward—the vacation schools, the night schools and the general work. Great sympathy for these helpful summer efforts was expressed.

The chairman of the "Penny Kitchen" expressed to the society the pleasure the children of the Ann-street school took in the ice-cream treat the Sunshiners gave them the last day of school. A Sunshine member told such a funny story about "the Penny Kitchen," in that ward, that it is worth "passing on" to the readers of The Times. She said that a small boy in the Eighth Ward was singing the praises of the kitchen, but added, "They don't give a fellar much fer his money, though."

"Only four bowls of soup and five buns" was the answer.

The Sunshiners have decided a picnic in August, the date place to be announced at the meeting. It is to be a real picnic. Dainty and substanti boxes are to be prepared by the bers, and then sold on the for 25 cents apiece, with the standing that no Sunshiner shall her own box, and that the made shall go into the Sunshine ury. The Sunshiners are to their picnic, as was suggested Sunshine column of last week. sharers are to be little children ideas as to what a picnic really been somewhat vague. To cry those shadowy ideas into a reality will be the pleasant task of Sunshine picnickers.

The reports of the recently ap ed committees showed a glad wil ness to put on the harness of he ness. The investigating chairm ported aid given to several fa and work secured for three whose idleness had not been ca laziness. Helping others to help selves is the Sunshine way of charity—though charity is a wor dom heard in Sunshine circle love means so much more, and is ply charity in action.

The Flower chairman reported ty-six bouquets of flowers sen brighten sick rooms in the pas weeks. Some one has called the "God's thoughts." Then we can on" nothing higher, and in Cal the flowers are always with us, also the sick and lonely.

The chairman of the Visiting mittee reported many "Good C calls made during the month.

The Wheel Chair chairman that every Sunshine chair was and that she had several such cases on the waiting list that she ommended the purchase of a chair. Her request was imme granted.

Ah! if the owners of wheel- not in use could only know the ing need for them in Los An how quickly they would be " on" to be messengers of joy to ins in our midst!

The Maternity Home Sunshine chairman reported nine complete outfits made and given to poor ers. So many calls for kimonos and mer garments have come to us shut-ins, that it was decided to a sewing committee to the Mrs. A. P. Chapin, No. 2416 Bu avenue, was appointed chairman, her assistants will be Mmes. Pascoe, Emma Gillingham, MacGinnis, G. H. MacGinnis, dorf, Fry, Crowder, Preston, Crooker, N. E. Wilson, Grace reich and Miss Virginia Johns.

This committee will meet at the of the chairman, and will be grateful for donations of mate thread, etc., from the stores, or individuals. This will be a way readers of The Times to show interest in the babies and shut- Send in donations to Mrs. Chapin soon as possible.

The name of the Entertain Committee has been changed to Hospitality Committee" and the man, Mrs. G. H. MacGinnis, is paring something good for the week in July.

From Tropico comes the que "How can we start a Sunshine br here?" Directions have been sent, we hope soon to chronicle the birt a new branch.

So the work goes on. One thought leads to another, and in tering sunshine, the shadows in own lives fade away. Great is reward, through unsought joy unkn before, an understanding of the burdens borne by others, and a pathy for the sick and lonely experienced until the Sunshine was answered.

A YOUNG HOUSEKEEPER.

She Has a Bungalow for Herself and Her Many Dolls—It Was a Gift from Santa Claus.

The daintiest and smallest of all Los Angeles housekeepers is pretty Genevieve Maier, just 6 years old. This little lady and her family of more than twenty-five dolls live in the cutest of bungalows all their very own. It is nestled down comfortably right in the shadow of the little girl's parents' big home in West Pico street, so that if the charming little mistress or any of her dollies should become afraid of bug-a-boos they have only to call to mother, who is always right in hearing distance.

This pretty bungalow has a front porch furnished with comfortable dolly rockers and steamer chairs. The bungalow itself has a reception hall, living-room, dining-room and kitchen, all furnished in the most approved and up-to-date fashion, and complete even to the smallest detail. There are go-carts and high chairs for the baby dollies, and settees and morris chairs for the young-lady dollies. Cosy corners and window seats are arranged in the living-room, while dainty, dotted Swiss curtains, tied with ribbons, complete the homey look of this cosy cottage.

Mistress Genevieve has her regular reception days, when all the little people of the neighborhood don their pretty frocks and go calling at the dollies' bungalow. The electric bell is always answered by the little hostess herself, and all the dollies are dressed in their finest gowns for this occasion. Each little visitor can hug and nurse her favorite dolly to her heart's content on reception days, and tea is served in the dining-room, while each little mother tells of the beauty and smartness of her treasure.

Genevieve loves every one of her dollies devotedly. Each of them possesses a real individuality to the little mother. Pauline is the name of a dolly that is quite as big as the little mother herself. Then there is a real walking doll, a Hungarian doll, a German doll, whose name is Grechen, and a Parisian doll. Probably the dolly the little mother loves best, just as all real mothers do, is the baby dolly, that looks for all the world like a real sure-enough baby, in its long dresses. This baby dolly is named Leontine, and every day Leontine must be taken for a ride in her go-cart. There are numerous other dollies; in fact, the little mistress can be likened to the old woman who lived in a shoe, but she seems to find a place and a welcome for all the dollies who find their way to the bungalow.

The bungalow was Santa Claus's gift to the little girl. She had so many dollies that it really became necessary for her to have a house of her own for them. So she wrote a letter to Santa Claus a few weeks before Christmas, and asked him to send her a bungalow for her dollies, and sure enough, he answered her letter, for you know, Santa Claus always answers little people's prayers, if he can find a way to do it.

Little Genevieve, however, sometimes gets a bit tired of dollies that take all the hugs and kisses and never give a single one back, and so she has long prayed for a little brother or sister who will help her keep house with her dollies, and who will love her a little bit in return. She told her mamma the other day, "I've been praying a long time now for that baby, I wish it would hurry up and come."

So little people who may not have many dollies, but who have a dear little brother or sister, need not envy this little mistress of the dainty bungalow, for she would gladly give all of her pretty treasures for a real live baby brother or sister.

a cunning little six-year-old housekeeper, who is entertaining her family of dollies with a tea party in her own little bungalow.

VILLAGE OF THE GNOMES.

[SPECIALLY CONTRIBUTED TO THE TIMES.]

Jennie and Robert had been gathering flowers in the mountain meadow, blue blossoms that grew on slender stalks between the grasses. Suddenly Rob shouted to his sister, "Oh, Jennie, just see the one I have found. It is three times as big as the other flowers." Jennie ran to see. Sure enough, it was very large, and a beautiful blue like the sky, and so sweet—just like the violets in the garden at home.

"Let's lie down in the shade of this bush and rest awhile, Rob, I'm so hot," said Jennie, "and let's talk about that story mamma read to us last winter about the shepherd boy who found a blue flower one day, and all at once a little man opened a door in the hillside and told him to come in and take all the gold and silver and precious jewels he wanted ——"

"I wish a little man would come and say that to me," interrupted Rob. And then—were the children dreaming? —there stood a tiny figure before them, dressed from tip to toe in blue and gold, and said, "Yours is just such a flower as the shepherd boy found. Once every hundred years, somewhere in the world, just one enchanted flower blossoms."

"Oh, oh," exclaimed Jennie excitedly, "then Rob can go with you and gather a hatful of diamonds and rubies and ——"

"No," the gnome said hastily, "but you may both come with me and visit the village of the mountain gnomes, and our king will give each one of you a beautiful turquoise."

"But how are we to get to your village?" asked Rob. "I don't see any doorway in the hillside."

"You must each put on one of these," answered the gnome, and pulled two tiny caps out of a knapsack he had strapped to his back. "The red one is for you, Jennie, and the blue one for Rob. It has taken ninety-nine years to spin and weave these caps. They are made from the finest cobwebs and colored with dye made from the petals of flowers."

The children put on the funny little caps, and then—what a queer feeling. They were growing smaller and smaller. Jennie could not help laughing. Rob looked so tiny. He wasn't a bit larger than her smallest jointed doll. Rob laughed too, for Jennie was so little and comical in her wee bit of a red sunbonnet.

Just then the gnome blew on a willow whistle three times, and three jackrabbits came bounding to him out of the brush. "You may ride Bounder, Rob; Jennie shall have Steadfast, for he will carry her safely; and Lightning is Bluejacket's own favorite steed." In a minute, the children and their companion were mounted and then, at a word from Bluejacket, away sped the rabbits like the wind.

On and on they ran, at first on the trail and then following the windings of a little stream in a deep ravine. Jennie and Rob held on very tight, at first, to the silky hair of their strange steeds, but they soon found that there was no danger of falling off. Bluejacket told them that as long as they wore the little caps, they could ride just as well as if they had practised a long time, and the children found that what he said was true.

After riding about half an hour, they came out into a beautiful open valley carpeted with hundreds and hundreds of flowers. Red, pink, yellow, blue, indeed, every kind of flower that grew anywhere in the mountains, was to be found there; and meadow larks flew about, singing joyous songs about their little nests in the grass. "This is our garden," Bluejacket explained, "where we raise the seeds for all the mountain flowers. Through the summer, we gather the seeds as they ripen, and the next spring we plant them in every spot where a seed will grow. When a flower gnome does his work very carefully for a long time, our king lets him take care of the blue flowers and watch for the seed that is to bring forth the enchanted blossom."

By this time the riders had crossed the valley, and in a moment the rabbits stood still at the base of a high cliff. "We will get off here," the gnome said. "Look up, and you will see our village." And he pointed to the side of the cliff.

"Why," exclaimed Rob, "it looks just like the homes of the cliff dwellers, only these are so much smaller."

"Just follow me, children," said Bluejacket, as he started to climb one of the narrow ladders leading up the steep, rocky face of the cliff, "and you will soon see our king and receive the jewels I promised you."

Jennie was afraid, but she did not want to miss seeing the Gnome King, so she bravely climbed up after Robert, and soon all three scrambled safely into one of the doorways leading into the cliff-side. This doorway opened into a narrow hallway lighted by hundreds of fireflies. Bluejacket led the way through this hallway into a room or cave cut out of solid turquoise. Tiny golden lanterns, cunningly fashioned to look like stars, threw their beams of light down from the arched blue roof. The floor was inlaid with many jewels, which flashed back the light from the lanterns above. At the farther end of the cavern sat the king of the gnomes on his carved throne.

Bluejacket went forward and said: "O king of the mountain and keeper of its life and secrets, I bring before you these two children of the valley, who have found the precious blue flower."

"You are welcome, little friends," said the king, "for only those children who are honest and kind ever find the flower of flowers." He paused a moment and then continued: "Perhaps you do not know that gnomes never die unless by some accident one is drowned or crushed, but this unfortunately sometimes happens, for in doing their work they must climb about in many perilous places. So to keep our number always the same, once every hundred years, at the same moment that the enchanted blue flower first opens its petals, a babe is born to us. You shall see this babe asleep at its mother's side," and descending from his throne, the king led the way into another turquoise chamber, but this cave was open on one side, so the warm summer air could enter and one could look out on the beautiful meadow of flowers. The queen was lying on a couch made of thistle down covered with richly-colored robes. She was very lovely, with deep blue eyes and wavy golden hair. Her tiny babe slumbered beside her.

The king led the children to the bedside and when he had told the queen who they were, she opened a jewel casket and selected a bracelet and a ring. Then she said: "Dear children, as a token of the joyous day that has brought my baby to me, I am going to give you these." And smilingly she slipped the ring on Bob's finger and fastened the bracelet around Jennie's brown wrist.

After the children had thanked the queen for her gifts, the king and she bade them "goodby" and they followed Bluejacket back through the brilliant throne-room and narrow corridor to the ladder on which they had climbed up to the gnome village. One after the other they descended to the ground. Bluejacket again blew his whistle three times, and almost at once Bounder, Lightning and Steadfast came running up. Soon the children and their gnome companion were mounted and at the latter's command sped on their homeward way.

Across the meadow, through the ravine and over the trail, then back again in the mountain meadow where Rob had found the flower, they dismounted. Bluejacket took the little caps, put them in his knapsack, waved his hand in farewell and disappeared with the rabbits in the brush. Then Jennie and Rob felt the queer feeling once more that came over them when they put on the tiny caps, only this time they were growing back to their right size.

Though the children hunted many times for the Village of the Mountain Gnomes, they could never find it again. But Jennie has kept her beautiful bracelet of gold set with turquoise, and Rob his handsome turquoise ring; and they often talk together about the blue flower and their wonderful trip with Bluejacket.

DAUGHTERS OF THE RICH. By Edgar Saltus. Mitchell Kennerley, New York. (Price $1.50.)

In this era of slipshod literature, when popular writers and aspirants for popularity grind out two or three novels a year; when novels are machine-made, and the literary sweatshops are buzzing noisily with the manufacture of best sellers—it is a treat indeed for a weary reviewer to come upon a conscientious and consequential piece of fiction.

There will be those who will cavil at Edgar Saltus's theme; but there will be no one with a literary sense (hence, few book reviewers,) who will not derive genuine pleasure from Mr. Saltus's English. We have in America but three stylists, writers with an inborn, carefully-balanced and esthetic feeling for words; and of these three Mr. Saltus is one; and Henry Milner Rideout is another. (To save myself from abuse and obloquy, I leave the third name open, so that every writer may think that perhaps I mean him.) Likewise, Mr. Saltus (unlike many of his fellow writers,) is a man of intellectual brilliancy. He has already given a purblind public one of the most remarkable and needed books of its time, "Historia Amoris." He has written, also, a book called "The Anatomy of Negation" that the McCutcheon-Chambers circle would find beyond its understanding. His "Pomps of Satan" essays are among the most brilliant in English. And in addition to these accomplishments, Mr. Saltus writes fiction far away above the average tale of the outing flannel suit making love to a pique dress on the beach at Newport. His "Vanity Square" (not a big story) stands out in strong, vivid relief against the drab mediocrity of a hundred and one other novels. I have not seen the book for years, but whole passages and phrases I can recall with ease—the woman in her "ruedelapaixian" gown, the telepathy that informed the doctor of his sweetheart's crime, the wonderful passages of the wife when she comes into her own. . . .

Mr. Saltus has written another book, "Daughters of the Rich." I never gainsay a man his material, provided he handles it artistically. And if Mr. Saltus desires to write of murder, mistaken identity and questionable characters like Welden and the murdered lady who pops up later, I have no fault to find. For to whatever Mr. Saltus touches his pen he makes into consummate art, alive with emotion, virile with fearless unconventionality, free from the petty commonplaceness of popular fiction, and couched in a literary style which is at once exhilarating, scholarly, brilliant and poetical.

On South America.

THE ANDEAN LAND. By Chase S. Osborn. A. C. McClurg & Company, Chicago ($8.00.) (Two Volumes.)

Perhaps the most important—in any event, the most comprehensive—book on South America is the two-volume work of Mr. Chase S. Osborn, which has sentimentally been called "The Andean Land." There have been few adequate or reliable works on the subject of South America's life and development. This dearth is due, no doubt, to the fact that South America is so vast, so little known, so slightly understood, and so varied in all its activities. Arthur Ruhl some months ago issued a book called "The Other Americans." As far as it went it was interesting, but it skimmed the surface and was, in many instances, superficial. It did not go into details as does Mr. Osborn. The author of "The Andean Land" is a prominent Michigan man, and a member of the board of regents of the University of Michigan. He has traveled through South America and visited every city on the continent and the adjacent islands.

In "The Andean Land" Mr. Osborn describes the republics and colonies of South America, giving us keen and interesting sketches of their historical development. The trading situation is considered in its present condition, and the possibilities of the republics for the American exporter is discussed. Business men dealing with South America will find much food for reflection in the following excerpt from the discussion of trade:

"South American agents of United States export firms tell us that what is most needed in a practical way is a better mail service, on the west coast, particularly, and that mail contracts of sufficient importance to insure regular and frequent delivery on the part of steamers now in service would be stimulation enough. No person has any trouble in getting from the United States to South America comfortably, or in sending cargoes of any kind, at the present time. The mail service might even be tolerated, and the matter of credits could be arranged, if only the manufacturers of the United States would come to the point where they will sufficiently desire South American trade to serve it well and cater to it. Shipments are continually made of goods that are miserably packed, and in other instances shop-worn and obsolete articles are shipped, as if South America were a good place to dump such things, and as if there were no English and sharper and more energetic German competitors to make the most of it."

Many of Mr. Osborn's descriptions of the Andean continent have never before been made available to the English readers; and the historical matter in more than one instance will be entirely new material for us North Americans.

Mr. Osborn devotes a chapter to the Valparaiso earthquake, in which he describes the cataclysm with unforgettable literary skill:

"All at once the very air seemed to poise; the earth was more still than common, as if to emphasize a hollow moan that appeared to come from underneath, as though from angry bowels, and then the surface of the ground began to move like the waves of the sea, with jerky, tearing vibration. People were made sick at heart and stomach. The effect upon buildings was as though they had been in rapid motion and had suddenly collided with an immovable body, or were stationary and had been shot into with a great shell. Timbers creaked and crunched, walls buckled and toppled, roofs left with nothing to float upon, fell in; there was a tumbling of cornices and arches, then lights went out and wild fires began to burn. People rushed into the streets, only to be killed by falling buildings, and others were buried where they stood or sat frozen speechless and motionless by fear; others escaped to

And in addition to these accomplishments, Mr. Saltus writes fiction far away above the average tale of the outing flannel suit making love to a pique dress on the beach at Newport. His "Vanity Square" (not a big story) stands out in strong, vivid relief against the drab mediocrity of a hundred and one other novels. I have not seen the book for years, but whole passages and phrases I can recall with ease—the woman in her "ruedelapaixian" gown, the telepathy that informed the doctor of his sweetheart's crime, the wonderful passages of the wife when she comes into her own. . . .

Mr. Saltus has written another book, "Daughters of the Rich." I never gainsay a man his material, provided he handles it artistically. And if Mr. Saltus desires to write of murder, mistaken identity and questionable characters like Weiden and the murdered lady who pops up later, I have no fault to find. For to whatever Mr. Saltus touches his pen he makes into consummate art, alive with emotion, virile with fearless unconventionality, free from the petty commonplaceness of popular fiction, and couched in a literary style which is at once exhilarating, scholarly, brilliant and poetical.

On South America.

THE ANDEAN LAND. By Chase S. Osborn. A. C. McClurg & Company, Chicago ($5.00.) (Two Volumes.)

Perhaps the most important—in any event, the most comprehensive—book on South America is the two-volume work of Mr. Chase S. Osborn, which has sentimentally been called "The Andean Land." There have been few adequate or reliable works on the subject of South America's life and development. This dearth is due, no doubt, to the fact that South America is so vast, so little known, so slightly understood, and so varied in all its activities. Arthur Ruhl some months ago issued a book called "The Other Americans." As far as it went it was interesting, but it skimmed the surface and was, in many instances, superficial. It did not go into details as does Mr. Osborn. The author of "The Andean Land" is a prominent Michigan man, and a member of the board of regents of the University of Michigan. He has traveled through South America and visited every city on the continent and the adjacent islands.

In "The Andean Land" Mr. Osborn describes the republics and colonies of South America, giving us keen and interesting sketches of their historical development. The trading situation is considered in its present condition, and the possibilities of the republics for the American exporter is discussed. Business men dealing with South America will find much food for reflection in the following excerpt from the discussion of trade:

"South American agents of United States export firms tell us that what is most needed in a practical way is a better mail service, on the west coast, particularly, and that mail contracts of sufficient importance to insure regular and frequent delivery on the part of steamers now in service would be stimulation enough. No person has any trouble in getting from the United States to South America comfortably, or in sending cargoes of any kind, at the present time. The mail service might even be tolerated, and the matter of credits could be arranged, if only the manufacturers of the United States would come to the point where they will sufficiently desire South American trade to serve it well and cater to it. Shipments are continually made of goods that are miserably packed, and in other instances shop-worn and obsolete articles are shipped, as if South America were a good place to dump such things, and as if there were no English and sharper and more energetic German competitors to make the most of it."

Many of Mr. Osborn's descriptions of the Andean continent have never before been made available to the English readers; and the historical matter in more than one instance will be entirely new material for us North Americans.

Mr. Osborn devotes a chapter to the Valparaiso earthquake, in which he describes the cataclysm with unforgettable literary skill:

"All at once the very air seemed to poise; the earth was more still than common, as if to emphasize a hollow moan that appeared to come from underneath, as though from angry bowels, and then the surface of the ground began to move like the waves of the sea, with jerky, tearing vibration. People were made sick at heart and stomach. The effect upon buildings was as though they had been in rapid motion and had suddenly collided with an immovable body, or were stationary and had been shot into with a great shell. Timbers creaked and crunched, walls buckled and toppled, roofs left with nothing to float upon, fell in; there was a tumbling of cornices and arches, then lights went out and wild fires began to burn. People rushed into the streets, only to be killed by falling buildings, and others were buried where they stood or sat frozen speechless and motionless by fear; others escaped to the plazas, only to be driven to the hills by dread of a tidal wave; many went off to ships in the harbor, which bravely and quickly sent their boats to the rescue, each nation striving to outdo the others in courage and humanity."

Mr. Osborn discusses the Brazilian matters to some length, gives consideration to the social customs and the natural history. The prospective tourist will find of great value, in addition to other topical information, the inclusion of money exchange values, and distances. There is, in addition, much clear-sighted treatment of such questions as the American exporter's problems, and such proposed aid as ship subsidies.

The great fault with Mr. Ruhl's book, and with many other works of its kind, is the inability of the author to understand and appreciate the Latin temperament, which is almost antipodally different from the Anglo-Saxon. Mr. Ruhl spent many pages poking fun at its manifestations. But Mr. Osborn has written with sympathetic insight into the Latin temperament. He sees in South America not merely a collection of small republics more or less out of harmony with one another, but a vast theater in which the Latin race is winning for itself a renaissance in its new world.

Reminiscences of Notables.

OLD FRIENDS. Being Literary Recollections of Other Days. By William Winter. Moffatt, Yard & Co., New York. ($3.00.)

Year by year William Winter continues to add to the debt which the English-reading world owes him. Happily, the onslaughts of time have no discouragements for this veteran of the pen. He is as industrious in old age as he was in youth, and the prime of his busy life. All of which is something that we have to be deeply grateful for.

It is likely that Mr. Winter's latest book will prove more widely popular than any that his publishers have issued in late years. It is called "Old Friends," and deals in the author's personal recollections of the men who created the richest period that our American literature has yet known. In the long and brilliant list of those whom Mr. Winter knew personally, and sometimes intimately, are Longfellow, Lowell, Holmes, Aldrich, Bayard Taylor, Dickens, Wilkie Collins, George William Curtis and a host of others—names that are household words wherever literature has secured even the most precarious welcome.

Fascinating as Mr. Winter's recollections of great actors have proved, there can be no doubt that this book of memories of the poets, novelists and essayists will be much more largely sought after, because it deals with that palm-crowned company who were even nearer to the hearts of the people than were their contemporaries of the drama. And isn't it a blessing that William Winter knew them all as his comrades and his companions, and that he does not neglect to make them known to us as he knew them?

It would be difficult to imagine a more delightful, satisfying and comforting book than "Old Friends." That the work of writing its fascinating pages was a labor of joy as well as of love, we can feel from the author's owns words. "Looking back to the middle of the last century," he says ". . . . I see, as in a vision, a time when the world seemed gentler than now it is, and a place where action had fallen asleep. The broad white streets (of Cambridge) were shaded with copious elms, willows, and silver-leaf maples. The houses were, mostly, isolated in gardens. The shining River Charles wound its sinuous way through broad reaches of marsh land—still and solitary in the sunshine, save for the stir of rippling grass and the flight of a wandering gull. Once every hour the long omnibus rolled lazily through the village street, on its drowsy journey to neighboring Boston. . . . At intervals the voice of the lecturer became audible—Emerson, or Phillips, or Parker, or Beecher, or Chapin, or Osgood, or Whipple, or Curtis, or Giles. Once I heard the elder Dana, the author of 'The Bucanneer'—a slight, strange, gray, pallid man, with dark, mysterious, awe-stricken eyes—discourse on 'Hamlet.' Sometimes, rambling among the quaint red college buildings at Harvard, the gazer might descry the decorous, stately, sable figure of Edward Everett; or the tall, shambling Felton, with spectacled nose and kindly, preoccupied face; or Pierce, the great professor of Mathematics, with his long hair and hirsute visage. . . . or the manly presence and thoughtful countenance of Lowell; or the handsome, comfortable Agassiz. . . . And there sometimes, came the diminutive but erect, sprightly, vital Holmes, one of the blithest spirits, surely, that ever walked the earth. As I think of those times and persons—serene in a halo of poetic distance and revery—I breathe once more the fragrant syringa and lilac in the half-forgotten springtime that never can return, and hear the patter of the falling leaf in burnished autumn woods of Long Ago."

A man reared in an atmosphere like that and afterward drifting into the Bohemian life of Boston and New York—the man being William Winter, with William Winter's soul—could not fail to acquire much wealth in literature. In "Old Friends" that wealth is poured out lavishly. He neglects no one worthy of remembrance, from Longfellow down to Fitz James O'Brien and other devil-may-care, improvident sons of genius who made the world rich while they themselves often went hungry to bed or went hungry without a bed to go to.

In "Other Days" Mr. Winter preserves his own quaint, charming style of writing, which is like no other, and grips the heart with a charm peculiar to itself. The book ought not only to be a treasured volume in every household, but a book to be read in our schools, both as an example of pure literary style, and as an intimate history of our greatest literary figures.

Valuable History.

THE STORY OF OIL. By Walter Sheldon Tower, Ph.D. D. Appleton and Co. New York. ($1.50.)

"The Story of Oil" is a book that can be studied with profit by oil men and others alike. The student of history will find much that is of interest in the account given of the business from the most ancient times to today. The rise of the Pennsylvania regions from the day that Edwin L. Drake, coming from his position as conductor on a New England railroad, sunk the first successful oil well and started the modern petroleum industry to this day, is told in a very interesting way.

The chapter on the Standard Oil Company is especially deserving of attention. Prof. Tower does not attempt the pose much too common of late of wild denunciation of the great oil company. He tells briefly of some of its early struggles and how it crushed competition; by inference, at least, condemning its tactics but at the same time pointing out clearly how the nature of the oil business is such as to render the overthrow of competition practically essential and inevitable. He is clearly of the opinion that much more has been gained than has been lost by this. Certainly he shows that the elimination of competition has alone protected the consumer and made oil products safe, thereby spreading their use everywhere. Small refiners struggling for existence against each other were in constant temptation to use unsafe goods because they cost less. The tremendous American export trade is due wholly to the Standard, and it reaches every quarter of the globe, making millions for American oil producers as well as for the Standard itself.

The history of Baku is quite interesting as showing the difference between American and Russian methods.

Unfortunately the professor's information on California is not quite as adequate as it should be. In his chapter on the Standard, in speaking of its pipe lines, he says that the "trust" owns the important pipe line in this State. Its great Bakersfield-Point Richmond is, in fact, the greatest, but it is not the only great one. The Associated has had one in operation for years from Coalinga to Monterey that, while smaller, has been of vital importance and without it the fuel consumers of San Francisco would have had a hard time indeed. From a year past the Associated has had another, almost as great as the Standard's, from Bakersfield to Port Costa. The Union's two lines from Santa Maria to Port Harford are perhaps too short to consider, if mere mileage be the criterion, but I think their effect on California's industry is great enough to warrant their being classed as "important."

The book though, on the whole, is well worthy of study, and the author evidently understands his subject.

THE SEVEN STAGES OF GOLF, and Other Golf Stories in Picture and Verse. Written by Harold Simpson. Illustrated by G. E. Shepheard. J. B. Lippincott Company. Philadelphia.

"The Seven Stages of Golf" is among the very few of the designedly humorous books that may be called humorous. But there are spots, however, in this book about which I have my doubts.

Personally, I do not play golf. (My reasons are many and good. In fact I see no reason why I should play golf.) I state this uninteresting fact concerning my abstinence merely to let you know that I am ignorant of the game, the names of the different sticks the habits of golfers, and the golf vernacular. The book, notwithstanding, struck me as being very funny; it joked about things I knew nothing of, and used technical words and illusions that I did not understand. Withal, I laughed muckle. (Maybe if I knew the game the book wouldn't be a bit humorous.) As it is, there is just enough cryptic suggestion and mystery about "fore" and "brassey" and "niblink" and "in-betweens" to fascinate the uninitiated.

To make sure, I handed the book to the sporting editor, and he chuckled; so I take it for granted it is all right.

Every page has a first-rate cartoon in colors by G. E. Shepheard, funny in itself; but funnier when one reads the accompanying verse by Harold Simpson. "The Seven Stages of Golf" do not occupy the whole book. There are other variations on well-known verses—the best of which is paraphrased in terms of golf of "The Walrus and the Carpenter." Shepheard's work here is the best, too.

In all, it is delightfully absurd, as funny to the layman as to the link fiend.

First Cousin of Wee MacGregor.

OH! CHRISTINA! By J. J. Bell. Fleming H. Revell & Co., New York. Fowler Bros., agents. (Price 60 cents.)

"Oh! Christina" is builded along conventional lines, but Mr. Bell's humor gives it a flavor very much of its own. There have been numerous books of infant cut-ups coming to live with prim relatives, but Christina is more enjoyable than the average adopted child of such tales.

She was taken from the streets of Glasgow, moved to Scotland, and placed under the supervision of a maiden aunt to whom one could apply neither the term of unconventional nor Bohemian. This prudish aunt owned a shop, and between the business duties and Christina she was kept busy.

Christina is addicted to the use of slang and from her talk you are quite sure she has never studied the parts of speech. In addition she is careless in her ways of living. But she has many redeeming features, and is quite capable. She is instrumental in culminating a very happy event in her aunt's life.

BRIEF COMMENTS ON LITERARY SUBJECTS.

Swinburne's letters to Edmund Clarence Stedman, which the London Times has had the privilege of laying open to the public eye, reveal the whole-souled admiration of genius that constituted part of the poet's greatness. In particular, Swinburne makes mighty offering of tribute to Walter Savage Landor, whose literary antagonists were represented by Prof. Lounsbury of Yale, in an article, afterward included in his book, "The Standard of Usage in English," in which he referred to Landor as "one of the minor gods of the Georgian era in whose honor a cult has been instituted." Stedman's own admiration of Landor led him to make the critical study about which Swinburne is here speaking:

"The only drop of qualifying bitterness in the pleasure with which I read and reread it rises from the regret that it could not have come nine years before instead of after he went back to the Olympians; for I remember well how pleasant and how precious for all his high self-reliance, the sincere tribute of genuine and studious admiration was even at the last to the old demigod with the head and heart of a lion. I have often ardently wished I could have been born (say) but five years earlier, that my affection and reverence might have been of some use and their expression found some echo while he was yet alive beyond the rooms in which he was to die. The end was very lonely, and I fear the last echo of any public voice that reached him from England must have been of obloquy and insult."

A. C. McClurg and Company will publish this month a life of the inventor of the harvester under the title "Cyrus Hall McCormick, His Life and Work," written by Herbert N. Casson, author of "The Romance of Steel," and "The Romance of the Reaper." The story is not a biography only, but a chapter, as well, in the most important development of American history. Cyrus McCormick emancipated the American farm from the slavery of the soil. Up to this time, no matter how much wheat was grown, no more was obtainable than human hands could gather in the few days when alone the wheat could be harvested. And that quantity was a bare living quantity; its export was unheard of. In such circumstances the political liberty and personal freedom won by Washington and Lincoln were potential only and could not be realized in experience until the harvester made man the master of the wheat instead of its servant. Such an emancipation awaited the fittest human agency for its working out and Mr. Casson pictures Cyrus McCormick as the "man of destiny" through whom the streams of his country's life were to reach their wonderful expansion. The story is told with historical perspective as well as with full personal knowledge and will take its place as the record, not of a man's life merely, but of the greater part of a nation's. The book contains a photogravure portrait and twenty-five other illustrations.

With the announcement of the second edition of "King Alfred's Jewel," the poetic drama which called forth some comment from English and American critics some months ago, comes the revelation of the name of the author, Mrs. Spencer Trask. By this announcement the public is also given the name of the author of "Mors et Victoria," an anonymous drama published by Mrs. Trask a few years ago.

English literature has been favored with so few women who know themselves "to sing and build the lofty rhyme" that the appearance of another who bids fair to obtain a place amid the galaxy of English poets, should awaken interest.

Mrs. Trask is a writer with perseverance toward the highest literary ideal. Her play, "The Little Town of Bethlehem," which was presented last winter by the Ben Greet players, will be seen throughout the country during the coming season. Her dramatic poem, "Night and Morning," dealing with one of the well-known narratives of the New Testament, may also be deemed worthy of attention.

William Dean Howells has opened his cottage at Kittery Point, Me., where it has long been his custom to spend the summer season.

Ralph Barton Perry, author of "The Moral Economy," just published, is assistant professor of philosophy at Harvard University. He is a graduate of Princeton and received the degrees of M.A. and Ph.D. from Harvard.

Maj.-Gen. A. W. Greely, U.S.A., whose "Hand Book of Alaska" has just been published, installed the system of 3900 miles of telegraph lines, submarine cables and wireless now in operation in Alaska. The wireless section of 107 miles from Nome to St. Michaels being the first successful long distance wireless operated regularly as part of a commercial system.

"The Real Boston," says one of the characters in Robert Grant's "The Chippendales," "is bounded on the north by Harvard College, on the east by the dome of the State House, and the Boston Common, on the south by the Boston Art Museum, and on the west by Mt. Auburn Cemetery, and on the northeast by the Associated Charities, and on the southwest by the Boston Symphony Orchestra."

Dr. Henry Smith Williams's book on "Alcohol," which the Century Company has in press for early issue, has been considerably revised since the appearance of the articles in McClure's Magazine. There has been much matter added, and the book omits the suggestion that the Gothenburg system be tried in America, together with the claim that serious economic disturbances would follow should general prohibition suddenly be made effective.

The Season of Youth.

I fear there's little hope for me—
On age I'll never sup.
It makes no difference where I be,
When spring time first I chance to see
And birds about me trill their glee,
I simply can't grow up!

My soul's so full of verve and snap,
My heart's so filled with joy,
Despite in years I'm quite a chap
In noisy rout I toss my cap
And, spread out flat on nature's lap,
I holler like a boy!

O three times blessed time of spring,
Your praises have been sung
Since birds first flew upon the wing,
Since mortal man learned how to sing,
Because the blessings that you bring,
Keep us for ever young!
—[John Kendrick Bangs, in Harper's Weekly.

Semi-Annual $10 Suit Sale For Men and Young Men

This great Semi-Annual event will be at its very best Tuesday. The sale is young.

You can't go astray. There were over 1600 suits to begin with and the majority of them being worth from $15 to $25—even if you were the last man to attend the sale on the last day you'd secure big value for your money.

The enthusiasm that has marked the first three days of the event is a grand tribute to this buying and selling organization. We've frequently had men remark: "I don't see how it's possible for you to offer such suits for the money."

Selling has been nothing short of phenomenal. All the words that we can say in favor of this event might not influence you, but we guarantee if you come and see the suits you'll be influenced, for we defy competition and say that no such suits have been produced at this price.

TO "LINER" ADVERTISERS.
Dating from June 1, classified advertising in The Times will be charged by the word at the present established rate of 1c per word in the daily issue and 1½c Sunday.

Close calculations, covering a period of several months, develop the fact that the average number of words to the line are a fraction over seven. This basis for charge, therefore, will prevail after June 1.

Cash "want" advertising has always been calculated by the word, and this regulation will not change the manner of handling it.

The present "want" ad. rate has been in effect for many years, though the circulation of the paper, now more than 50,000 daily and 80,000 Sundays, has trebled during this period. No paper in the United States, rate considered, compares with The Times in "want" ad. service.

THE TIMES-MIRROR COMPANY.

The great volume of liners printed in The Sunday Times, numbering regularly over 5000 separate announcements, makes this regulation absolutely necessary in order to get the big Sunday issue out on time.

PERSONAL—TO "LINER" ADVERTISERS: Dating from June 1, classified advertising in The Times will be charged by the word at the present established rate of 1c per word in the daily issue and 1½c Sunday.

Close calculations, covering a period of several months, develop the fact that the average number of words to the line are a fraction over seven. This basis for charge, therefore, will prevail after June 1.

Cash "want" advertising has always been calculated by the word, and this regulation will not change the manner of handling it.

The present "want" ad. rate has been in effect for many years, though the circulation of the paper, now more than 50,000 daily and 80,000 Sundays, has trebled during this period. No paper in the United States, rate considered, compares with The Times in "want" ad. service.

$1000 FORFEIT.

I WILL FORFEIT $1000 CASH IF I CANNOT PROVE TO EVERYONE CALLING AT MY OFFICE THAT I HAVE READ FOR MORE PROMINENT AND WELL-KNOWN PEOPLE THAN ANY OTHER THREE CLAIRVOYANTS IN LOS ANGELES. THIS EVIDENCE, IN THE FORM OF PERSONAL LETTERS OF INDORSEMENT, AUTOGRAPHS, PHOTOS AND HAND PRINTS WITH PERSONAL SIGNATURES ATTACHED, INCLUDING KING EDWARD VII, QUEEN ALEXANDRIA, CAMILLE D'ARVILLE, LILLIAN RUSSELL, GROVER CLEVELAND, MRS. CLEVELAND, PROMINENT STATESMEN, MONARCHS, GOVERNORS AND PROFESSIONAL MEN AND WOMEN FROM VARIOUS PARTS OF THE WORLD, BEING OF A CHARACTER THAT MONEY CANNOT BUY.

LIVE AND LET LIVE IS HIS MOTTO.

PROF. STANLEY IS THE OLDEST CLAIRVOYANT IN EXPERIENCE, THE RICHEST IN KNOWLEDGE AND SKILL, CROWNED WITH YEARS OF UNPARALLELED SUCCESS, HIS ADVICE HAS SAVED AND MADE THOUSANDS HAPPY. IT WILL BENEFIT YOU.

If you contemplate consulting a clairvoyant, several things should be taken into consideration—ability, the honesty of methods, the fairness of dealings, the higher degree of work, the accuracy of each prediction, the common sense used with it, the interest taken in each case, the respect shown to each caller, the fact of secrecy in consultation, the fee charged for services.

If you wish the truth with reliable advice, you will consult him on past, present and future. Bear in mind you will hear the truth. Also remember what has been told you, which too often is not the case.

If there was no genuine there would be no counterfeit. There is honest and dishonest Drs., in fact every profession. A trial will convince the most skeptical that Byron Stanley stands in a position that no just criticism can disturb.

IT IS TO YOUR INTEREST TO CONSULT HIM AND FOR A SMALL FEE LET HIM RELIEVE YOU OF ALL MENTAL ANXIETY AND GUIDE AND DIRECT YOU INTO PLEASANT PATHS OF HAPPINESS AND PROSPERITY.

THERE ARE MANY WHO WOULD SEEK THE PEACE OF MIND A CONSULTATION WITH BYRON STANLEY WOULD GIVE THEM, BUT FOR THEIR FOOLISH MODESTY AND SENSELESS FEAR OF BEING RIDICULED, WHICH IS A GROUNDLESS FEAR.

HIS CLIENTAGE IS LARGE AND EMBRACES PEOPLE IN ALL WALKS OF LIFE, FROM THE RICHEST AND PROUDEST TO THE POOREST AND MOST HUMBLE, SO DON'T DELAY, BUT GO TO HIM TODAY.

REMEMBER THE NAME,
STANLEY.

PERSONAL—
MRS. MASSON,

the noted palmist of London, Eng., may be consulted at 322 S. SPRING ST. (over Owl Drug Store,) by those desiring CAREFUL, CONSCIENTIOUS AND SCIENTIFIC HAND-READINGS FROM ONE OF THE FOREMOST PALMISTS OF THE DAY.

The earnest student and thinker will soon learn in his investigations along psychological lines, that that which pertains to occult phenomena proper can readily be distinguished from crude and oft-exposed SLEIGHT-OF-HAND TRICKS, the most common of which is the telling of the subject's name, age, etc., AFTER HE HIMSELF HAS WRITTEN THAT INFORMATION.

PALMISTRY, HONESTLY PRACTICED, WILL NOT tell you your name, but it WILL give you information of considerably greater value in every-day life.

Your vocation, your present line of work, matters of health and domestic life, financial conditions, success and prosperity, can all be told you through scientific palmistry, WITHOUT A SINGLE QUESTION, WRITTEN OR VERBAL.

MRS. MASSON DOES NOT APPEAL TO IGNORANT SUPERSTITION, BUT TO THE FINEST INTELLIGENCE.

HIGH-CLASS PATRONAGE SOLICITED. (Daily and evenings; Sundays, 9 to 3.) x4

PERSONAL—PUBLIC NOTICE IS HEREby given to employers, attorneys and individuals that for the period of this week and until after the Elks' Carnival I will furnish them the services of either a colored waiting maid, Japanese servant, roustabout for wholesale house, or persons to fill any positions requiring the services of absolutely honest detectives. My detectives are from all walks of life and their evidence is bought by sworn statements. Personal attention given matrimonial investigations, but only facts obtained (no frame ups.) Out-of-town patrons given careful attention. Bank references. NICK HARRIS DETECTIVES, 310 LANKERSHIM BLDG. MAIN 3783.

WANTED — MANY YOUNG MEN FIND life in the navy attractive, with opportunity to save money and get practical training. The navy needs mechanics of all kinds, men experienced in clerical work, in hospital work, as well as seamen. This nation is building a powerful and efficient navy, and enlistment means a definite plan now and a definite future.

There is an incentive to get to the top in the naval service. Ambitious men have every encouragement to improve themselves. A man is assured of continuous employment at good pay, and advancement as he becomes more proficient.

The government prefers to train young men at its own expense, at naval training stations. The recruit is placed on the pay roll the day he enters. Practical instruction, intended to fit a young man to go on board ship in a few months' time and do the work required of him.

The Navy Department doesn't urge young men to enlist, but suggests that they investigate and decide for themselves whether the opportunities are worth considering.

Boys under 18 must furnish written consent of parent or guardian; and under 21, must furnish birth certificate, or affidavit of age signed by parents. EDUCATIONAL—Schools, Colleges, Private Tuition.

THE ROWELL VACATION SCHOOL WAS organized July 5, 1906. It has advanced 143 pupils to higher grades in the public schools. It has prepared a large number from the high schools for advancement in mathematics, English, history, Latin and physics. Others have been prepared for civil service and teachers' examinations. It has enrolled many in this department during the past year, all of whom have passed their examinations successfully. It opens its fourth year at 720 S. Broadway, on July 6, 1909, and continues during vacation of the public schools. It again asks for a continuation of the liberal patronage that it has received in the past. It points to its record as a sufficient guaranty for its work in the future, and respectfully refers the public to the school officers, principals and teachers of Los Angeles county and city for personal references. For additional information, call on the principal. Tuition—Grammar grades, $6 per month. All others, $10 per month. Phone BROADWAY 3605. 5

WEATHER: Clear at 5 p.m.; wind southwesterly; velocity, 9 miles per hour.

The steamer Centralia discharged a partial cargo of lumber today and sailed north to reload for this port. The steamer Marshfield discharged 5000 ties and proceeded with balance of cargo to San Diego.

The steamers Yosemite and J. J. Loggie sailed north today to reload. The Yosemite broke the record of the harbor today for quick discharge, unloading 900,000 feet in 19½ hours with two gears.

The Independent Steamship Company's steamer Hanalei arrived tonight with freight and passengers. She will sail for return to San Francisco tomorrow. The Santa Rosa will call tomorrow on the way from San Diego to San Francisco for feight and passengers.

Capt. Dettmers reports an unusually heavy swell at Needle Rock while the Marshfield was loading. He was delayed three days and had a narrow escape from grounding on the rocks in the breakers. Before the loading was completed the vessel had to put out to sea and wait for the swell to subside. Capt. Dettmers highly praises the first officer for his prompt action in getting the vessel through the breakers.

The boilers of the steamer Marshfield were inspected here today by U. S. Inspector J. K. Bulger of San Francisco. On this account the Marshfield was unable to sail for San Diego as per schedule.

Antique Mexican Pottery.

DESCENDANTS OF THE AZTECS STILL MAKE THE DESIGNS OF THEIR ANCESTORS.

[SPECIALLY CONTRIBUTED TO THE TIMES.]

A LARGE Cuernavaca vase, thirty-two inches high, with inlaid decorations of the American and Mexican flags and the American and Mexican eagles, recently ordered by the Mexican government as a gift to Theodore Roosevelt, draws attention to one of Mexico's oldest industries. The beginning of this industry is lost in the shadows of the past. It may also have been one of the oldest industries of the Aztecs. In excavations among the prehistoric ruins of Mitla, many specimens of this handicraft have been found and it is a remarkable fact that these same designs are reproduced by Mexican potters to this day. The secrets of the art have been handed down through many generations and the skill has come as a heritage from the Aztecs through a long line of ancestors; even the designs have been handed down and are still worked out.

Pottery is manufactured in a great many of the small villages and towns throughout the republic, but the industry centers in the cities of Guadalajara, Cuernavaca, Puebla and Oaxaca where the best known of this ware is manufactured. The pottery manufactured in each of these cities possesses distinctive types and characteristics, and the different styles are known and recognized by the name of the city where it is made.

In Guadalajara each family of workers are specialists in their line of work, only one form and one design being produced in a family. There are a variety of forms and many designs, but only one design in one family. The molder of flower pots cannot mold water bottles and the potter who produces water bottles is unable to model figures. The father teaches his son to mold the form and execute the design he has worked on all his life; a design that his father taught him to make, and the boy keeps on molding that form, and he will, in turn, hand it down to his son. When the family dies out that particular design becomes extinct. The "Montezuma" jar, a special form of vessel very rare and highly prized, was lost, it is said, because the Indian, who received the design from his father, died, leaving no heirs. Frequent attempts have been made to have one potter produce the design of another, but always without success.

Guadalajara pottery, which is probably more wildely known than that of any other Mexican manufacture, is produced in the little Indian village of San Pedro, five or six miles from the city proper. Here the potters are true descendants of the Aztecs, from whom has been handed down through generation after generation the knowledge of working this peculiar class of ware called by them "Zapotecas." Some of the original forms and designs in vogue at the time of the conquest are preserved in the Guadalajara pottery of today.

Cuernavaca pottery, which is characterized by inlaid decorations of broken china and raised figures of reptiles and insects, is manufactured in the village of San Antone, just outside the city of Cuernavaca. Practically every one of the adobe houses is a pottery and every citizen is a potter, the work being carried on as a home industry. In Puebla the product is mostly tiles which are used on the domes of churches, the facades of residences and on walls and floors, and have made Puebla a city of tiles; while in Oaxaca the potters produce a green glazed ware that includes articles for table and kitchen.

In the manufacture of Mexican pottery, the natives cling to their primitive implements, refusing to substitute even the simplest of modern tools, and there exists a natural antipathy toward progressive usages which almost prohibits the introduction of new methods. Crude tin knives, or merely old pieces of tin are used in cutting the clay and a piece of wire or thread of fiber is used for trimming edges.

The clay used by the Cuernavaca potters is prepared by first thoroughly drying it in the sun, after which it is pulverized under a wooden maul or mallet, and then it is passed through the finest meshed brass-wire cloth. This wire cloth is one of the few innovations that have met with favor. A piece of cotton shirting or a handkerchief was formerly used in bolting the powdered clay. The pulverized clay is mixed with water to form a fine slime which is passed through a fine sieve. The dry clay is mixed with this slime and kneaded to the right consistency, when it is ready to put on the mold.

The mold, which is of the required size for the body of the article to be made, is placed on the upper portion of an old style potter's wheel. After it has been covered with clay to the proper thickness, it is patted and shaped with a wooden paddle and with the hands. The model is turned about before the potter by scraping the bare toes on the lower portion of the wheel. During the revolutions of the wheel the potter continues to smooth the clay with a narrow strip of wet cloth until the desired surface is secured. Handles, spouts and legs are fashioned by hand, without molds, and are attached to the body of the article by means of the clay slime and prepared clay.

The inlaid work, which is a characteristic peculiar to the Cuernavaca pottery, is a slow and primitive process. The potter first draws the design to be used upon thin paper, which he places on the damp clay, tracing over it with a sharp stick. By pressing bits of broken china into the clay, he slowly works out the design. The article is then smoothed with a wet cloth and placed in the drying-room.

The lizard so frequently employed in the molded decorations of this particular pottery is probably used as a facsimile of the monster lizard, nearly nine feet long, which is carved on the rocks, supposedly by the Aztecs, in the village of San Antone. The mold for the formation of the lizard, however, is made in plaster of Paris from live animals. So also are the molds for reptiles and insects. These raised decorations are formed by carefully pressing the clay in the plaster mold and as carefully removing it. The edges of the model are trimmed with a thread of fiber, one end of which is held in the mouth and the other in the hand. The figure is placed in the desired position on the article to be decorated and cemented on with the clay slime. Molds for stamping other kinds of decorations upon the vase are carved from hard wood made by hand.

The pottery is carefully shielded from the sun and very closely watched while drying, for it is in this process that the principal loss to the manufacturer occurs. If the raised decorations should crack before the article is completely dry, they can be replaced, thus saving the article. To equalize the process of drying as much as possible all slender, delicate portions, such as handles and legs, are wrapped in cloth. When the pottery is thoroughly dry, it is polished by rubbing with rough sacking and finally with a smooth cloth, after which it is placed in the sun to get warm before painting. The color, the only one used in painting Cuernavaca pottery, is yellow, similar to yellow ocher. It is a clay taken from the neighboring mountains, and is prepared by mixing with water.

In firing the pottery the Cuernavaca Indians also cling to the primitive method, refusing to use a modern, permanent kiln. The kiln is built each time there is pottery to be burned. The fuel is laid around the outer edges of a number of jars placed on an open space of ground, as closely together as possible. These are covered by flat pieces of pottery that have been previously burned, making a platform about a foot and a half high. The pottery to be fired is piled upon this platform and the whole is then completely covered with many round, flat slabs of stone. The fuel is then lighted and when well ablaze green grass or wet hay is thrown over the pile. After about two hours of burning the red hot kiln is opened. Each article is lifted out with an iron rod and allowed to cool in the air. During the process of firing, the portions of the pottery painted with the yellow clay turns to a dark terra cotta while the unpainted portions change from a dark gray to a light terra cotta.

Two kinds of clay are used in the manufacture of Guadalajara pottery. One is a black clay of vegetable origin, found in veins six or eight feet below the general level of the ground, while the other is a white subsoil clay which covers large areas. For use, the two clays are mixed together. The white clay is thoroughly dried, pulverized and bolted and is then mixed with the black clay, which has been dissolved in water and worked into a sticky mass. The compound clay is then kneaded until in proper shape to be worked. For coarse ware, such as flower pots and garden jars, fine sand is added to the clay mixture.

The Guadalajara potters never use a potter's wheel, but form the large pieces by walking around and around a mass of clay placed upon a board, using a piece of hogskin, well soaked in water, for forming and smoothing the article. The smaller articles are made in molds.

Unlike the Cuernavaca potters, the Guadalajara workers use a permanent kiln or oven. These are of cylindrical form, with a hearth and no chimney and are made especially for this purpose. Colors are obtained by burning with certain kinds of fuel in connection with mineral paints. Firing with a grass known as "tepopote" produces red colored pottery, and a grayish white color is produced by burning with tamarisk. The mineral colors used are manganese for black, kaolin for white, and special kinds of clay for red and yellow. In coloring, the article is first painted and then burned, painted while still warm and again subjected to the flames of dry grass which burns with much smoke. The bright greens and blues are not fired after painting and are, therefore, not permanent. They are obtained from pigments mixed with gum and will in time wear off.

THE UN-AMERICAN CHARACTER OF THE BOYCOTT AROUSES THE IRE OF JUDGE GRAY.

THE boycott has seldom received a more severe castigation than was pronounced by Judge Gray of Delaware a few days ago at Scranton, Pa., where he was sitting as chairman of the arbitration board that was seeking to prevent a strike of streetcar men. The attorneys for the company were offering in evidence the statements of grocers that the prices of foodstuffs had not increased in the last three years, and the statements did not bear any signatures. Judge Gray told the attorneys for the company to get the signatures of the firms. He was told that they would not give them because they were afraid.

"Afraid of what?" demanded Judge Gray.

"Afraid of the boycott," replied the attorneys.

"The boycott" Judge Gray said. "I thought that cowardly practice had gone out long ago. It is now seven years since there was any of it around here, and I don't believe it exists here now. It is cowardly, un-American and utterly indefensible. No man dare stand up and say he could defend it. At least he could not stand up and face me and defend it.

"If that merchant is afraid to sign his name to these figures he will say so, and then we will proclaim it through the press throughout the country, to the discredit of the system and the labor unions. I am very much in favor of labor unions, but nothing has acted so much to the discredit of unionism as that miserably, cowardly, un-American system of boycotting. The American people will never submit to it. I will never submit to it. I would die in my tracks first."

The boycott has been the chief lever of the labor unions to compel employers and business firms to recognize the demands of unionism. "If you don't support us we will spoil your business" has been the constant slogan of the unionites. If business men throughout the country would imbibe the spirit of Judge Gray, and when they are threatened with a boycott advise the unions to "Go to," this un-American practice would soon lose its influence, and unionism would at the same time lose its prestige. In fact, strikes would be placed on their proper basis. If strikers do not care to work for any firm or corporation they have the right to quit. Their employers have just the same right to employ others to fill their voluntarily vacated places. The boycott is intended to take away this right of employers and to prevent aid or sympathy being extended to them. It has been pronounced illegal by the courts, and Judge Gray goes one step farther and denounces as cowards business men who will allow themselves to be intimidated by such threats.

Open Shop Advance.

The American Sheet and Tinplate Company has decided that after July 1 all the mills of the company will be operated on the open shop plan. The reason for this is set forth by Judge Gary, chairman of the United States Steel Corporation, in the following statement:

"Most of the mills of the American Sheet Tin Plate Company have for some years been operated as 'open shops.' The others were run as union mills, and with these the wage scale has been signed on July 1 of each year. The management of the American Sheet Tin Plate Company has discovered it has been discriminated against and in other ways unfairly treated by the Amalgamated Association. The management also discovered beyond question that a very decided majority of the men prefer to have all the mills operated as open shops.

"Under these conditions it has become clear that it is for the best interests of the company and the operators to conform to the wishes of the majority. As a result the company posted notices, accordingly, and also posted the wage scale effective on and after July 1, which in all essential respects is unchanged. There is no dispute regarding wages. It is clear that the employés have appreciated the attitude of the company in its maintenance of the high level of wages during the period of great business depression."

Like everything that is not in line with the demands of unionism, this statement is contradicted by President McArdle of the Amalgamated Association, who says this action is a surprise, and that the association has always treated the company without discrimination. Judge Gary says there will be no essential change in wages, but Unionite McArdle declares all the workmen in the heretofore union shops will suffer a reduction, and he proposes that a meeting shall be held to consider the matter.

Despite McArdle, it is safe to predict that there will be no labor disturbance over the matter. Judge Gary makes no public statements on labor questions that are not sensible of proof, and the success of the United States Steel Corporation in maintaining open shop conditions is good proof in advance that the Tin Plate company can do the same thing. The American Sheet and Tin Plate Company is the last of the subsidiary companies of the United States Steel Corporation to deal with labor unions. The company operates 252 mills, which means that 15,120 men are employed. Of the 202 mills now in operation 131 are operated by union men and seventy-one by non-union men.

Open Shop for Hatters.

The long-drawn-out hatters' strike at Danbury, Conn., has resulted in the manufacturers announcing their intention of opening their factories on the open shop plan. The business of the town has suffered severely as a result of the closing of the factories, but the unions have been able to bring such pressure on the storekeepers and others that they have urged the hat manufacturers to yield to the union demands. From time to time the clergymen of the city have endeavored to arrange a compromise, but without success. Meantime the strikers have suffered severely from their loss of wages, as the help they have received from union funds and other contributions has been very insignificant.

In announcing the opening of the factories the manufacturers say the new conditions will establish equity between employer and employed, assuring fair consideration of the rights and claims of each; also that the open shop conditions will secure permanently to the employés every benefit which could be gained by them temporarily in any other way.

The most important feature of the announcement is the statement that open shop conditions will enable these Danbury manufacturers to gain for the benefit of their employés, their own townsmen and themselves a larger share in that business which has been rapidly taken away from Danbury under recent conditions of crippled competition with factories of other towns.

In other words, under the closed shop conditions there has been less work done in Danbury, and a less number of persons given employment, than if open shop conditions had prevailed. These conditions will undoubtedly be found true in every other closed shop community.

Result of Some Strikes.

As a rule, the larger strikes of the past few years have resulted disadvantageously to unionism. Going back to the molders' strike at Utica, N. Y., in March, 1904, where 200 workmen were involved, the foundries established new and independent crews, with the result that the plants have not only been turning out more work at less cost than ever before, and the shops have been absolutely free from labor troubles. The approximate cost to the union was $292,500.

Following the Utica strike was the Worcester, Mass., molders' strike in June, 1904, caused by the removal of union restrictions. Three shops were affected, employing 119 men. Of the three shops, one was reorganized under new management, while the other two, the largest in the city are strictly non-union, and have ever since pursued the policy of educating new men. The cost to the union was $274,400.

The molders' strike at Racine, Wis., in January, 1905, on account of the removal of union restrictions, put ninety men on the benefit list. The result was a loss to the union of $116,250, and their cause—for open shops were established.

Probably the most important contest ever carried on between the Molders' Union and employers was that which began in Milwaukee and South Milwaukee on May 1, 1906. At this time 1340 men struck for signed agreements conceding unionized shops. The price they paid for this disturbance was $1,064,750. Twenty-two shops are now absolutely non-union. This was the largest and hardest-fought strike for years.

Of fifteen other strikes instituted at the same time as that in Milwaukee, fourteen being caused by a desire to obtain union recognition, not one succeeded in securing that demand. These strikes involved, in round numbers, 2500 men and cost the union interests practically $1,000,000.

Violence by Strikers.

The strike of the bakers of the East Side of New York has been continuously accompanied by violence. The complete cessation of work in the bakeries would result in suffering untold, and as a consequence the bakers have resorted to various methods to keep their establishments in operation. The strikers have invaded the shops and beaten the proprietors and employés in the most brutal manner, knives being used in some cases. One young woman, who was delivering bread for her father, was set upon in the street, abused, and her bread thrown into the dirt. Drivers of non-union bread wagons have been assaulted and their loaves of bread tumbled into the street. Many arrests have been made.

Under the circumstances the bakers when approached by the State Board of Arbitration have replied that the dispute, which is the open versus the closed shop, is not arbitrable.

"Big Six" Men Lose.

The appellate division of the Supreme Court of New York has handed down a decision in the case of the Typothetae against various members of Typographical Union, No. 6, better known as "Big Six." On the report of Adam Wiener, referee, Justice Bischoff of the Supreme Court found the men guilty of contempt of court in the violation of an injunction obtained by the Typothetae.

Patrick McCormick, former president of the union, was fined $250 and sentenced to twenty days' imprisonment. The sentences on the others were: George W. Jackson, an organizer of the union, fined $250, and twenty days; Vincent J. Costello, former organizer, $250, and twenty days; William J. S. Anderson and Thomas Bennett, fines of $100 each, but no imprisonment. Jackson was killed in the subway several months ago.

From these sentences the union men appealed to the appellate division, which has decided against them, and affirmed the order of the lower court.

BUSY ARMY.

BIG FORCE IN HEALTH FIGHT.

Surgeon-General at Head of Thirteen Hundred.

Possibilities of Preventing Some Diseases.

National Peril Is Insanity, Says Dr. Wyman.

BY JAMES B. MORROW.

WASHINGTON, June 28.—Many enormous guns, concealed within green and unsuspected slopes, among groves of peaceful forest trees, or in the flat sands of dreary coasts, frown out upon the sea. They are to drive back or destroy all visible foes who may come over the waters in armed ships.

Figuratively, and yet literally, in a sense, many little microscopes, toy rifles, seemingly inverted in mimic warfare with the sky, also frown out upon the sea. They are to discover, and thus to defeat, the invisible foes which, in like manner, may come over the waters, but in all sorts of ships.

So the shores, dropping far down the Atlantic and the Pacific and curving into the Gulf of Mexico, are vigilantly guarded by artillerymen and doctors. Cities and towns, in their physical structure, are safe. Property has always been bravely defended. Even the herdmen of Abram, rich in cattle and gold, and of Lot, opulent in flocks and tents, fought—with clubs and stones, no doubt—over the pastures of Canaan.

Modern philosophy and practice value man as highly—ethically, at any rate—as sheep, oxen, asses, or camels. The artillerymen have had ready and cheerful millions to work with. Their lives have gone into books and their photographs into newspapers. Mars in America has held his own with mythology and history. In the interview I am about to write, my object shall be to show what the obscure and unromantic government doctor is doing to prolong and protect human life in the United States—to beat the germs as they come swarming in from Europe, Asia, and the islands and countries of the South Atlantic.

LITTLE ARMY OF DEFENSE.

The little army of defense against the terrifying and deadly approach of fever, cholera, and the plague is commanded by Walter Wyman, M.D., who is officially known as Surgeon-General of the Public Health and the Marine Hospital Service. He calls a messenger. "Give my compliments to Dr. Brown," he says, "and tell him I want to see him at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning." Wellington's tone and manner could not have been more punctilious or martial. The atmosphere of the office in which we talk is full of battle; the man himself is as formal, precise, and final as a general or an admiral.

Two lines of resistance have been established against the alien microbe. Vessels bearing immigrants from China, Japan, India, Europe, Central and South America, and the West Indies must carry bills of health signed by officers of the United States. There are quarantine doctors at every port of entry in this country. Throughout the fruit season in the islands to the south, in Mexico, and South America, when vessels must hurry to market with their cargoes, special inspectors, as an additional precaution, watch for cholera and yellow fever.

Diseases getting past both lines of defense, Gen. Wyman leads the assault in person. Subordinates operate under his direction in the Philippines, Hawaii, and Porto Rico. He has 450 medical men on his staff and 1740 persons are within the limits of his administration. Twenty-two marine hospitals and 120 relief stations, like a chain of forts, are strung along rivers, lakes and oceans. At the hygienic laboratory in this city sixty doctors, specialists, and clerks are constantly engaged in investigating diseases and matters relating to the public health. The bombardment of Boston, New York or Philadelphia would cause a financial panic. So would a well-developed epidemic of cholera or yellow fever. There is good reason, consequently, for calling him Gen. Wyman.

PROGRESS OF SANITARY SCIENCE.

"Is it likely," I asked, "that this country will ever suffer again from contagious or infectious diseases which will destroy thousands of human lives?"

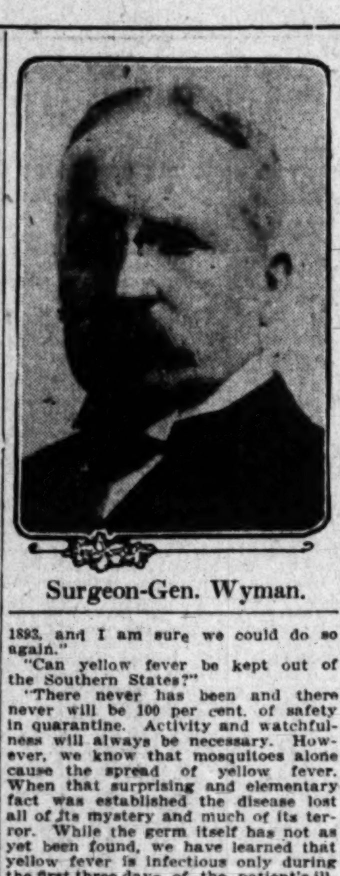
"It would be unsafe and unwise to boast," Gen. Wyman answered, "but sanitary and medical science has made so many discoveries that a devastating epidemic is hardly probable. Our knowledge concerning diseases has increased tremendously within recent years. We know, for instance, that cholera is a water-borne infection, and we have seen and studied the organism which causes it. If a ship with cholera were to come to New York or San Francisco, we should remove the sick to the hospitals, the other passengers to detention barracks, disinfect the ship, and empty all the pipes and tanks containing drinking water. The germs could not be taken ashore, you see, an cholera would soon be cleared out on that particular vessel."

"You had a battle with the disease sixteen years ago?" I said.

In the past cholera usually originated in Asia. The following year it would appear in European Turkey. It would reach the western part of Europe the next year, and thence, in another twelve months, would be brought to the United States or Canada. It was spread by drinking water, just as yellow fever and malaria are spread by mosquitoes. There was cholera in Hamburg, the chief seaport of Germany, in 1892. The great exposition in Chicago was to be held the next summer. We were not only threatened with a dreadful disease, but with the loss of many millions of dollars.

NEW QUARANTINE MEASURE.

"The situation was so grave that President Harrison came to Washington from his summer home to consult with the Secretary of the Treasury and the Attorney-General. We had no national quarantine law worthy of the name at that time. I wrote an order, and President Harrison signed it, holding ships bringing immigrants from infected regions in quarantine for a period of twenty days. The order stopped travel between Hamburg and the United States, because a wait of twenty days at anchor made the transportation of immigrants unprofitable as a business. A few vessels came and were held in the bay of New York. My plan may have looked like a return of the ancient Venetian regulation, which required that plague ships be kept at anchor, with no help from on shore, until the disease had run its course. However, we had the means of caring for the sick, as well as the vessel, if contagion appeared. The next year Congress enacted a comprehensive law, which, although recognizing the rights of States, made the quarantine against disease a matter of national control. We escaped the cholera in 1893, and I am sure we could do so again."



Surgeon-Gen. Wyman.

"Can yellow fever be kept out of the Southern States?"

"There never has been and there never will be 100 per cent. of safety in quarantine. Activity and watchfulness will always be necessary. However, we know that mosquitoes alone cause the spread of yellow fever. When that surprising and elementary fact was established the disease lost all of its mystery and much of its terror. While the germ itself has not as yet been found, we have learned that yellow fever is infectious only during the first three days of the patient's illness. If the patient is bitten by a mosquito during that period the mosquito is in condition twelve days afterward to bite and infect some one else.

KEEP OUT THE MOSQUITO.

"Now, the best physician in the world," Gen. Wyman continued, "may not know at first that he has a case of yellow fever on his hands. When he learns the truth the time of infection has passed. Hence it has always been our endeavor to lay stress upon the importance of placing mosquito netting around all patients in the yellow fever zone just as soon as any temperature develops. With our exact and abundant knowledge concerning yellow fever it is reasonable to believe that it will never again become epidemic in this country. Screens and sanitation will stop it, and keep it localized in a single community. Nevertheless, persons living in those parts of the country subject to yellow fever should destroy, and prevent the breeding of mosquitoes, a precaution which is entirely practicable."

"If malaria is spread among human beings by mosquitoes cannot malarial diseases be absolutely prevented?" I asked.

"Certainly. All forms of malaria poison are carried from one person to another by the mosquito known as the anopheles, which is found in many localities throughout the United States. Where and how malaria organisms originated we do not know, any more than we know the beginning of the horse, sheep, or cow. Destroy the mosquitoes, the vehicles by which malaria is spread, and ague and chills and fever due to malaria will disappear.

WAR ON INSECTS.

"Sanitation in the future will be largely a war on insects. Rats have the bubonic plague and fleas from them convey the disease to human beings. Mosquitoes spread yellow fever and malaria. Flies with their feet and legs, a purely mechanical process, carry typhoid fever directly to one's kitchen or dining-room. Sanitation, therefore, will undertake to exterminate those particular insects which are dangerous to human life. To reach the flea, however, war must be made on the rat.

"There are regions in this country," Gen. Wyman went on to say, "with soil of remarkable productiveness, but sparsely settled, because the people are afraid of the malarial fevers which prevail there and which were formerly attributed to the vapors arising from the earth. In the coming battle with the mosquito, swamps will be drained and immense tracts of land, worth hundreds of millions of dollars, will cease to be the habitat of lizards, turtles, and snakes, and be transformed into fertile farms. Any man, whether he lives in the city or country, can rid his premises of mosquitoes if he will keep everything about his house and yard dry. But he must be watchful. Even the tiny dent in an old tin can or in the spouting on the roof is a large enough receptacle for the breeding of a cloud of those annoying and pestiferous insects."

TYPHOID SPREAD BY CONTACT.

"What is your theory concerning the prevalence of typhoid fever?"

"That is a big question—a national question, as a matter of fact. It was believed that typhoid fever was a water-borne disease, and so it is. But I now think it is spread more largely by contact than we have heretofore supposed. Dr. Victor C. Vaughan of Michigan, one of the commissioners to investigate typhoid fever at the camps of our soldiers during the war with Spain, said he had believed and taught that 95 per cent. of the disease was transmitted by drinking water. During his investigation, however, he concluded that typhoid fever was principally spread by personal contact.

"The personal contact theory doesn't mean that typhoid is infectious, like smallpox; that everything in the room of the patient is dangerous, or that the germ can be inhaled, but that the bedding is very likely to contain the bacilli, through the several operations of nature, and thus get on the hands of nurses and visitors, or be transmitted by the hands of the patient himself. Flies from the sick room or the house may easily take the bacilli elsewhere in the neighborhood.

"There has been more or less typhoid fever in Washington, and its continued prevalence has been quite a puzzle. About four years ago the District Commissioners requested the public health service to join with the Health Officer in an endeavor to solve the problem. We appointed a board of experts, and so far have had three reports. It was found that the continued prevalence of typhoid fever could not be charged to the water supply. There was some contamination, however, in the milk sold from certain dairies. In one peculiar instance the customers of a single dairy came down with the disease in unusual numbers. We learned that the dairy was owned by a woman, and that she had much to do with handling the milk. There had been no recent cases of typhoid fever in her family, and we were greatly perplexed until she told us she had suffered from an attack of the disease several years ago. Well, a microscopic examination showed that she was a 'bacillus carrier;' that while she had recovered her health and strength, she still harbored and distributed the typhoid germs.

CARRY GERMS ABOUT.

"There was a medically famous case of the same kind in New York in the person of 'Typhoid Mary,' a cook, who took disease and death with her wherever she worked. We now more thoroughly appreciate that there are persons who carry the germs of typhoid long after they have left their beds and gone about their usual business or employment. Such persons, if they live in villages or on farms, cause soil pollution, and the drainage from contaminated land goes into wells or streams and may infect the water supply of a locality or city.

"The house fly is undoubtedly an agency in the spread of typhoid fever. People do not realize that flies are a constant menace to the life and health of every household. They are born in manure heaps, and that is the reason so many of them are always seen around the isolated home of the average farmer. City flies are bred under the same loathsome conditions. Female flies deposit their larva in manure heaps or in piles of decaying garbage. In cities garbage is not permitted to accumulate, consequently the manure heap becomes a matter for close municipal supervision. Screens for doors and windows would keep flies out of houses, but laws should provide that manure from stables be hauled away promptly or kept in tight bins or freely treated with lime.

"And while the people are fighting flies," Gen. Wyman said, "they should not overlook the rats. Not only are immense quantities of grain and other property destroyed by rats, but sixteen years ago, lurking in the dark places of ships, they carried the bubonic plague out of China until it spread to every continent and infected fifty-two countries, including the United States. We trapped and poisoned hundreds of thousands of rats along the Pacific Coast and proved by laboratory tests that a large number of them had the plague."

GETTING ACQUAINTED WITH IT.

"Why has appendicitis become such a common disease?"

"It hasn't become a more common disease than it always has been. It is recognized now, you understand, under its proper name and not by another. A simple case of appendicitis today would have been diagnosed as something else twenty years ago."

"Isn't modern life harmful to human nerves?"

"Notoriously so," Gen. Wyman answered. "Insanity is increasing. I know of but one large city where, according to the statistics, it is decreasing. That city is Berlin, in which there is a system of insurance against illness and men are watched and taken to hospitals before they have a chance to break down. A national association for mental hygiene has been recently formed, and Henry Phipps, the Pittsburgh multi-millionaire, has contributed money for an inquiry into the subject by Johns Hopkins University. The increase of insanity in the United States makes it a vital national question."

"Specially, what is the greatest cause of disease?"

"Enfeebled health, which makes it easy for microbic organisms to overcome the customary defenses of nature. We know that persons may have the virulent diplococci of pneumonia in their respiratory tracts, but escape illness through the strength of their cells in keeping the microbe from becoming active. It is the same, to a degree, with the bacilli which cause diphtheria. During an epidemic many may be walking around who have cholera microbes in their intestinal canals. Other men live and work with the bacilli of consumption in their lungs. If such persons as I have mentioned become debilitated, or eat tainted food, or live in insanity places, they succumb. Within each human being there is an eternal struggle between the germs of disease and his cells."

"If a man were to ask how he could keep in sound health, what would you say to him?"

"I would tell him to eat plenty of good food, wear seasonable clothing, sleep where there is pure, fresh air, get as much sunshine as possible, keep his surroundings sanitary, exercise moderately, maintain a cheerful state of mind, and avoid worry."

HELPING THE CONSUMPTIVES.

"Will you tell me about the government sanatorium for consumptives in New Mexico?"

"I thought a hospital should be provided for men on our ocean, lake, and river vessels who had tuberculosis, not only as a place for medical attention, but for quarantine. The outdoor treatment is good anywhere, but the climate in some regions is much better than in other regions. We were given Fort Stanton, an abandoned military reservation in New Mexico, which is high and dry, and as remote from a body of water as any spot in the country. We patched up the buildings of the post and now we have a good hospital, 300 men living in tents, and a number of novelties, including a brass band. When a sailor is ill with consumption we send him to New Mexico, and he travels under sanitary regulations, which provide, among other preventive measures, that he carry a drinking cup of his own. Cases have been cured. Two men, one in Chicago and one in Boston, died from other causes after leaving the tuberculosis hospital. Our surgeons found that their lungs had entirely healed. Still other cases have been arrested. When a cure is impossible, the patient is cared for until he dies."

"Have efforts ever been made to establish a hospital for inebriates?"

"No. It is an open question whether drunkenness is a bad habit or a disease. Anyway, if inebriates are to be doctored, it is a matter for the States and not for the general government."

GERMANS BUILD SHIPS.

Firm in Fatherland to Start Line Touching at Pacific Coast Points.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

VICTORIA (B. C.) July 3.—With 102 saloon passengers and a rich cargo including 1261 bales of silk valued at over $600,000, the steamer Empress of Japan, arrived this afternoon from the Orient.

News was brought by the steamer that liners are to be built by Germans for the projected Chinese trans-Pacific and coastwise shipping line which is to run to San Francisco, and not to Puget Sound, according to advices received by local Chinese.

They have been informed that the Chinese Board of Posts and Communications has proposed to float a large company to start regular steamer service on the rivers of China, and along the Chinese coast, and to run steamers to Singapore, Java, Australia, San Francisco, Yakahoma and Bombay. The capital is to be contributed by the government and merchants equally, and the concern will be under their joint management.

An order is to be given to a German firm for ten steamers.

STERN MEASURES TO COMBAT TUBERCULOSIS IN ENGLAND.

John Burns Will Compel Poor Consumptives to Submit to Compulsory Isolation Without Waiting to Obtain Further Power from Parliament—Policy of the Government by Administrative Order.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

LONDON, June 18.—Within less than a generation tuberculosis—that terrible scourge, which claims more victims every year than a whole European war—will be a thing of the past in England. The government has taken up a campaign against it which promises to make it before long almost as rare as smallpox or typhus fever.

The English St. George, who has sallied forth to slay this modern dragon is John Burns, the ex-dock laborer, who is now a Cabinet Minister and a friend of the King. He is seeking fresh legislation, but he is not waiting for that. He has just foreshadowed a policy by which he proposes with the weapons ready to his hand to remove the most dangerous source of infection—the pauper consumptive—from the possibility of being a source of contagion to his family and neighbors. Public opinion is not ripe yet in England for the compulsory isolation of consumptives in the way that persons who are stricken with smallpox are now dealt with, although medical opinion is practically unanimous that such treatment is necessary before the disease can be wholly eradicated, but John Burns, the practical man, has devised a means by which this end can be achieved without outraging that false but strong sentiment which regards isolation as an invasion of the liberty of the individual. He is now preparing to put in practice, by administrative order, a rule by which 90 per cent. of the poor consumptives of the country will be compelled to enter the public infirmaries, where, of course, they will be effectively isolated, will have every possible chance of recovery, and will no longer be a danger to their fellows.

Burns's plan is based on the fact that 90 per cent. of the poor consumptives in England, at one stage or another of their disease, are compelled to seek what is known as "out relief" from the poor law authorities. "Out relief" consists of a weekly dole of money from the public funds, which is given to persons who are not absolutely destitute, and who are desirous of keeping out of the workhouse. It is good in most cases because it enables many a family to tide over bad times without the radical breaking up which must always result from selling up the few sticks of furniture they possess and entering the poorhouse. It also saves many deserving persons from the workhouse stigma.

But in the case of consumptives, it enables the patient to make himself a center of infection. Burns's first step, therefore, has been to issue an order as President of the local government board making tuberculosis a notifiable disease. This means that every medical man who comes across a case of consumption in his practice must notify the name and address and certain other particulars concerning the patient to the representative of the local government board in his district. These names will then be furnished to the poor law authorities, and when a person whose name is scheduled applies for out relief a careful investigation of his circumstances will be made. If it is found that he is able to have a separate room at home and observe certain other sanitary precautions out relief will be granted, but if this is not so—and there are very few cases where the observance of these conditions will be possible—the grant of relief will be refused. The immediate result will be that the poor consumptive will be compelled to seek admission to the workhouse, and once there he will be removed to an up-to-date sanatorium, where he will receive the best possible treatment. In this eminently practical way has John Burns solved the problem of overcoming a public prejudice which is dangerous to the public health.

No public announcement of this plan has been made, and as a matter of fact no public announcement is intended. It is not desired that there shall be a public discussion of the new policy in England, because there are sure to be a number of people who will denounce it as an example of the growth in this country of continental bureaucracy. The nearest that Burns has come to making public what he intends to do, was an announcement that he made a few days ago in a speech at the opening of the tuberculosis exhibition in the East End of London.

"I trust soon," he said, "to follow up the notification of tuberculosis order by a circular to poor-law authorities on the conditions under which poor-law relief should be given to outdoor consumptive paupers, suggesting methods of self-treatment, removal, perhaps, to another place, advice and guidance, and extended help in the direction of cure and prevention."

In the field of legislation also Burns is active in the fight against the white plague. He has just introduced in Parliament a bill to safeguard and purify the milk supply of the country. German and American researches have proved beyond doubt that one of the chief sources of tuberculosis in children is milk from diseased cows, and it has been ascertained that nearly a third of the milch cows in England are suffering from tuberculosis in one form or another. Burns's bill provides for the slaughter of these diseased cows and the payment of compensation to the farmers on a scale graded in proportion to the degree to which the disease has advanced. Thus a badly diseased cow will not be paid for at all, but in the case of one in which the disease is only in its early stages the farmer will receive nearly her full value. Heavy penalties are provided for farmers and dealers who sell milk from cows suffering from tuberculosis unless it is efficiently sterilized, better still, pasteurized. The bill has the approval of all parties in the House of Commons and the only thing that can prevent its passage is the pressure of business in relation to new taxation. If it does not pass this year it is certain to become a law at the next session of Parliament, whatever party is in power.

"LEPER" SHIPPED NORTH.

Is Sent from Washington to Hospital in New York, Locked in Baggage Car.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

WASHINGTON, July 3.—John R. Early, the alleged leper who had been quarantined in a camp near this city since last August, left Washington at 10:45 o'clock tonight, locked in a baggage car attached to the regular Pennsylvania Railroad train. Early will enter the skin and cancer hospital of New York for treatment under Dr. L. Duncan Bulkley.

Early's departure was planned with much secrecy. His attorneys made a long fight and finally succeeded tonight in obtaining from Health Office Woodward the necessary papers for the man's release. Immediately arrangements were made for his transfer from the obscure shanty in which he was isolated to the Union Station. Early was locked in the baggage car with T. C. Seavy, a Salvation Army worker, who was deputized as a guard.

Upon his arrival at New York, Early will be met by Dr. Bulkley and taken to the hospital. Dr. Bulkley made three separate examinations of cultures taken from Early's body and declared the man to be free of leprosy, although Dr. Ehlers, a leper expert of Copenhagen, after examining Early, was equally positive the man was in the incipient stages of leprosy and virtually incurable.

The health authorities withheld their consent for Early's removal until they were convinced that he would receive good treatment and stipulated that they reserved the right of taking cultures from Early's body in the event of a further controversy over their action in detaining him.

Early is now receiving a pension of $72 a month by reason of services as a soldier in the Philippines, but Commissioner Warner declared this would be reduced to a nominal sum if Early should be removed from the District of Columbia.

HAZEN HYDE IN COURT.

Appears to Answer Charge of Running Down Taxicab and Speeding Away After Accident.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

PARIS, July 3.—James Hazen Hyde, of New York, the former vice-president of the Equitable Life Assurance Society, appeared in court today in appeal proceedings against his conviction by default on the charge of running down a taxicab with his automobile, and ordering his chauffeur to speed away after the accident.

Mr. Hyde declared he did not take flight, but on the contrary left his machine and procured the number of the car with which he had collided. This testimony was corroborated by two passengers who were with Mr. Hyde at the time. The court reserved decision.

The sentence imposed on Mr. Hyde on May 2 was one month's imprisonment and a fine of $100. His chauffeur also was sentenced to a month's imprisonment and fined $30.

SALT LAKE CITY, July 3.—Three miners were killed and six others were seriously injured in a powder explosion late this afternoon at Toplitz, Utah.

The dead are Pat Campbell, P. B. Bowman and Matt Regan.

The men were blown to atoms by the explosion of 750 kegs of black powder.

The men were working in a 35-foot tunnel, and had just completed tamping the charge.

The powder was connected with two wires which were to have been connected later with a battery on a hill quite a distance away.

TEN CENTS ON HOLIDAYS.

NEW YORK, July 3.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The Public Commission Service today decided the first 10-cent Coney Island fare case, that of the Coney Island and Brooklyn Railroad Company, holding that the company is justified in charging a 10-cent fare on Saturdays, Sundays and holidays, but has not justification for a charge of 10 cents on other days.

The decision does not cover all the Coney Island routes, but only the smaller lines, principally the Smith-street line. The Coney Island and Brooklyn company is not ordered to reduce its fares to 5 cents on week days, but the intimation is plainly given that it ought to do so, and if it does not the commission may basis for action to cause it to be

Distributing Immigrant Labo

Secretary Nagel of the Depar of Commerce and Labor sum disposes of the recommendatio Commissioner-General Keefe of Bureau of Immigration to redu new division of information for grants to a state of masterly ina at the demand of organized labor. Keefe seems like too intellige capable a man to make such a mendation, but before he was ap ed to office he was a labor-union and had long been at the head of longshoreman's organization, wh was wont to display intelligence, eration and good judgment; was no doubt subjected to a good of pressure from labor leaders mpers type, who are alway ing to keep down the efficienc labor.

The purpose of the informati vision of the Immigration Bur to facilitate the distribution of arrived laborers to places where labor is wanted or where they the best chance of getting ment in the trades or occupati which they are fitted. This has done in a way of practical dir and assistance and not a mere ing out of printed material in ferent languages. The distributi laborers has been really pro by coöperation with State and authorities and communicatio employers or associations in industries. This kind of effi organized labor objected to, wished the information bureau strict itself to information in a and manner that would do little

The fact is that labor unions d wish to have any facility afforde distributing immigrant laborers the country, because it increase labor supply, favors competition bor, interferes with monopoly and courages continued immigration. country owes its growth to the d opment of its resources and indu to immigration, and there is, in nary times, a steadily growing d for labor. Its efficiency is pr by competition, but the unions present guided, seek to keep dow supply and the efficiency of labor der the deluded notion that by wages higher this course result gain to those workmen who are ganized. For the rest they do care. Secretary Nagel refuses any such narrow view, and that the information bureau was tablished to do something more way of distributing immigrants handing out circulars and printed matter. It will continu of some practical use unless eff hampering it are more successf this one.—[New York Journal Commerce.

THE MARKETS.

LOCAL PRODUCE MARKET.

Dried fruit is now beginning to arrive on the market. The first car of dried apricots of the season was reported sold last week Thursday. The opening price on the 'cots was fixed at 8½ cents, but most of the knowing brokers declare that this must be at least ½ cent above the actual sale price. Several of the large dealers on the street reported buying cots as low as 7½ cents. The crop of apricots is not nearly as large as last year. Only in the Santa Clara and the San Joaquin valleys has the crop been up to the average, while in other localities it is short. The dried apricots of last season have all been cleaned up. Peaches, on the other hand, are very plentiful, the crop being larger than that of last year. There are still a number of carloads of last year's peaches in the hands of the drying houses which are bringing about 4 cents a pound in the sweat boxes, f.o.b. loading point. This mitigates greatly against high peach prices. The prune harvest is expected to be light. The trees were not at all laden with prune plums according to spring reports. Just two days ago a report reached here from the north stating that the growing prunes were badly scorched by the sun, making them undesirable and causing a large number to drop from the trees.

Egg receipts were the heaviest of the week yesterday, 416 cases. There were no changes in quotations, but the market is not quite as firm as it was on the opening day.

Butter continues off 1 point on sales yesterday, and buyers were not ready to pay within 3 cents of the actual quotations. Eastern butter receipts continue a trifle heavier each day, and the market on that stock is not liable to go higher, but if anything, down. Receipts were 30,538 pounds.

Cheese receipts were 1019 pounds. The market was active in only two varieties. Imported Swiss and northern fresh were in demand. Only local cheese advanced during the week, other varieties showing an easy feeling, and even some weakness.

Nearly three cars of potatoes were received yesterday. The arrivals by railroad have been growing almost every day and shipments to Arizona and Nevada are gaining some ground. Prices have been weak through the past six days. Onions have been strong with arrivals of less than two cars for the entire period. The outlook for a slight rise is excellent. It will only be a short time, probably two weeks before Yellow Danvers are shipped in from the north. Very few beans have been coming in. The growers have sold all of their last year's stock and are now preparing to harvest the beans rapidly coming along at the present time. As a result, the bean stock in the hands of the wholesalers is pretty well cleaned up.

Tomatoes made a quick jump yesterday. Coachella and Imperial tomatoes have practically stopped coming, the heat in that section having damaged the vines and is ripening the vegetable too rapidly for shipment. Local tomatoes on the other hand, are not yet far enough along to supply the demand. As a result tomatoes yesterday were held worth $1.75. Cucumbers on the other hand dropped just as rapidly as were worth only 50 cents a lug box. Sweet corn also came down.

Lemons made another slight advance, owing to the very heavy call for them for use during today and tomorrow. Cantaloupes went still higher. Three cars arrived here yesterday morning and every crate was sold before noon.

San Pedro Committee Studies Acts of Trustees.

Attorney Quotes Law That May Be Invoked.

Provisions Stated Regarding Franchise Disposal.

At a meeting of the San Pedro Consolidation Committee held last night a communication was received from its Legal Committee, calling attention to an act under which the City Trustees may be prosecuted for giving away the 800 feet of frontage at East San Pedro last Tuesday. The communication from the attorney of the committee reads in part:

"The provisions of the act of the Legislature as found in the Statutes of 1905, page 777, commonly called the Broughton Act, are as follows, so far as bearing on the existing conditions:

"Section 1, among other things, reads as follows: 'Every franchise . . . to exercise any . . . privilege whatever hereafter proposed to be granted by . . . common councils, or other governing or legislative bodies of any . . . city or town within this State . . . shall be granted upon the conditions in this act provided, and not otherwise.'

"Secs. 9 and 10 at length are as follows:

" 'Sec. 9. No clause or condition of any kind shall be inserted in any franchise or grant offered or sold under the terms of this act, which shall directly or indirectly restrict free and open competition in bidding therefor, and no clause or provision shall be inserted in any franchise offered for sale, which shall in any wise favor one person, firm or corporation, as against another, in bidding for the purchase thereof.

" 'Sec. 10. Any member of any common council or other governing or legislative body of any county, city and county, city or town of this State, who, by his vote, violates or attempts to violate the provisions of this act, or any of them, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and may be punished therefor, as provided by law, and may be deprived of his office by the decree of a court of competent jurisdiction, after trial and conviction.'

"The law is plain, and no explanation is needed. The application of the law is easily made if conditions should continue to be of such character as to make it necessary or advisable."

The communication was referred to a special committee, which will report on the matter at another meeting next Tuesday night.

ON CITY PROPERTY.

Attorney Halsted of the Salt Lake Railroad was correct in his statement Friday that the trouble over frontage on Terminal Island was due to a misunderstanding, but yesterday he admitted that the misunderstanding was on the part of the railroad company.

"We are willing to concede that we were working on city property," said Mr. Halsted at San Pedro yesterday, "but we thought that we were within our rights. We do not want anything that does not belong to us. We thought we were only keeping faith with the Southern Pacific in constructing a new landing for the ferry on the lot that was deeded to the railroad in lieu of the landing that was closed when the old streets were vacated."

Mr. Halsted contends that the Southern Pacific Railroad has title to sixty feet of frontage off the 300 feet dedicated to the city of Long Beach for vacation of First, Third and Fifth streets by virtue of a deed given to the Southern Pacific by the Salt Lake railroad for a lot 60x200 feet. City Engineer Whitman of San Pedro contends that although the title of this lot, subsequently leased to the San Pedro Transportation Company for a ferry landing may be valid, none of ferry landing, may be valid, none of city has any frontage within the 150 feet on each side of the foot of Fourth street, dedicated to the city.

Mr. Halsted says that the railroad officials supposed they were working on this lot, and that the southerly boundary of same had a frontage of sixty feet. The deed given to the Southern Pacific located the westerly boundary of the lot 685 feet west of the center of the Salt Lake track. The measurement of City Engineer Whitman show it to be 726 feet from the center of the track to the pier head line which would locate the west line of the lot forty-one feet back from the pierhead line.

The case in the San Pedro City Recorder's Court against the twelve men employed on the Salt Lake pile driver was dismissed yesterday morning. There was no criminal intent so far as the men were concerned and the injunction issued by the Superior Court Thursday prevents any more work being done until the restraining order is settled.

FOOT GOES SOUTH.

A report that F. D. Foot, City Trustee, has gone to Mexico was current in San Pedro yesterday. Friends say that he has gone to Tia Juana to witness a bull fight today and that he will be joined at San Diego this morning by a party of friends from San Pedro and return Monday. It is declared that there is no truth in the report that he has gone on a long vacation or that he will not return in time to attend the next meeting of the Trustees. Mr. Foot sailed yesterday on the steamer Santa Rosa for San Diego with his wife and Mrs. Louis White. They will be joined there by Mr. and Mrs. E. Wunderlich and Louis White.

A dispatch received from San Diego last night says that Foot has not registered at any hotel and that efforts to locate him there last evening proved fruitless.

SELLS AT ADVANCE.

On the prospect of consolidation George H. Peck & Company, as agents, yesterday sold the southwest corner of Palos Verdes and Fifth streets, San Pedro, to Hughs B. Evans for $40,000. The property was sold by the estate of Charles L. Tutt at an advance of $10,000 over the price paid for it less than a year ago. It is considered by real estate men as one of the best bargains yet offered, even at the advanced price.

FITTING TRIBUTE.

ONLY PRAISE FOR THE G.A.R.

MR. TAFT SPEAKS AT UNVEILING OF MEMORIAL.

Pays Glowing Tribute to the Great Organization of Veterans of Civil War, and to the Qualities of Dr. Benjamin Franklin Stephenson, Its Founder.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

WASHINGTON, July 3.—Declaring that, unlike the "Pretorian guard of Rome, the men who made up the Union forces during the Civil War were in favor of free institutions, that they fought for them and did not intend to sacrifice them to anything else," President Taft today, as the principal speaker at the unveiling of a memorial to Dr. Benjamin Franklin Stephenson, founder of the Grand Army of the Republic, paid a glowing tribute to that organization.

Congress having contributed to the cost of the memorial,, President Taft said he was present in his official capacity.

The President spoke, in part, as follows:

"We are met to dedicate a memorial to a Union soldier who served four years as a surgeon in the Civil War, and who also builded an institution by which there has been united in the bonds of fellowship all the sweet association, all the deep lessons of loyalty and all the pride of patriotism that such a civil war as that could arouse in millions of hearts.

"When men at the formative period of life—from 18 to 22—are associated in any work, whether it be in college, in society, in church or otherwise, they carry with them afterward the fondest memories and associations for each other because they have passed through a common mould.

"I can conceive no bond of union stronger than that which unites the men who fought from '61 to '65 in the Grand Army, and it was to the credit of the founder of the Grand Army of the Republic that he saw the solid basis upon which such a structure as that great society could be erected.

"You will recollect that there were prophets of evil with respect to the fate of the United States after the war should cease, and it was said the aggregation of a million men in arms threatened our free institutions. But all those prophesies faded into nothingness.

"The men who composed that million were men in favor of free institutions who had fought for them and did not intend to sacrifice them to anything else. It was the marvel of other countries that this great body, than which there was never a stronger or better disciplined army, faded out and disappeared into the paths of peace, preserving nothing but the sweet memory and the association they had formed during the war and the consciousness they had in their own hearts of having rendered the greatest service, the preservation of their country.

"Stephenson organized this Grand Army of the Republic to preserve the essence of that army in its finest characteristics, in its democracy and in its patriotism. The Grand Army of the Republic knows no limitation but service to the government in the Civil War; and therefore it is that Congress, recognizing the usefulness of such an organization in preserving patriotism, properly contributed $10,000 to this memorial and recognized the Grand Army of the Republic as an institution that may well have national gratitude and national recognition.

"More than that, the Grand Army of the Republic is most useful in this—it represents the concentrated opinion of the men who fought in the war to preserve the Union, and it therefore may give authoritative expression which no other body and no other part of the people can give, to wit, forgetfulness of the strife that existed during the four years of the war. I am glad to say that while that bitterness may in a few instances obtain, you will never find it to exist between the men who actually exposed their lives on one side, and the men who exposed their lives on the other.

"The union of the two sections has been moulded strongly and more strongly by those meetings between the blue and the gray, which ought to be encouraged to occur as often as possible."

OIL MEN STILL FIGHTING.

ASK COUNTERVAILING DUTY.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

WASHINGTON, July 3.—The placing of petroleum on the free list by a substantial majority of the Senate, apparently has not taken all the fight out of the independent oil producers and another effort in the direction of protection will be made when the tariff bill shall have been perfected in the committee of the whole and reported to the Senate.

At a conference today of the representatives of the independent oil producers who have been in Washington practically all the present session of Congress, it was decided to make another effort to amend the bill so as to provide for a countervailing duty upon crude petroleum.

Unlike the provision of the existing law, however, the proposed amendment will prescribe that the duty to be collected shall be only one-half of the duty imposed by any foreign country upon oil exported from the United States.

Senator Curtis has been selected to introduce the new amendment.

Mexico, which will be affected more than any other country if the countervailing duty is maintained, imposes a duty of nearly 49 cents a barrel on the crude product. This is estimated to be equivalent to an ad valorem rate of between 300 and 400 per cent., and the independents assert this duty is prohibitive.

When the amendment is offered in the Senate, an effort will be made to get a [illegible] call upon it.

Several members who voted against the Penrose amendment, placing a duty on crude petroleum, have signified their intention of voting for the countervailing duty.

TAWNEY EXPLAINS.

PEACE UNBROKEN REIGNS.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

WASHINGTON, July 3.—Steps were taken today to correct the impression that a conflict has arisen between President Taft and Secretary MacVeagh of the Treasury Department over efforts to adopt an amendment to the tariff bill revising the law relating to the manufacture and sale of oleomargarine.

The seeming conflict was provoked by a misinterpretation of a statement given out by Representative Tawney of Minnesota, following a conference he had with the President.

The Secretary of the Treasury was reported to be in favor of putting a flat tax of 2 cents a pound on all sorts of "oleo" in the place of the tax of one-fourth of a cent a pound for the uncolored product, and 10 cents a pound for the colored.

Because of the activity of Treasury Department officials the impression prevailed that the suggested change had the support of the administration, and Mr. Tawney sought to make it clear that the President had not indorsed the proposition.

In an interview today, Mr. Tawney said: "To the representatives of the press that I saw, I merely said I was authorized by the President to say that this oleomargarine legislation is not an administrative measure, but is purely a Treasury Department measure."

TO BEAT WRIGHTS.

WOULD RAISE DEMANDS.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

WASHINGTON, July 3.—The officers of the Signal Corps of the army are considering the feasibility of issuing proposals for bids for an aëroplane capable of fulfilling more difficult requirements than those which the Wright machine is under contract to accomplish. Because Herring has not complied with his contract the Signal Corps has $20,000 additional at its disposal for the purpose. It is conceded that the Wrights are able to meet all the conditions imposed upon them. The new specifications will not be issued by the War Department for some time. The Wright brothers hope to have their machine prepared by the early part of next week.

ASK THE PRESIDENT.

TO TARGET TOURNAMENT.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

WASHINGTON, July 3.—President Taft today received a gold engraved invitation to attend the golden jubilee festival of the San Francisco Scheutzenverein in honor of its fiftieth anniversary to be celebrated with a target tournament and German volksfest August 29 to September 5 in Shellmound Park, Emeryville.

A similar invitation has been sent to Emperor William of Germany.

The President told Representative Kahn, who made the presentation, that while he expected to be in California in the fall he could not now say whether he would be there at the time of the celebration although he hoped he could be.

WASHINGTON BRIEFS.

President Busy.

WASHINGTON, July 3.—President Taft today disposed of as much business as possible in anticipation of his absence from Washington for nearly a week.

Mr. Taft Begins Vacation.

May Cut Out Coupons.

WASHINGTON (D. C.) July 3.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Senator Flint, who is chairman of the subcommittee having tobacco schedules in charge, said today that the committee would probably recommend an increase of about 10 per cent. on the tobacco tax, covering chewing and smoking tobacco, cigars and cigarettes, and that coupons and short-weight packages would be prohibited.

Approves Local Bank.

WASHINGTON, July 3.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The First National Bank of Banning has the approval of the Treasury Department to make the First National of Los Angeles its reserve agent.

REFUSES LAWYER'S AID.

Murderer of Cashier Says That Hanging Is Better Than Anything They Can Do.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

SAN FRANCISCO, July 3.—"Why should I hire an attorney? Anything they could do would be worse than hanging," declared James E. Cunningham today when two lawyers sought an interview with him, and proposed to undertake his defense upon the charge of murdering Miss Caroline Brasch, cashier for Gray Bros., last Wednesday.

"You don't want to be hanged, do you?" he was asked.

"Well, every man has got to die some time, I suppose."

"Why don't you plead insanity?"

"What good would that do? They would send me to an asylum for life and that would be worse than hanging," was his reply.

Cunningham offers a peculiar psychological study. Small of stature, mild-mannered, apparently rational, but indifferent to his fate, he is one of the strangest criminals the local police have ever had to deal with.

Today he informed the police that he threw away the empty cartridge with which he shot the woman, near First and Brannan streets. Upon being taken there in an automobile, he got out and picked up the shell from between two cobblestones.

"You seem to be piling up evidence against yourself," was remarked.

"What's the difference?" he replied with a quiet laugh.

Cunningham probably will not be charged until after the inquest next Tuesday.

THEIR "VICTIM" RETURNS IN TIME TO SAVE "SLAYERS."

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

ZACATECAS (Mex.) July 3.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Tried for murder, found guilty and sentenced to be shot, Ramon Zarate, after nearly two years of prison confinement, was saved from the firing squad by the reappearance of Pedro Ortiz, the youth whom it was alleged had been slain.

The coming of Pedro Ortiz, so long thought to be dead, produced consternation among the superstitious. The attorney for Zarate at once secured his release, also that of Bibiano Lira, held as an accomplice.

The legal mistake was caused in October, 1907, when the body of a man, horribly mutilated, was found on a railroad track near the home of Ortiz. Identification seemed almost impossible. At the same time Ortiz disappeared from home, and the parents identified the dead body as that of their son. As he had last been seen in company with Zarate and Lira, they were convicted of the crime.

FIGHTERS WITH RECORDS.

Captains Displaced at Soldiers' Home Rendered Splendid Service in Civil War.

SOLDIERS' HOME, July 3.—The recent merging at this branch of the distinctive officers of adjutant and inspector into office, has displaced the two highest non-commissioned offices heretofore known to the National Home. Both are men whose records in the Civil War, as commissioned officers, were noteworthy.

Capt. L. M. Lambert, the retiring adjutant, was but 22 years old at the termination of his military career. At the first call for three months' troops he enlisted in the First New Jersey Militia in April, 1861. On his return home in July of that year, he immediately reenlisted in Co. A, Eighth New Jersey Volunteers Infantry, was soon promoted to sergeant and the intermediate grades to captain, and was mustered out as such June 11, 1865. He served as aide on the staffs of Gen. Gersham Mott, John Ramsey and W. J. Sewell, and as provost marshal on the staff of Gen. A. A. Humphreys, when the latter was in command of the Second Army Corps, and until the end of the war. Capt Lambert participated in almost all the battles of the Army of the Potomac, from first Bull Run to Appomattox. He was slightly wounded at Chancellorsville, and again at Gettysburg, but was off the field but a short time on the latter occasion.

Capt. Webster A. Whitney, who has filled the office of branch inspector for nearly two years, entered the service as captain of Co. B, Eighty-eighth Illinois Infantry. At the battle of Stone River (Tenn.,) he maneuvered his company in an emergency in a way that attracted the attention of Gen. Phil Sheridan, and gained for him, besides honorable mention in general orders, a position on the general's staff. When the latter was later advanced to the rank of major-general and assigned to command of a division in the Twentieth Army Corps, he procured the appointment of the young captain to the newly-created rank of commissary of muster, and Capt. Whitney's first duty as such was the muster of Phil Sheridan himself as major-general Capt. Whiting left on Friday for a long visit with a daughter, living in Butte, Mont.

Members on extra duty and civilian employés were paid today for the month of June. The total amount for salaries was $10,212.63.

HAVE WINNERS PICKED.

As part of the course for the approaching auto races lies in the home ground, veterans express a proprietary interest in the affair, and many spend the entire time allowed for trial exercises each day in watching the fliers. Any one in need of pointers on the winning machine can obtain them from the old boys, who have them already picked out.

The pay schedule for the new fiscal year provides for the advancement of the commander of the old men's barrack, Co. L, from class 1 to class 3, incidentally carrying with it an increase of $10 per month in salary. Besides the care and comfort of the aged and crippled members of this company, Capt. J. K. Duncan, its commander, has the additional responsibility of a dining hall and kitchen on his hands. They require closer attention than is needed in other barracks.

RECENT DEATHS.

Augustus Thompson, late Co. A, Twenty-ninth Ohio Infantry, a native of Ohio, admitted from Little Rock, Ark., in 1908, died July 1, aged 84.

John Timney, late Co. H, First California Cavalry, a native of Ireland, admitted from Yountville, Cal., in 1890, died July 2, aged 69.

James O. Clark, late Co. K, Twentieth Massachusetts Infantry, a native of New York, admitted from San Bernardino, Cal., in 1893, died July 2, aged 69.

MUSICAL OBSERVANCE.

Fourth Will Be Celebrated With Band Concerts at Santa Monica—Baggage Handlers Busy.

SANTA MONICA, July 3.—The Fourth will be given slight observance along the shores of this bay, but there will be band concerts on the bluff, on the sand at the Santa Monica-Ocean Park dividing line, and at Venice.

Monday will be the real holiday, but at Santa Monica the only attraction will be the spectacle afforded by the fast cars as they are being tried out over the race course. The celebration will be at Venice. The orator will be Andrew Parks of Los Angeles. There will be aquatic sports in the afternoon and fireworks at night.

Walter P. Keene, late of Washington, D. C., has acquired the Carrillo homestead on Second street and will at once equip and operate it as a private sanatorium.

Monday morning, Miss Edna Sexton, niece of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Sexton, will be married to Chester Galgani at St. Monica Church.

Mrs. Sarah M. Montgomery died at the Santa Monica Bay Hospital this morning. She was 59 years of age and a native of Monmouth, Ill., to which city the remains will be taken for burial. She leaves a sister, Mrs. Mary J. Babcock of Galesburg, Ill., who is now here.

RUSH TO SEASHORE.

According to transportation authorities, June has been the liveliest month for the handling of baggage ever known along this bay. Cottages and bungalows are rapidly filling up for the season.

ALHAMBRA.

ALHAMBRA, July 3.—Rev. S. T. Montgomery, pastor of the Presbyterian Church of Alhambra, has been elected president of the Church Federation Council of Los Angeles.

Mayor Weeks and family have left for a vacation in the mountains. They will be away a month.

Miss Jessie Brunson and Misses Nellie and Lida Hafford will join a party from Los Angeles for a month's sojourn at Yosemite.

Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Overton of Keokuk, Iowa, are visiting their nephew, F. W. Overly.

Mrs. George B. Winslow of Louisville, Ky., will spend the summer with her sisters, the Misses Hafford.

Councilman R. M. Wallace, formerly connected with the West Alhambra Bank, will leave soon for a visit with relatives and friends in Missouri.

The Lend-a-Hand Society of the Presbyterian Church held its annual picnic today in the Little Santa Anita Cañon at Carter's Camp.

Miss Pearl E. Wharff of Alhambra and William I. Ide of Los Angeles were married today at the home of the bride's aunt, Mrs. Ella Lange. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Mr. Brown of the Baptist Church. Miss Rachel Lillian Howard of Riverside, a little cousin of the bride, was ring-bearer, and Miss Archie McLain acted as flower bearer. After the ceremony refreshments were served under the pepper tree on the lawn.

SANTA BARBARA.

SANTA BARBARA, July 3.—"Natoma," a grand opera, with music by Victor Herbert, libretto by Joseph D. Redding of San Francisco, and the scene, Santa Barbara Mission and vicinity in 1830, will be presented by Oscar Hammerstein at the Manhattan Operahouse next January. The scenes and costumes will be by Alexander F. Harmer, a local artist, and an authority on early Spanish days.

ELECTRICITY IS LIFE

Strong Men Are Full of Electricity

Ailing Men Are Lacking in Electricity

Prof. Loeb, the eminent scientist of the University of California, says experiments have proven that old age can be defied by the proper use of electricity.

Dr. McLaughlin's lifelong claim has been that electricity is the basis of all-around vitality and that without it we could not live.

DOCTORS ALL OVER THE WORLD ARE NOW TALKING ELECTRICITY, AND ARE USING IT IN ONE FORM OR ANOTHER. This is the direct outcome of the recent announcement of the world' greatest scientists, and is a practical admission on the part of physicians of the power of Electricity over drugs as a curative agent.

I have known for twenty years that drugs could not restore strength. My knowledge was obtained from actual contact with thousands of people who had tried drugs in every form and they were worse off than before they started drugging. Why don't drugs cure? If the steam in an engine has run down, will oiling the parts make it go? No. You must get up more steam. Drugs have no more effect on the body than oil on an engine. Electricity can and does make the body go, just as it makes a machine go. I have proven in 50,000 cases that Electricity is the substance of life and organic vitality, and have perfected the best known means of replenishing this force in the body when it is lost. My Electric Belt is the natural result of scientific study, coupled with skill. There can be no pain or weakness where my appliance is used.

The current supplied by this appliance enters the body in a glowing stream of vitalizing heat, so gentle that the nerves and vital organs absorb it as freely as a hungry babe drinks milk. This force is added to the natural power generated by the stomach; it saturates every vital part and soon transforms the debilitated body into a natural storage battery, which generates its own health and closes the doors forever to disease and debility.

Dr. McLaughlin's book is published for free distribution to those interested in the development of vigorous health in men and women. It is profusely illustrated and describes his method of treatment and appliances. Sent sealed, free on request. Send for it today enclosing this coupon.

Dr. McLaughlin's Electric Belt has a cure in every town. Upon request the names of your neighbors who have been cured by it will be sent to you.

Flag Purchased by Hollywood School Children Is Raised at the Summit of Mount.

HOLLYWOOD, July 3.—At the waving of a small banner by Mrs. W. F. Senour, at Willard and Prospect avenues this afternoon, the big new American flag purchased by the school children for the top of Mount Hollywood slowly unfurled at the end of the forty-foot mast on the summit four miles away and floated on the breeze.

The figures surrounding the mast on the mountain top looked so tiny to those below it was feared by many that the signal would not be recognized. But the programme passed off exactly as scheduled.

The speakers for the occasion were introduced by E. D. Taylor of Hollywood, and the addresses were interspersed with choruses by the school children. The presentation was made very prettily by Eugene Dorsey, 8 years old, who delivered a neat little speech.

L. A. Hadley of Occidental College, in accepting the flag on behalf of the park department of Los Angeles, spoke emphatically of the duty of citizens to flag and country now, while dangers more subtle but none the less grave than those of war threaten. He interpreted the significance of the flag, bringing out strongly the lessons of Stars and Stripes and colors.

E. Lovie, speaking for the Native Sons, pictured the making of the first American flag by Betsy Ross, traced its path through history, leading the friends of liberty and winning the respect of the world. He closed with an interesting sketch of the bear flag of the republic of California.

The remaining county productions ranged from 17,986 pounds by Trinity county to 944,268 pounds by Yolo county. Los Angeles county produced 841,690 pounds.

VALUE OF IRRIGATION.

The following comparison of the quantities of butter made in the counties named in the years 1902 and 1908 shows the value of irrigation to the industry:

County—	—Pounds— 1902.	1908.
Sacramento	1,186,125	1,227,771
Fresno	1,025,874	3,315,926
San Joaquin	907,634	1,605,152
Yolo	743,268	944,268
Kings	727,282	2,419,651

Stanislaus	677,058	4,113,866
Kern	156,878	521,495
Totals	6,819,451	19,759,352
Increase in only six years		12,939,901

These figures show a gain of nearly 200 per cent.

The State Board of Trade says that the reason why some of the counties of Southern California have fallen off in yearly butter yield is the greatly increasing demand for milk and cream because of the rapid increase of population in the cities and the heavy tourist travel. This compels the bringing of butter from the northern part of the State. The San Joaquin Valley attracts many dairymen.

CHEESE.

Of the fifty-seven counties in the State, twenty-four produced cheese in 1908, as compared with twenty-two during the previous year. The total production was 6,162,514 pounds, an increase of 233,572 pounds. The productions each year for five years were:

Year—	Pounds.
1904	6,133,898
1905	6,020,672
1906	6,418,480
1907	5,928,942

The other productions ranged from 1400 pounds by Solano county to 70,304 pounds by Kings county.

POULTRY AND EGGS.

Petaluma, Sonoma county, is chief shipping point for the and the shipments therefrom were 5,312,804 dozen eggs and dozen poultry. This was a gain 1907 of 889,836 dozen eggs and dozen poultry. The daily food ments for poultry in the Petaluma trict for the year aggregated or 600,000 pounds, of which corn, barley, bran and middlings the largest part, namely, tons, or 480,000 pounds.

FACT AND COMMENT.

THERE is room for practical reform in a good many ways in connection with the administration of the city government. There is a proposition just now to form a utilities commission with the purpose in the minds of the proponents to bring about some of these necessary reforms. The proposition is rather chaotic at the moment, and therefore impossible to measure up intelligently as to its possible effects. One member of the Council opposes it on general or fundamental grounds. He thinks the City Council should attend to these matters itself, and not delegate its powers to various commissions. It is no doubt there is profound philosophy in this general objection to government by commission. From municipalities to the Federal government there is too great a tendency toward government by commission. This method has not worked well as a rule in the past, and is not likely to work well in the future.

Street Assessments.

One of the ramifications of municipal operations which are in need of reform is the management of streets. This is true from the mere care of the city highways to the improvement of them and the opening of new ones. For a city of our size and age we ought to have plans better matured and less liable to error and injustice than exist at present. There is perhaps more fault-finding on the part of property owners and taxpayers in regard to street matters than any other branch of the civil service of the city.

A Case in Point.

Right at the moment there is an action pending before the Superior Court of this county to issue a restraining order against certain improvements attempted to be accomplished on East Fourth street. As we understand it, Fourth street terminates going eastward of Alameda street and the thread of the thoroughfare is not picked up again until after the river is crossed. The proposed improvement contemplates the opening and widening of this street from Alameda street to Boyle avenue. The entire cost of the improvement contemplated is put at about $148,000.

Why the Objection?

The plaintiffs in this case allege the Board of Public Works should be restrained from carrying on this attempted improvement because the assessment district is only 200 feet wide, but extends from Main street to the eastern city limits. It is furthermore alleged that it is contemplated in this plan of improvement to merge in some way Fourth street west of the river into Third street. The assessment, as we understand it, mainly affects property holders on Fourth street. The idea of the plaintiffs is that the benefit will accrue mostly to those owning land on Third street.

The Assessment District.

Now it certainly would seem to a man on the street level, and not up a high tree, as if there were valid ground for objecting to the assessment district in question. It covers only the lots on two sides of the street to be improved, but extends eastward from the region of improvement more than a mile to the eastern city limits. It would certainly seem as if property holders in the near vicinity to this improvement would obtain much more benefit from it than those at so remote a distance as the city limits to the east.

What Benefit Will It Bring?

East Fourth street out of the city limits eastward comes down in a straight line to the Traction car line on Fourth street, which terminates on Fresno street at one of the entrances to Evergreen Cemetery. From there to Boyle avenue the street is straight and well improved. The river is crossed by a bridge used by the Traction company. Boyle avenue furnishes an outlet to those coming in from the east who may turn and cross the river at First street. Unless the river is bridged at Fourth the proposed improvement will be no earthly use to those who own property or who inhabit premises along Fourth street east of Boyle avenue..

Immensely High Assessment.

Toward the eastern end of Fourth street, for example, about Indiana street, forty-five-foot lots are assessed at from $36 to $40 apiece. It looks as if the assessments at this extreme distance from the proposed improvement must be about on the same level as on lots close to where the proposed improvement is to be placed. It is an enormous assessment on property so remote from the point of improvement.

Who Conceived This Plan?

Property owners affected are complaining that they knew nothing about this proposed improvement until they received a formal notice from the Board of Public Works to step up and pay their assessment of from $30 to $50 a lot before the assessment becomes delinquent in less than a month from now, at which time the city will take steps to sell all lots on which the assessments are unpaid. Here is one of the inconveniences of our present system. Any interested parties may get their heads together at any point in the city and concoct a scheme for the improvement of their own property. They may carry it on with great quietness, get signatures enough to form a petition for the improvement, and, carefully keeping in ignorance those who would be likely to protest.

The Gist of This Question.

Here lies the gist of this question before the court. Many property holders were kept in ignorance of the proposed improvement. The commission appointed to assess damages and make awards appeared to have limited the assessment district to an unusually narrow strip. They have made up in longitude what they lack in latitde, and have carrined enormous assessments to an extreme distance from the point where the money is to be applied. What view the court will take of the matter we cannot say. A decision is imperative before the 26th day of July, the last day on which the assessments can be paid without their becoming delinquent, with 5 per cent. interest penalty added to it, and on top of that, the danger of having the property advertised for sale, if not sold, thus increasing the penalty. The purpose of this writing is to call attention to the necessity of some more effective way to reach the eyes or the ears of all property holders likely to be affected by an assessment of this kind. Snap judgment ought not to be possible. The Board of Public Works takes great pains to ascertain the names of all property holders from whom the assessments are due. It would be just as easy for this board, or the Council, to obtain this information before any final decision is reached upon the matter. Every property holder possible to be affected by such an assessment ought to be given notice beforehand as to the contemplated improvement, and permitted to exercise his privilege of protesting before it becomes too late. Whether it shall be too late in the present instance or not is for the court to decide. But it ought not to be so. The property holders ought to have an opportunity of knowing of any such proposed improvements and be safeguarded from the possibility of snap judgment taken by designing persons, who wish their own property improved at the expense of those who will receive little or no benefit from it. We do not allege that this is so in the present case, but it has such appearance, and this is a case where the appearance of evil ought to be avoided.

PERMIT TOTAL IN HUGE FIGURES

NEARLY SEVENTEEN MILES OF NEW BUILDINGS.

Permits Issued Since Beginning of Municipal Year Number Nearly Forty-five Hundred at a Valuation of Six and a Quarter Million Dollars.

The report for the municipal year, dating from December 1, 1908 to June 30, 1909, just issued by the chief inspector of buildings embodies in statistical form many striking and significant facts concerning the building development of this city. During this period of seven months 4407 building permits, with an estimated valuation of $6,227,971 have been issued.

The department has prepared comparisons which show in a graphic and interesting way just what such huge figures represent. For example it is said that the total frontage of the new buildings in the past seven months is 71,423 feet or 13.53 miles. The frontage of the new stables, sheds and barns for which permits have been issued is 7152 feet or 1.35 miles; the frontage of new additions, 10,862 feet, or 2.06 miles. The total frontage represented by all the improvements during the time covered is, therefore, 89,447 feet, or 16.94 miles.

In addition 12,391 permits have been issue for sanitary plumbing, sewers and cesspools, and 5,623 permits for the installation of gas piping. Permits issued for moving picture shows number 52.

Since January 1 of the present year, 3821 permits at a total valuation of $5,558,202 have been issued by the department. The gain over the corresponding period of last year is 268 permits representing a valuation of $1,254,167.

The following tabulated report gives the total number and valuation of the various classes of buildings for which permits have been issued during the past municipal year, beginning December 1, 1908, and ending June 30, 1909:

SELL OCEAN FRONTAGE.

Notable Deal in San Luis Obispo County Property Through Los Angeles Agencies.

A very notable sale made yesterday was that of the La Grande Beach property in San Luis Obispo county. It includes three miles of ocean frontage adjoining Pismo Beach to the south, together with an ideal stretch of smooth, hard beach, equal to, if not surpassing, the famous Daytona Auto Course in Southern Florida.

The property contains more than 5000 lots, with a number of cottages, a Swiss Pavilion, 100x150 feet, and a substantial pier extending 1000 feet to the sea. The price paid was $125,000, the purchaser being D. L. Peters. The brokers in the transaction were Messrs. R. A. Rowan & Co. and the Golden State Realty Company.

HIGH CLASS.

NEW APARTMENTS MODEL OF TYPE.

TO COST ONE HUNDRED AND FIFTY THOUSAND.

The Trebor at the Southwest Corner of Seventh and Coronado Will Combine Elegance With Up-to-Date Conveniences—Construction Already Under Way.

On this page is reproduced a perspective of the new "Trebor Apartments," which are in course of construction for Robert A. Fowler at the southeast corner of Seventh and Coronado streets. Advance information regarding this structure was published in The Times a number of weeks ago. The building when completed will be in the form of a letter "H," with the two wings facing north on Seventh street, and will cost in the neighborhood of $150,000.

The east wing will be finished first, and work is progressing rapidly on this part of the building. This section has already been leased to Mrs. M. Gorsuch for a term of five years. The rest of the building will be finished within a short time after, it being planned that the work will be continued at once.

Each wing will be three stories, and will contain seventy-one rooms, arranged in two and three-room suites, each with a private bath. The interior finish is in oak and polished birch, and the floors will be hardwood throughout. Light and ventilation will be secured by single seven-foot windows in every room. Every interior convenience in keeping with apartments of its class will be installed.

The exterior will be of brick and will present a finished appearance from all four sides of the building. The front elevation will be of the Georgian style of architecture. The structure will front 150 feet on Seventh by 140 feet on Coronado street. The design is by Harold Cross and J. R. Keel.

PLAN LARGER STRUCTURE.

Revised Designs for New Warehouses Call for Total Outlay of Hundred Thousand.

A three-story reinforced concrete building designed by W. J. Saunders has just been completed for the F. W. Braun Chemical Company at the junction of East Third street and the Santa Fé Railway tracks. The structure, which faces 137 feet on Third street and is of an average depth of 125 feet, cost in the neighborhood of $50,000.

At the time the plans for this building were drawn, the architect was also commissioned to prepare plans for a building of a single story to be erected adjacent to the original property and just across a spur of the Southern Pacific track used by the Braun company. The plans for the latter structure have been altered to call for a three-story reinforced building to cost about $45,000, and work on this building will begin at once. The new building will have a frontage on Avery street of 120 feet and a depth of 100 feet. The two structures will be joined by bridges, and both will be models of warehouse and factory construction, being absolutely fireproof and of most modern equipment.

LARGE CASH SALES.

R. A. Rowan & Company reports the purchase from a local syndicate by an investor from Boston, whose name by request is withheld, of the southwest corner of Seventh and Bixel streets for a consideration of $50,000 cash. The property fronts 100 on Seventh street and 125 feet on Bixel. It is the purchaser's intention to ultimately erect on the site a magnificent apartment house of the type constructed in exclusive neighborhoods in the East. The same firm reports the sale for John Haag to Newton E. Kramer of a lot 40x140 feet at 1106 San Pedro street, improved with a two-story frame building, for a consideration of $12,000 cash. The purchaser, Mr. Kramer, will be remembered as the Montana cattleman who recently sold the property at the northeast corner of First and Main for $120,000, eighteen months after having paid $90,000 for the same holding. Both of these transactions were on a cash basis, and both were accomplished through the agency of R. A. Rowan & Company. The same agency sold for William Cotta, to local investors, the lot at 929 San Julian street, 50x139 feet, the price paid being $10,000. Two latter properties face the new City Market Company's buildings, and both were purchased for investment.

FAR IN EXCESS OF MILLION.

PERMITS GAIN BY NEARLY FOUR HUNDRED THOUSAND.

Record of Building Permits Issued During Month of June Reveals Increase of Fifty-two Per Cent. in Valuation Over Corresponding Period of Last Year.

The report of the chief inspector of buildings covering the period from June 1 to June 30 shows a total of 715 permits, representing a valuation of $1,148,418, issued from the building department during the past month. The number of permits issued during the corresponding period of last year was 626, the valuation being $757,856. The gain of 52 per cent. in valuation during the twenty-six days involved in the comparison furnishes conclusive evidence that the old-time building activity preceding the period of financial stress has returned for "keeps."

The actual gain in dollars over June, 1908, is nearly $400,000, being in exact figures $390,562, or an average increase of $15,021 per day. The gain in the number of buildings for which permits have been issued is 89, or nearly 15 per cent. over the same dull period.

The Fourth and Fifth wards again lead the list, the former with 87 permits at a valuation of $241,577, and the latter with 203 permits at a valuation of $269,247. The Sixth, Third and Seventh wards follow with valuations of $159,181, $153,900 and $137,620, respectively.

Following is the classified report and the report by wards:

A splendid nine-room house in the choice residence portion of the southwest, near St. Andrews Place. This house was built last June, is in perfect condition and must be sold immediately. The price is a great sacrifice for this property, which is modern in every particular.

The main entrance is into a beautiful living-room, back of which is a large music-room or den. Another door from the front porch opens into the large dining-room. The kitchen and breakfast-room are perfect in arrangement and finish. There are two sleeping-rooms downstairs. The two bedrooms upstairs are unusually light and airy, and have commodious closets. The lot is large and highly improved and has garage. Do not fail to see this if you are looking for a home.

We have secured this splendid eight-room home, only a short distance from Adams street, at such a price that you cannot fail to be interested. It is worth $1500 more than the figure asked today. It is on an east front lot, 50x142 to a wide alley, has hardwood floors throughout, large cellar and furnace piped to every room. We know of no better built home for the money in the city. The owner is a non-resident and has instructed us to sell, hence this sacrifice price. Get this bargain—it won't last long.

This home of eight rooms is located on the high ground near Gramercy Place, only a short block from the car, and in a district which is rapidly increasing in value. The house was built about a year ago at a cost of $4800 and the lot, unimproved, would sell readily for $2500; at the price of $6500 the property is certainly a sacrifice, but the owner has a business proposition in which his money can be invested to advantage and he wants to get the money out of his house. There is every desirable convenience in this modern property and, with its sunny southern exposure, it is a most attractive home. If you are looking for a place at a bargain price, do not fail to see this one.

This beautiful, east-front residence of ten rooms is just being completed between Wilshire blvd. and Sixth st. Every detail of the house is complete; the rooms are well arranged and will be handsomely decorated.

The windows are large and of the best French plate. Every room in the house (except kitchen and maid's room) has oak floors. There are two beautiful bathrooms, the main one being one of the handsomest fully tiled bathrooms in Los Angeles. The cellar is large and is equipped with gas furnace and Pittsburgh automatic heater. In addition to the ten main rooms, there is a splendid sleeping porch.

The exterior of the house is very beautiful, the lines are perfect and give the effect of a much larger house.

The fixtures throughout are artistic and beautiful, but not gaudy. In fact, this house represents the highest type of architectural skill we have ever seen displayed in producing a well-built, beautiful and modern home at a moderate cost.

FOR SALE—THERE ARE THOUSANDS OF people paying rent in this city. There are thousands of people buying homes on monthly payments in this city. Now which class is showing the best judgment? Judge for yourself. Many who are renting are waiting until they save enough to buy a home. That time will probably never come. They mean well but have not yet awakened to the fact that the best and surest way to get a home is to let the man build it who has money and is willing to invest it for the mutual benefit of himself and the man who is just making a start. If you can pay rent you can pay for a house. If you wait a year you have lost a year's payments. Every honest man who is paying rent is depriving himself and family of what might prove a future competence. Don't argue that Jones is not building for his health, and then go right on turning your money over to a thankless landlord. I could make more money by renting you a house for $15 a month than by selling you a house for $15 a month. Think this over and stop hesitating. I now have bungalows on large lots at $750, $775, $1150, $1500, $2250, $3300 and $3500, which I will sell on rent payments. My tracts are on the high ground. The air is pure and the water cannot be excelled. Come in and talk this over with me. Now is the time to act while prices and terms are right.

WILSHIRE-WESTLAKE DISTRICT BARGAINS.

We are just completing a nine-room-and-basement bungalow that in quality, artistic effects and price will surpass anything else in the city. The den, which also forms one of the main front entrances, has a dark mahogany finish, with rich decorations in gables to match; the ceiling being finished the same way as the walls. This is a combination of den and library, containing beautifully finished bookcases, a handsome rustic corner mantel and floors, best grade of quarter-sawed oak. The living and dining-room are unique in style and richly decorated; also having quarter-sawed oak floors. The hardware and trimmings are solid, red copper, to match inside finish, which is dark mission stain. The mantel is very massive, being nine feet across and extending to the ceiling, with large bronze panel of classical figure above shelf. Handsome electric fixtures in all rooms to match hardware, and every light on a switch. The breakfast-room is the sunniest room in Los Angeles (when we have the sun,) and is richly finished, floor being quarter-sawed oak. The kitchen is perfect in appointment, containing first-class plumbing, woodstone drainboard, heater and boiler attached, and double wash tray on rear porch. There are four bedrooms, three downstairs and one upstairs. Those downstairs are finished in white enamel, and the very finest of polished white maple floors. The wall decorating was done by one of the leading houses in this city, and its beauty and harmony cannot be described in an ad., so you will have to see it. The bath is handsomely finished with the highest-grade plumbing, enamel, mirrors, cabinets and marble floor. Deep, fine, cement cellar and every room in the house piped for both furnace and gas. In fact, it is just what you are looking for, and if you were to plan a thousand years, you could not build a bungalow more suited to your taste. This property is situated No. 121 S. Hoover street, 12 minutes from Seventh and Broadway, by any car going to Bimini Baths; and three blocks north of Sunset Park. Westlake traction car runs in rear. The quality of interior finish in this house is as good as that found in any $9000 property. At the above price we require $2250 cash down, balance on easy terms.

Just completed a handsome, two-story, 9-room house on the second lot south of the bungalow, which, in unique exterior and convenient interior arrangement will certainly suit the most exacting. While this house, in finish and decoration, is of the same quality and attractiveness as the above, yet in pattern and style, it is directly opposite. No single feature is duplicated. The dining-room is a light mahogany finish, all wood, and decorations to match. The living-room is large and handsome, and while finished along different lines, yet harmonizing beautifully with the dining-room. There are so many pretty things that we might say about this house, and it takes such a long time to say them, we would prefer you to go out and look it over. Anything you wish to know, ask of the men working on our buildings (it is all day labor, and their time is ours,) and they will courteously explain. East front and lot 50x151. Lawn and shrubbery in. FOR SALE—

VICTORIA PARK.

A MOST ATTRACTIVE AND SPACIOUS PRIVATE RESIDENCE PARK.

ON THE WEST ADAMS HILL,

WITH A SUPERB VIEW IN ALL DIRECTIONS.

All drives in the park are 100 feet wide, with petrolithic paved roadways and seven foot cement sidewalks, set in thirty-foot parkings, with numerous trees and palms.

No driveway names are used, each address being "Victoria Park" with the number of the building site.

The park is beautifully lighted by handsome stone and wrought iron pillars, with five large electric globes on each.

The building protection is such that all residences cost from $4000 and $5000 to $30,000. Several homes have been built and a dozen more are to follow rapidly.

Victoria Park now borders on two car lines, and is also within 75 yards of the right of way of the Los Angeles-Pacific subway.

Although Victoria Park in location, improvements, and intrinsic value compares favorably with lots selling at $100 or more per front foot, present prices are only one-third to one-fourth as much. Building sites from 60 to 110 feet wide, and from 125 to 275 feet deep can now be had on a very low basis. Prices will soon adjust themselves so as to be more in proportion to the merits of the property.

To see the park, take Pico Heights car (not Wilton Place car,) and see the agent on the property, Mr. James J. Norton, or call or telephone for automobile appointment.

E. J. BALDWIN ESTATE.

The Rancho La Puente, in the heart of the great San Gabriel Valley, consisting of thousands of acres of the most fertile soil in Southern California, will be offered for sale and will be sold in tracts to suit purchaser.

Only 14 miles N.E. of the city, between El Monte and Covina, by the S.P.R.R., Pacific Electric and Salt Lake Railroads.

Perhaps you are curious to know what this land is adapted to.

Well, it cannot be beaten for growing
ALFALFA,
WALNUTS,
Fruit, vegetables. Yes, and around Covina it's first-class
ORANGE LAND.

We have subdivided 5000 acres of this land for the Baldwin estate during the past four years, and we know whereof we speak.

THE WATER QUESTION.

That is already demonstrated.
There is water under this land.
One plant in operation pumps 800 miner's inches of water. There are numerous small plants, none of which pump less than 150 miner's inches of water.

Is there any market for the produce? Yes, you can sell everything right in the field.

There will never be another opportunity like this one; go out today and make your reservations.

PRICES AND TERMS
at our offices.

Have you ever heard about the DAMP LAND
Just south of EL MONTE, 12 miles from Los Angeles, one mile from the electric car line.

This land requires no irrigation whatever to grow
ALFALFA,
VEGETABLES,
CELERY.

Just think of it. No labor or expense for irrigating; just plant your crops, cultivate them and watch them grow. Perhaps you don't believe this to be possible in this land of rainless summers; well, then, just board the Covina line car for El Monte, go out with us to the tract, and let us "show you" where 10 tons of alfalfa, per acre, can be grown each year, without irrigation. Get in on the ground floor and double your money in one to two years.

These are just a few tips that we are giving you.

FOR SALE—AT RIALTO.

2000 ACRES—2000 ACRES.

One mile Santa Fe Ry. through it.

One mile of oiled road (from L. A. to San Bdno.,) through the center of it.

Will soon have ONE MILE ELECTRIC RY. through it.

Fine cement reservoir, cost $17,000.

25 inches of water already developed and more to follow.

Now digging the ditch for 2½ miles of piping, but price is still the same. But don't think you can get it "any old day" at same old price. I'll sell it now cheap, or develop it myself and subdivide—But I'm having to develop it "steady by years," because I have not the capital or capitalists behind me to do it all at once. So, if you are in position to put up $90,000 cash, you can carry the bal. for 3 years (or until sooner sold) at 5 per cent. net, and you can clear over a hundred thousand on it—Why don't I do it? Simply because money is scarce? No, but because these blooming tight-wads who have it want me to give 'em security when I ask 'em to lend it to me. And this, and everything else the old man has been able to corral already has a "Bank Brand" on it. And I don't seem to be able to get it off! So if you've got the money you don't need to go to Mexico, nor Mendocino to get a "subdivision" but you can get it right here, where you could take a crowd of home-seekers out in 2 hours on an auction excursion and give 'em a sandwich of hot air and cold tongue or nice slice of the left hind leg of a frolicking lamb and a glass of Rialto lemonade and sell the whole bloomin' shooting match in less time than it would take you to pack your grip for a trip to one of these "sight unseen" subdivisions somewhere between El Diablo and the Deep Blue Sea.

Buy Big Acreage and buy it near Los Angeles with electric, steam and auto transportation, and if you don't make 100 per cent. on it (IF YOU BUY THIS,) in two years, then you just come back to the old man and he'll—sympathize with you! But just let him whisper in your ear right here that he can't promise you MUCH sympathy, he's spent nearly all he had on these cold-footed quitters who have sat around Los Angeles for 20 years living on, or starving on, 3 or 4 per cent. interest, while opportunities to get rich, by having confidence in Sou. Cal. have been flying around them as thick as "dead soldiers" from the "Anheuser Army" around a herd of B.P.O.E.s! And if you think that isn't thick some, then "Budweiser is no friend of yours" and "you're not onto your job"—as a Thinkist! But such opportunities as this I'm offering don't grow on every Anheuser Busch you meet and but very few others, so you'd better "get busy" (pronounced bizzy, not boozey) and "drop in on" the old man and mash the title to this land outen him, and make a little fortune while "the crowd" is trying to make sardine cans out of Uncle Henry E's Beach Buggies.

Don't forget that I'm offering you "the best"—and easy terms, but DON'T come "tradin' "! The old man cut his eye teeth on these "trading trinkets" long before some of you smooth real estate guys knew the difference between an Eastern Gold Brick Kiln and Spring street Fortune Farm! So, unless you're able to play the game at 90,000 Bucks a throw, you'd better not "sit in"! You can't feed the "kitty" on "chips and whetstones" while the old man is the dealer—Whatever that means! It's got to be the real Uncle Samuel Simoleans or the lights will be put out so quick you can't see the dark! But if you want a "square deal" come and look the old man in the eyeglasses and tell him your troubles—and if it's a plethora of the Plural Plunk Sac, he'll agree to remove the Plunks absolutely without pain and guarantee a cure!

He diagnoses your case "without asking a question"—simply feels your Plunk Pulse and if it beats 90 thousand "at" the minute, it's you to that 2000-acre Rialto "Bones" yard, where you'll grow "Bones" to burn, while the old man will take those $90,000 Plunks and declare a dividend on his debts that will enable him to borrow enough more to spend the summer at his Country Villa—at Watts.

If you want any more definite or dignified information, see the old man at No. 447 Wilcox Bldg., and he'll show you maps and rights of way 'till you can't rest! When you talk with your Uncle Confed you're talking with the "Owner." BOAZ DUNCAN, 447 Wilcox Bldg. x4

FOR SALE—LAND IN LARGE OR SMALL tracts at $17.50 per acre. The land adjoining has been colonized and is now under cultivation and selling for $60 per acre. For reference read the following report from the Bureau of Soils, U. S. Department of Agriculture:—

After having examined your lands west of Mendota, I have ascertained the following facts:—

Your soil is a shale loam derived from the decomposed materials in the Coast Range from the west. It is of uniform texture to a determined depth of fifty feet and to an unknown depth beyond. The soil is very rich, especially so in lime which not only makes it a lasting and permanent alfalfa soil, but by the action of lime it is well flocculated, causing it to be friable and free, thus easily cultivated.

It follows for the above reasons that percolation and drainage are excellent and hence the soil should never become sour or water-logged.

This land is very uniformly level, requiring but small cost and preparation to fit it for irrigation, and will make excellent alfalfa and grain lands, and, so far as the soil is concerned, should make good vine and tree lands. (Signed) W. W. MACKIE.

FOR EXCHANE—I HAVE $10,000 CASH, and a fine well-established profit-producing ranch near Albuquerque, N. M., which I will bunch together and exchange for Southern California orange grove, alfalfa or fruit ranch or well located Los Angeles city property. My ranch is all under cultivation and includes 35 acres in grain and 28 acres covered with a fine stand of A. No.-1 alfalfa. All property fenced and cross-fenced; located one and one-half miles north of Albuquerque, and only one mile from electric car line. The property adjoins Senator Foraker's well-known farm, and the government Indian school lands. The ranch is entirely clear of all encumbrances. Buildings on the property include a fine six-room new house, a barn 40x50, a two-story cement block house of seven rooms, another barn 35x50, a fine set of stock scales, and a windmill with a 5000-gallon tank. There are two fine wells of water for domestic use on the property. The main ditch of the Acequa bounds the land on the east and a perpetual water right goes with the property. The entire land includes 63 acres. If desired, the stock will be sold with the land or separately. The stock includes four head of fine big draught horses, 20 head of high-grade Jersey cows, 140 head of marketable hogs, and 100 healthy chickens. With this stock, wagons, harness and a large equipment of farm implements will be included and sold for $3500 on reasonable terms. The property and out-buildings may be had for $12,000 on easy terms. Here is an opportunity for somebody to dispose of Southern California ranch property or city real estate that is good, honest value at $20,000 or $25,000 value. I have a good, live salable property and the ready cash, and I'll do business quickly with the man who has the right proposition. If you have anything suitable to offer, write to, or call on my Los Angeles agents,

FOR SALE—TO "LINER" ADVERTISERS: Dating from June 1, classified advertising in The Times will be charged by the word at the present established rate of 1c per word in the daily issue and 1¼c Sunday.
Close calculations, covering a period of several months, develop the fact that the average number of words to the line are a fraction over seven. This basis for charge, therefore, will prevail after June 1.
Cash "want" advertising has always been calculated by the word, and this regulation will not change the manner of handling it.
The present "want" ad. rate has been in effect for many years, though the circulation of the paper, now more than 50,000 daily and 80,000 Sundays, has trebled during this period. No paper in the United States, rate considered, compares with The Times in "want" ad. service.

509-511 S. MAIN STREET.
WANTED—FURNISHED ROOMS.

That's the cry of thousands of strangers who will be in our city next week. If you have an unfurnished room, see us immediately. A few dollars will furnish it nicely; not necessary to have the cash, either. A dollar or so a week will do.

Our second floor is crowded with SLIGHTLY USED furniture of every description; you will find one of the largest and most complete stocks to select from at about half and in many instances less than half what other stores charge you.

DO IT NOW! DON'T DELAY!

Already we are rushed with orders to fill. Extra wagons have been engaged to insure prompt delivery.

We most cordially invite visitors to inspect our immense stock of SLIGHTLY USED furniture. To make it a banner week we have marked every article in plain figures at an especially low price, and remember, we pack and prepay the freight to nearly all Southern California points.

Hundreds of SLIGHTLY USED Bedroom Sets, Odd Dressers, Chiffoniers, Sideboards, Buffets, Extension Tables, Iron Beds, Folding Beds, Springs, Mattresses, Couches, Upholstered and Bamboo Goods, Center Stands, Rockers, Chairs, Carpets, Rugs, Stoves and everything to furnish a home with.

Bring the measurement of your room, as we have about a thousand SLIGHTLY USED Carpets and Rugs of all grades which we have taken in part payment on new ones. You will be able to save at least 50 per cent. Let us show you.

ICE CHESTS.

Why pay a big price for an Ice Chest, when we have over a hundred SLIGHTLY USED ones at about half price, all sizes.

WANTED—

HIGH-CLASS BUSINESS MAN OF STANDING AND INFLUENCE, to join in the MANAGEMENT AND FORMATION OF A TAXICAB COMPANY in LOS ANGELES, the operation of which in every instance is highly lucrative, with very small risks.

APPLICANTS must have some capital of their own, and must be able to enlist some capital and men of influence.

We are prepared to assist largely in financing the Company.

APPLICANTS must state age, previous business experience, and furnish references of the highest character.

THOMAS MOTOR CAB COMPANY,
BUFFALO, N. Y.

HOME BUILDERS OF LOS ANGELES. (INcorporated 1905,) which builds and sells swell homes to reliable, salaried and working people on installment payments; has earned its stockholders to date 135 per cent. profit; an average in excess of 41 per cent. a year.

DIVIDEND PAYING.

Home Builders has paid 125 per cent. dividend in cash in four years, and 40 per cent. in increased value of stock. Its income now is sufficient for it—and it guarantees—to pay cash dividends from surplus earnings of 10 per cent. each year on the actual value of its stock—and that is the figure at which its stock will be sold. Figuring from its experience Home Builders could pay double or thrice or even four times that dividend; but it is intended to re-invest surplus profits and thus increase the value of shares rapidly and give those who buy stock in Home Builders of Los Angeles a continued and steady dividend, increasing in amount each quarter, as the shares grow in value. This stock, in limited quantity, is now offered for subscription—the proceeds to go at once into homes for people who are waiting and anxious to buy them under our plan. The price is now 35 cents a share. Subscriptions for not exceeding one thousand shares are solicited for cash. Our capitalization is small, and allotted parcels of stock will be taken quickly. As our capital is invested the value of shares grows enormously from profits on sales. You can buy now for just about half what Home Builders of Los Angeles stock will cost, and will be worth, one year from now. And, remember, you cannot buy at all unless Home Builders needs more capital for its business. Write or call for detailed information.

TO "LINER" ADVERTISERS:

Dating from June 1, classified advertising in The Times will be charged by the word at the present established rate of 1c per word in the daily issue and 1½c Sunday.

Close calculations, covering a period of several months, develop the fact that the average number of words to the line are a fraction over seven. This basis for charge, therefore, will prevail after June 1.

Cash "want" advertising has always been calculated by the word, and this regulation will not change the manner of handling it.

The present "want" ad. rate has been in effect for many years, though the circulation of the paper, now more than 50,000 daily and 80,000 Sundays, has trebled during this period. No paper in the United States, rate considered, compares with The Times in "want" ad. service.

ANTICIPATES THE FOURTH.

Fraction Gives Feeble Imitation of Skyrocket on Los Angeles-Nevada Exchange.

Combination Fraction anticipated the Fourth of July on yesterday's brief session of the Los Angeles-Nevada Mining Exchange by feeble attempt to imitate a skyrocket. It gained 3 points in the bid and 4 points in the asked price. Florence and Goldfield Consolidated lay dormant in the grooves of Friday. Daisy tried "to start something" in the way of trading activity, but with little success.

Six hundred shares of Fraction were handled at 57@59, and 100 at 59, under the buyer 30-day contract. The issue closed at 58@61.

A thousand shares of Daisy sold at 22, and this stock closed at 22@23, unchanged in the bid and off another half point in the asked price.

Two thousand shares of Consolidated Mines changed hands at 1⅝; 100 of Copper Creek at 80; 2000 of Johnnie Mining and Milling at 13⅝, and 1000 of North American Mining at 5.

Twenty shares of Mexican Petroleum were marketed at 19.25.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

SEATTLE (Wash.) June 28.—In the largest State building on the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition grounds, the comprehensive display of California is shown. The edifice is a striking architectural achievement of the old Spanish mission design. The imposing front entrance is guarded by two monster lions, but, like the wooden Indian, they harm no one, as they are made of peaches.

On entering the building, a large elephant, which has stood in many exposition buildings and the skin of which is made from walnut shells, gazes with orange-colored eyes on the passing show. Other beasts, wonderfully constructed and wonderfully tame, stand in this wonderful menagerie. There is the raisin bear, and the almond cow, and many other animals which never were read about in the story of Noah's ark.

A feast for the eyes and one which would be a feast for the "inner man" as well, covers the center of the building. This is the fruit pavilion. A huge cornucopia as the high central point of the pavilion, empties fruit, nuts, grains and other products of the State. Although it looks as if the four corners of the globe had been searched in an endeavor here to gather all the fruits and products which are shown, it is only the sunny slopes of the "Land of Perpetual Summer" which have thus given of their bounteous store for the enlightenment and pleasure of the many visitors.

Outside the pavilion are glass jars of fruit from the various counties. In the background are panels made from grains, seeds and nuts of different colors worked in intricate designs. At each corner of the pavilion is a small reception room and office, representative of the four districts of the State, the northern and southern counties and the San Joaquin and Sacramento valleys.

The interior of the fruit pavilion is divided into four distinct parts by the exhibits. Many art prints of scenes in the respective districts are on the walls. Light is obtained through a large skylight, and shines down through what is apparently art glass, but is only common glass with the skins of fruit so pressed there as to give a rainbow hue to the interior.

GEMS IN GREAT VARIETY.

The largest collection of valuable gems on the grounds is exhibited in the California building, and the stones are all from the sunny State. Almost every gem known in the jewelry world, excepting the diamond, is found in California, and a specimen is on display. The mineral exhibit here is also one well worth looking over.

In the mining department is shown in miniature a gold dredging outfit at work. This new way of digging for the yellow metal has been the subject of lectures throughout the country the past year or so.

Three silk exhibits showing the process from the cocoon to the finished product makes one of the most interesting displays in the building, and is a feature that is always surrounded by a throng of people.

Chickens are hatched out every day by the numerous incubators. The electric incubator is drawing the most attention, as it is the first time this recent invention has been on exhibition. One incubator is used only for hatching ostrich eggs, and naturally is proving quite an attraction.

The salt and borax industries are shown to advantage. A moving model of the famous twenty-mule team pulling a load of borax across Death Valley attracts particular attention to this department.

Canned and preserved fruits, wines, olive oil, honey and other important products and industries have a large space given to their display.

On the lower floor is the lecture room, in which half-hour illustrated talks on California are given.

Ascending to the upper floor, the first thing which greets the eye is the magnificent panoramic view showing the mining, agricultural, fruit raising and forestry industries and scenes relating to them. This splendid hand-painted frieze of California is 400 feet in length and nine feet in width, and circling as it does the large dome near the skylight, is shown to the best of advantage.

FINE SHOW FOR SCHOOLS.

California, more than any other State, has brought together an interesting collection of school work. This is not the usual written work and drawings, but a collection of the objects made in the highly progressive trade schools, which have gained a world-wide fame. This sort, the making of furniture, tools, and the work of the domestic science schools, is an exhibit which can be easily comprehended and viewed as the visitor walks slowly along the gallery. Almost every industrial school and school of mechanic arts in the State has a good collection on view. Oakland has an especially fine one in basketry and bent metal, the work of grade pupils. The Polytechnic High School of Los Angeles, Leland Stanford, Jr., University, the Cogswell School of Mechanic Arts and the James Lick School, or California School of Mechanic Arts, are among the better-known institutions with excellent exhibitions. The display is a credit to the State, and shows what California is accomplishing in giving its students a "doing and working" education.

In the educational department are historical Indian relics. There is also in this department along the north wall a $50,000 display of photo transparencies from the Lick Observatory. Many of the views were taken on expeditions for obtaining the eclipses of the sun, and are priceless. They were only returned in May from the National Italian Museum, where they had been on exhibition.

Another display which California has made a leading feature is that of paintings by local artists, many of whom have a national reputation. The exact value of the exhibit is hard to estimate, but it will total many thousands of dollars. It is the only State art display at the exposition.

POTTERY, LEATHER AND BRASS.

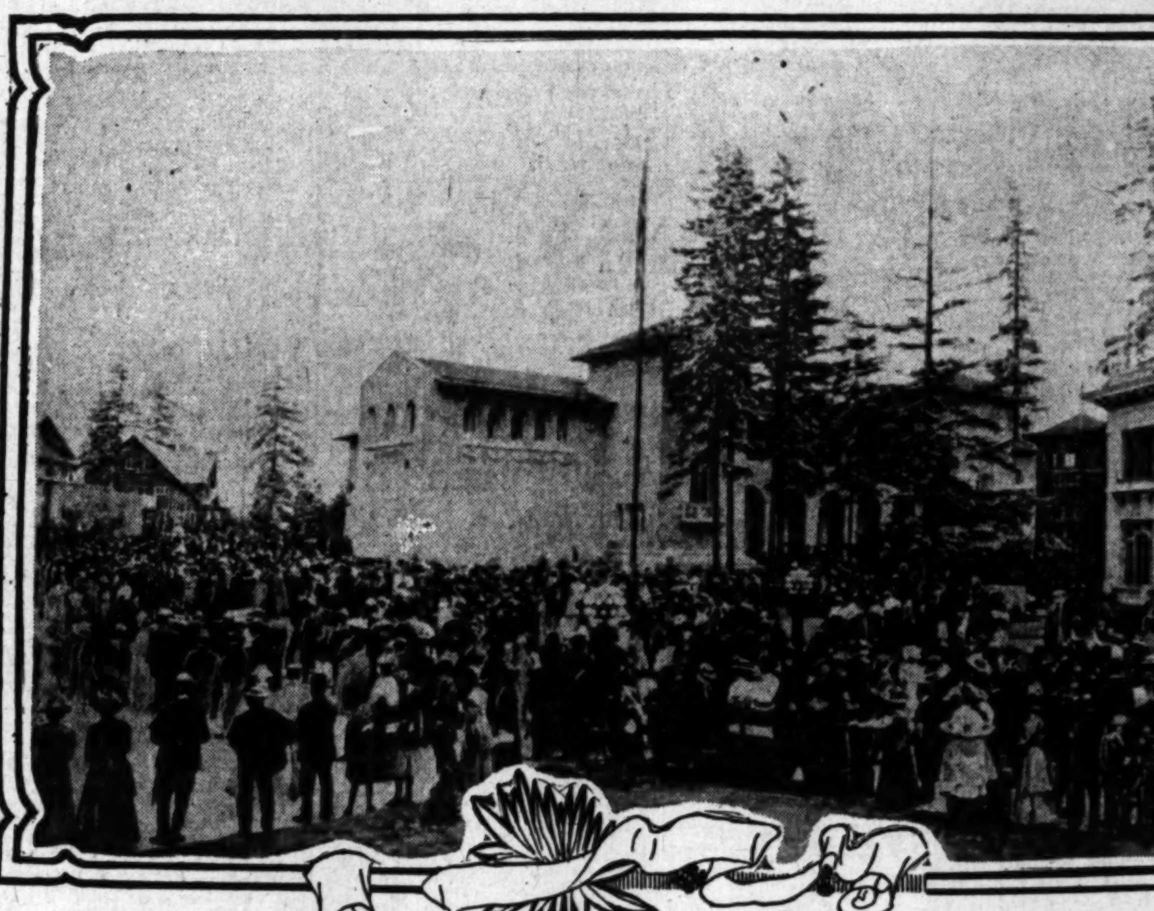
Pottery, leather work, jewelry, silver and brass work, and the other branche sof the craft make a most tasteful feature. Two of the paintings are by Miss E. Almond Withrow, and the entire charge of this valuable display is under her personal care.

The California building has a large public reception room, where visitors are supplied with all the information they desire.

A book weighing 555 pounds and covering a space of 7x3 feet is used for the registration of all visitors to the exposition. The Portland Fair brought 65,000 people from California, and it is expected that by the time the last Californian has inscribed his nam ein this ponderous book, at the present exposition, the number who came to Seattle will far exceed that figure. For the convenience of the Californians the card index system is used exclusively.

A list of all Californians in Seattle and of the hotel at which they are staying is kept up to date, and is proving popular, as it aids materially in locating relatives or acquaintances who happen to be in the city at the same time as the inquirer.

The appropriation for the California building was $100,000, and the commission in whose charge the fund was placed is composed of Gov. Gillett, J. A. Filcher, Frank Wiggins and J. A. Dennison.



This building (California) besieged more than any other on opening day and every day since.

CAN'T RESIST.

TOURISTS BECOME RESIDENTS.

REDLANDS, July 3.—A high-class tourist hotel as a means of bringing the most desirable class of permanent residents to a city, cannot be beaten. There is nothing like seeing a thing to be convinced of its merits. In this connection it is extremely interesting to note the great number of large and substantial real estate deals which have been completed in Redlands this season in which the purchasers were wealthy tourists, enjoying the hospitality of one of the Redlands hotels. Many of these people have come here with the expectation of staying only a few days or weeks, but have been so attracted by the beauties of the city, its perfect climate, many handsome homes and delightful atmosphere of culture and refinement that they have decided to purchase homes and spend in the future a portion of each season in Redlands.

Among the largest of these deals was the purchase by A. B. Stickney of a twenty-nine-acre grove belonging to Warren Tucker, for which he paid $40,000. Mr. Stickney came here a short time ago from St. Paul. On his second ride about the city he purchased this beautiful grove, improved with a modern eight-room bungalow. Last year's crop amounted to over 6000 boxes of oranges.

Earlier in the season, E. F. McCormick of Chicago, who with his family came here from Chicago, expecting to stay only a few weeks, purchased from Dr. J. F. Miller his beautiful eighteen-acre grove on Garden street, paying therefor $30,000. The grove is improved with a fine residence. Mr. and Mrs. William J. Harley of Fall River, Mass., have purchased a charming home in the center of a ten-acre grove on Brookside avenue, paying $14,000, and are now residents of Redlands.

Some time ago, Mrs. F. J. Miller of Chicago purchased the Charles H. Hersee place on Terrasina boulevard, paying $9500, and is now residing there. Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Martin of New York City on Monday of this week purchased the handsome H. W. Johnstone home in the Country Club district, paying $8000. With the home goes two acres set to oranges. The house is situated on a knoll overlooking the city and valley. Mrs. Hermann Schmitt, who with Mr. Schmitt came here from New York early in the season, on Saturday purchased the J. W. Edwards home opposite the hotel, paying in the neighborhood of $6000. Mr. Schmitt will probably move the house off and erect a modern home, where she will reside hereafter.

There is a movement on foot by a company of local business men to erect a natatorium on State street, south of Orange street, to cost $15,000. An immense swimming tank will be a feature, and there will also be Turkish baths. It goes without saying that such a ninstitution cannot do other than pay well during the warm months.

At the regular service of the Congregational Church, held Sunday morning, K. H. Field presented a plan for enlarging and improving the Sunday-schoolrooms of the church by the installation of private classrooms. The cost will be in the neighborhood of $6000, and will probably be attended to this summer, and be made ready for occupancy November 1.

Mrs. Lucy Painter recently sold to an eastern man a seven-acre grove set to Washington navels, receiving $11,500. The grove is located on Terracina Heights, and is improved with a small cottage. I. W. Freeman has sold twenty acres in Yucaipa Valley, west of Cherrycroft, to Clyde Cormack of Los Angeles. The place is partly set to cherries and apricots, and carries water stock. The price paid was $2500. The property was controlled by the Southern California Colonization Bureau.

The total building permits for the week ending today amounted to $17,625. An average of one permit for each day of the month has been taken out. The homes going up are for the most part modern bungalows.

MILLION MARK LEFT BEHIND

Permits Show Wonderful Gain Over Last Year.

Los Angeles Contractors for Grant Hotel Job.

Continued Activity in the Country Towns.

SAN DIEGO, July 3.—The aggregate value of building permits in San Diego passed the million-dollar mark before July Fourth came around to be celebrated.

A permit taken out Thursday for the completion of the U. S. Grant Hotel and office building calls for $350,000 worth of work. This swelled the aggregate for the year so far to $1,188,706, which is $81,340 greater than for the same period last year. During the same period in 1908 the total was $1,107,810. A number of leading Los Angeles contractors spent several days of the week here figuring on contracts on the hotel building. The general woodwork will probably be let to F. O. Engstrum; elevator installation to the Llewellyn Iron Works and smaller contracts to the Foulkes-Gaylord Company, and the marble work to B. V. Collins. The interior will be patterned after the Alexandria in Los Angeles.

Another large structure on which work is progressing is the ten-story office building at Fifth and D streets for the American Land and Building Company. R. P. Shields & Son, general contractors, report the completion of excavating for the twelve-foot basement. The steel work will begin Monday.

W. S. Hebbard of this city has been chosen by the Board of Education to prepare plans for three new school buildings. It is not definitely decided whether to make the buildings of two or four-room size. However, the same set of plans will be prepared for all three structures. One is to be built at Ocean Beach, another on University Heights and the third in Chollas Valley.

Ocean Beach, a new pleasure resort on the ocean side of Point Loma, is a busy scene in the line of building operations. Owners of the tract have awarded a contract to the Russ Lumber Company for the erection of a 700-foot pier. It will extend to deep water and will be fifty feet in width at the end. Work is to begin in the immediate future on artistic seashore cottages for Eugene Qaney, W. B. Gavin, Councilman Frank Salmons, Louis J. Wilde, Wilson Chamberlain and other San Diego business men. A bath-house has also just been started on which will have a plunge feet, besides a separate plunge for children. In design the building is to be typical California mission style with a bungalow appearance. The Salmons-Chamberlain Company is the builder of the structure.

John Engebretsen, a prominent contractor, has purchased a fifty-foot lot Twelfth street between G and H for The ground was bought of Mrs. D. A. Bailey. A handsome home will be by Engebretsen.

MT. WASHINGTON CLIMATIC CONDITIONS PRACTICALLY PERFECT

Several Degrees Cooler Than the City Below on the Hottest Day. A Winning Feature.

Summer climatic comfort is a strong feature of Mt. Washington. The unusual height of this big eminence (1,000 feet above sea level), permits the cool sea breezes to sweep over it unobstructed. While the populace is sweltering throughout the city below—up on Mt. Washington the atmospheric conditions are delightful. It is never too warm for perfect comfort. This climatic feature is a strong residential asset and will, undoubtedly, appeal to discriminating people. From a simple health standpoint, Mt. Washington is positively unsurpassed in Southern California. It is always free from smoke, dust and fog—in fact, residing on Mt. Washington is almost like living in the pure ozone of the mountains. It might be called a natural sanitarium.

BIG CROWD DISAPPOINTED

Power Company Failed to Supply "Juice" for Incline Railway Last Sunday Forenoon.

Owing to an unavoidable accident in the Pacific Light & Power Company's system, there was no "juice" supplied to the power house of the L. A. and Mt. Washington Incline Railway last Sunday morning, and a large crowd of visitors were disappointed. The current was turned on in the afternoon, however, and the cars brought enthusiastic throngs to the summit. Many made the ascent on foot during the morning via Mt. Washington Drive. This is the first unpleasant incident that has occurred since the opening of the railway. It is something that might never occur again in years.

BEAUTIFUL HOME NEARING COMPLETION

The beautiful residence of Mr. A. P. Barnes, founder of the Bond Baking Company, is rapidly nearing completion, and will be occupied by Mr. Barnes and family about the middle of August. The residence is prettily situated on San Rafael Avenue, one of Mt. Washington's finest thoroughfares.

ONE HUNDRED AND FIFTY MILES OF OCEAN VISTA

It really seems remarkable, but it is nevertheless a fact, that Mt. Washington on clear days commands a distinct view of nearly 150 miles of ocean frontage. Thursday morning a representative of the EAGLE visited Mt. Washington with a party of friends, when the old Pacific from Santa Monica to Newport Beach stretched out in vivid blue and presented a magnificent marine panorama. Where else can a similar view be obtained within twenty minutes of the down-town district?

BIG GAIN IN PERMITS ISSUED.

SOUTH PASADENA, July 3.—June showed considerable improvement over the preceding month in the matter of new construction, the total valuation of buildings as indicated by the permits issued by Building Inspector Haylor being $68,367. This shows a gain of $12,917 over May, and of $16,495, as compared with the corresponding month of last year. The June permits bring the total for the first six months of the year up to $350,907, or $158,838 in excess of the record for the corresponding period in 1908.

Ingram & Briggs, the selling agents for the new Oxley Court tract, owned by Bert F. Mull and situated on the south side of Oxley street, between Stratford avenue and Elm street, report that seven of the twelve lots have already been sold, even though the tract has only been on the market two weeks. It will be highly improved as a private subdivision with wide entrance courts, petrolithic pavements, cement curbs and sidewalks, and the water and gas are already in. This private tract is something new in this city.

A BUSY MONTH.

NEW PERMITS BREAK RECORD.

SANTA ANA, July 2.—The month of June was the biggest month Santa Ana ever had for building permits, and Building Inspector Roper says he believes July will again break a record. June totaled $66,660. Permits were taken out for four buildings, each $12,000 or more. Three of the permits were for business blocks and one for the First Christian Church.

The First Congregational Church this week advertised for bids for the erection of its new building at the corner of Main and Seventh streets. The Building Committee of the church estimates that the cost of the church complete with all furnishings except the organ will be $22,000.

GREAT RECORD.

PERMITS FOR HALF-YEAR MANY.

POMONA, July 3.—The report of Building Inspector Cowles shows that during the first six months of this year building permits to the amount of $321,000 were issued here. This is $182,000 more than during the same period last year, and $208,000 greater than the first six months of 1907.

This year the total cost of new buildings erected will reach $600,000, according to reliable estimates. All contractors and carpenters here have been busy for months. During June $52,600 worth of building permits were issued, an increase of $11,000 over June of 1908.

THE MARKET.

BY OWNERS AND DEALERS.

NEWS OF THE WEEK IN REAL ESTATE CIRCLES.

Demand for Small Properties Continues and Sales Are Numerous at Firm Prices—Ordinary Summer Lethargy But Slightly Affects Present Realty Market.

To say that there is not a sign of the ordinary lethargy which affects the realty market during the hot months of the year would be a slight misstatement of the facts. Last week was a remarkably busy week in real estate circles, considering the season, and week before last would have been a good week in any season. Altogether the average is a most gratifying one, and must be considered as an earnest of record-breaking activity in the fall. In the number of transfers of property June surpassed every other month of the past half-year with the exception of April, and there is no reason to believe that July will lag behind, either month. Seaward things are livening up wonderfully in response to the move for consolidation, and north, east, south and west deals are numerous in all classes of improved and unimproved property. The following sales reports confirm this statement:

"Home Builders" Are Active.

An augmented force of men is rapidly completing the laying of the water power lines of the electric-light plant in Edgar Cañon.

To Handle Eucalyptus Land.

Charles J. Getz is president; Theodore P. Cartwright, vice-president and treasurer; Charles S. Spurr, secretary. The business of the firm will be the buying and selling of mortgages, loans and a general real estate dealing. It will act as general agent of the Eucalyptus Tree Company, which owns a thousand acres of land in Kern county now being prepared for eucalyptus planting, and which will be placed upon the market within the next thirty days.

BUILD SIX STORIES.

Structure for Crane Company on East Third Will Be One of Best of Class in West.

The building to be erected and occupied by the Los Angeles branch of the Crane company, manufacturers of valves, fittings and plumbing goods, will be one of the largest and most complete of its class in the West. The structure will occupy a site on the north side of Third street, 110 feet west of San Pedro, and will be six stories in height, and cost in the neighborhood of $100,000. The plans were prepared by Morgan & Walls.

The building will have a frontage of 89 feet and a depth of 100 feet, and a commodious basement will be extended under the entire first floor space. The construction will be of the class "A" fireproof type, with skeleton steel frame, reinforced concrete floors and concrete fireproofing. The front will be faced with red pressed brick, and will present an attractive elevation. The building will be pushed to speedy completion, and will be ready for occupancy early in the coming winter.

The Crane company owns an adjacent property at the rear of the site of its new building, 100x190 feet, and fronting on San Pedro street, and here will be located the pipe warehouse and machine shops, in a two-story structure 100 feet square. A railroad switch extending through from San Pedro street, between the two buildings, will give the company unsurpassed facilities for handling their goods.

HOT WEATHER ACTIVITY.

The Edwards & Wildey Company report the sale to J. Frank Bowen, for Frank Cole and G. L. Louden, of ten lots 100x150 feet on the east side of Grand avenue, between Twenty-third and Twenty-fourth streets. The property is improved with two two-story houses, at Nos. 2316 and 2320 South Grand avenue, and the consideration reported is $25,000. The same firm sold for Victor H. Kleinberger to John F. Andrews, a lot 68x150 feet on the east side of Harvard boulevard, between Fifth and Sixth streets, the consideration being $3100. For S. L. Lowry to H. A. Ragland, a lot 50x135 feet on Leighton avenue, near Budlong, for $1200. For C. D. Hoover to E. L. Bradshaw, a lot 70x150 feet on the east side of Manhattan boulevard, near Sixth, for a consideration of $2450.

NEW HIGH SCHOOL.

Montebello to Build Spanish Mission Structure Which Will Be Credit to Section.

Montebello is preparing to build one of the most beautiful and complete High School buildings in Southern California. The plans have been prepared and bids for construction will be received by the board of trustees July 8. The specifications call for a reinforced concrete or brick structure, cement plastered on the exterior. The design is in the Spanish Mission type, and with its towers, many gables, wide, projecting eaves, hoods and arched ways, the effect is striking. The exact location of the building is yet to be decided by a vote of the district.

The structure has a frontage of 171 feet, and is 121 feet deep. The main floor has 14-foot ceilings, and the basement 10-foot ceilings. The latter is three feet in the ground. The main floor contains five large recitation-rooms, large commercial department, with type-writing room, chemical laboratory, physical laboratory, large lecture-room, teacher's laboratory, library, office, artroom and large auditorium, with stage and dressing-rooms. The basement contains manual training, sloyd, gymnasium, domestic science rooms, two large recreation rooms, furnace and fresh-air rooms, janitor's room, bicycle-rooms and toilets.

The building will have the forced-draught heating and ventilating system. The plumbing system is of the best, and ample fixtures are provided for in all particulars. The entire building will be piped for acetylene lighting, and an automatic lighting plant installed, and will also be wired for electric lighting.

The interior will be plastered with hard wall plaster and the walls tinted and decorated.

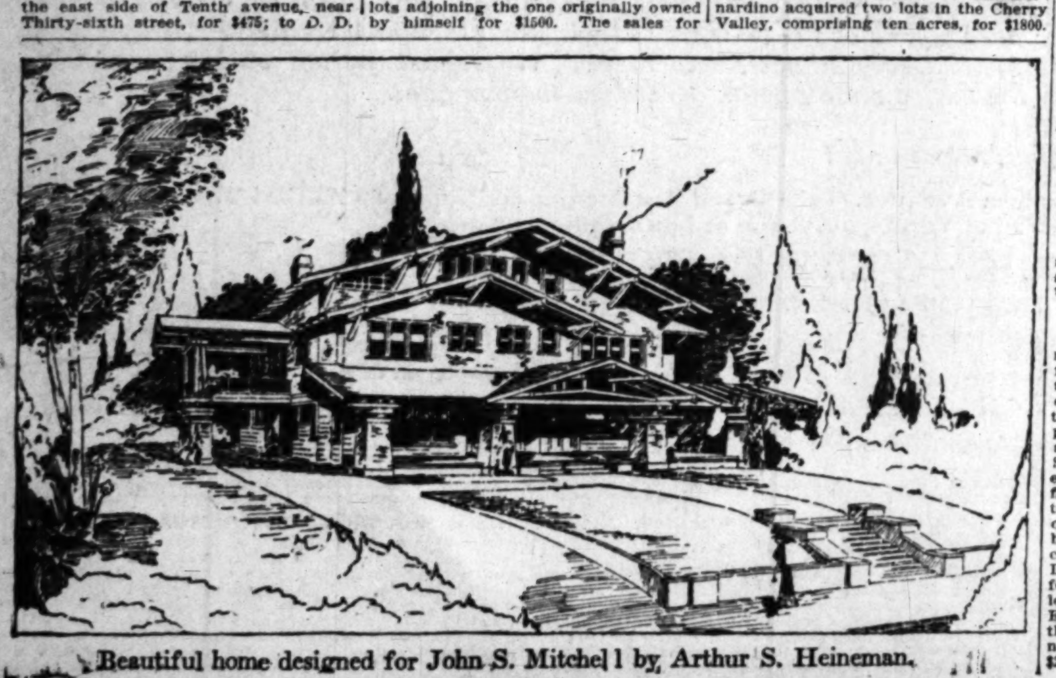
The drawings were prepared by Architect A. C. Smith, and the building will be erected under his supervision. The cost of the building will be about $30,000.

THE ESCONDIDO VALLEY.

The Escondido Valley Land and Planting Company have plotted the 2000-acre McCoy ranch adjoining the town of Escondido on the south, and are improving it by laying out roads and drilling wells. Among those who bought last week are Samuel Davidale of Los Angeles, fifteen acres, to be planted to grapes, the consideration being $2625; Mr. Sterling of San Francisco, ten acres, to be planted to grapes, for $1750; M. A. Hall of Denver, Colo., nine and one-half acres, to be planted to grapes, for $1900. Many new houses are being erected in the town, and the new forty-room hotel being built by Mr. Ramey is nearing completion. The county is to be bonded for $1,500,000 for good roads, and four of these radiate from Escondido, connecting the town with the fertile valleys in the back country.

BUILDS NEW HOME.

Contracts were let to the Alta Planing Mill Company, on June 28, for the erection of a handsome new home for W. M. Miles on the north side of Twentieth street, near Western avenue. The cost of the dwelling will be about $16,000. The exterior will be of brick on the first floor and of frame above, and the house will be about 55 feet square. The lot is 100x200 feet. The interior arrangement embodies features of both elegance and convenience, and the finish is in hardwood throughout. John C. Austin is the architect.



Beautiful home designed for John S. Mitchell by, Arthur S. Heineman.

BUILDS BEAUTIFUL HOME.

Breadth and Solidity Mark Exterior and Interior Is Treated in Variety of Styles.

John S. Mitchell is building a residence to cost about $30,000, including the grounds. It is situated in Chapman Park, on the southwest corner of Alexandria and Fourth streets, on lot 150x155 feet.

The house contains fourteen rooms, besides a ballroom on the third floor and billiard-room in the basement. The treatment of the exterior is characterized by breadth and solidity of appearance, the materials being brick and timbers. The scheme for the finishing of the living-room is American-Indian in style—windows, doors and fireplace being carved with the cabalistic signs and scrolls of the "Hopi" and other tribes. The ceiling of the dining-room is vaulted.

A Japanese tea and lounging-room beyond the reception hall will be features. Each bedroom is en suite with private bath and several have adjoining dressing-rooms. The building will have such conveniences as sleeping porches, built-in safe, ice chest, dumb waiter, inter-communicating phones and moth-proof clothes presses. The floors are hardwood; the bathrooms tiled. The servants' quarters adjoin the garage situated in the rear of the main building.

The building was designed and is being erected under the supervision of Architect Arthur S. Heineman.

JUNE'S BUSINESS.

Summary of Transactions for Last Month and Half-Year Show Good Realty Conditions.

June was a busy month in real estate circles in this city and section, 4651 transfers being recorded during the period, an average of 179 per day. This total is surpassed by March with a transfer record of 5013 and by April with 4854, but the daily average is declared by most real estate men to be a most gratifying one for the hot-weather season.

Trust deeds filed numbered 450 as compared with 431 for May. Mortgages placed on record numbered 1857 and represented a valuation of $4,688,504, compared with 1897 items at a valuation of $5,780,563 for May. Releases for June and May numbered 1683 and 1717, respectively.

For the half year beginning January 1 and ending June 30, the total number of transfers was 27,642, an average of 183 a day. Thus it will be seen that June, which is ordinarily suposed to represent an anti-climax of dullness for the first six months of any year, actually has a daily record but little below the average for the whole period. The total number of trust deeds filed for the half year was 2833, an average of 19 per day.

The total number of mortgages placed on record for the 151 days was 10,703 and the valuation represented was $27,817,855. In all 10,143 releases were recorded during the same time.

The following tabulated statement, prepared monthly by the Fielding J. Stilson Company, shows the business by each day, and furnishes a basis of comparison with previous months as far back as October, 1908:

Victors to Meet McLoughlin and Janes Tomorrow.

May Sutton Captures Honors in Ladies' Events.

In a brilliant and exciting match Bell and Bundy beat Sinsabaugh and Browne in the finals of the men's doubles tennis championships of the Pacific States at the Virginia courts, Long Beach, yesterday afternoon, the score by sets being 6-4, 2-6, 6-4, 6-4.

The winners are to play McLoughlin and Janes of San Francisco in the challenge round on Monday afternoon, and the successful contestants in this match will be sent to Lake Forest, Ill., to represent the Pacific States Tennis Association in the national men's doubles championship tourney.

Miss May Sutton, as expected, captured the women's singles from her sister, Mrs. B. O. Bruce, in straight sets, 6-0, 6-2, and with Mrs. Hickman won the ladies' doubles from Mrs. Bruce and Miss Mary Browne, the score being 6-4, 6-4.

During the morning the first round in the men's consolation doubles was played, the semi-finals and finals of which will be played Monday, previous to the challenge round. Bacon and Young, Galusha and Albright, Crawford and Bumiller, and Rogers and Rogers are the teams playing for the dub honors.

The finals for the men's doubles drew a large attendance of tennis enthusiasts. The stands presented a mass of gay color and the fans took a constant interest in the match. Before the opening set, the dopesters gave either team an equal chance, figuring on the showing they made in the semi-finals yesterday.

TAKE FIRST THREE.

Bell and Bundy took the first three games by magnificent side-line passes, but lost the next two. Both teams then took their own service games. Bell broke through Browne's serve in the next game, winning the game and set, by the score of 6-4, and Sinsabaugh and Browne returned the honors, winning on Sinsabaugh's serve. Bell and Bundy captured the final game and set on Bundy's twist service.

In the second set Sinsabaugh and Browne played their opponents off their feet, capturing five straight games. Sinsabaugh at this point played his best game, volleying at the net with accuracy, and cutting the balls at sharp angles many racquet lengths from Bundy's reach. The next two games went to Bell and Bundy from deuce. Their opponents were playing in phenomenal style, and every point brought a round of applause from the stands.

In the third set Browne weakened slightly, and Bell and Bundy took advantage of his off period to run up the first two games. In the previous set Bell and Bundy seldom came to the net, but they began following their serve and had Sinsabaugh and Browne on the defensive through most of the set.

Sinsabaugh cut off the net balls in his usual champion form, as only Simpson can do, although Bell, receiving behind Bundy, killed everything within reach of his racquet. Sinsabaugh made impossible returns from the back line, and using his head in well-placed lobs saved many needed points.

Bell's ferocious drive piled up many points, and this factor coupled with Nat's fatal tendency to chop into the net, gave Bell and Bundy the lead. Many games reverted to deuce. Bell and Bundy took the fourth and fifth games, then Sinsabaugh and Browne pulled down the next two on Sinsabaugh and Bundy's serve. Sinsabaugh lost the next game on his own serve, and Bundy added another, the winning game, on some of his best service. The set ran 6-4. giving to Bell and Sinsabaugh the second leg of the match.

The fourth and deciding set found Nat still unsteady. Even with two sets against them, Sinsabaugh tried his best to save the match. Bell and Bundy were just as strong, however, and using headwork didn't allow the score to affect their fast pace. Bell varied

HEADED SOUTH FOR THE LINE.

Touring Tourists Reach San Diego on Time.

Amateur Drivers Are Making Records With Veterans.

Wretched Roads Keeping Down Pace of Caravan.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CORONADO, July 3.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Headed for Mexico on one of the most novel motor car endurance runs ever held, thirty Tourist cars, which started from Los Angeles this morning on the second annual tour of the Tourist, reached San Diego tonight.

The dust-covered travelers, in road-scarred touring cars and roadsters, finished the first leg of the run after a comfortable ride over the coast route.

Inexperienced drivers, some of whom have owned Tourist cars only a few weeks, are making records on this run; two-cylinder machines are climbing grades which four-cylinder cars have trouble to top. The new motorists come chugging along nicely over the roughest portions of the road, maintaining a fair rate of speed and making each control on time.

One of the features of the tour is the run of the big repair car which George Kussman is trying to bring through on schedule time, in spite of the many delays while helping the timid ones on the road. Kussman is keeping his car in the running, and then is among the perfect-score winners.

Two tire cars, loaded with impediments for the road battle, are chugging along in the wake of the snake-like procession, which is winding its way through the valleys of the borderland of the Mexican republic. Loaded with tires and special equipment for rapid repair work the machines have reached every control.

The roads are in wretched condition. From the moment the first car pulled away from Tenth and Main streets at 6 o'clock this morning until the dusty cars rolled onto the ferry at Coronado, it has been a fight with dirt, sand, ugly ruts and stiff grades.

The worst roads were encountered immediately after leaving the Los Angeles city limits. It was found to be impossible to make fast time, and the cars were slowed down to fifteen miles an hour by Pacemaker Volney S. Beardsley.

The roads in Orange and San Diego counties are also in wretched condition. For miles and miles the going is over highways which have not been improved for years. Some of the roads remain as they were before motor cars became popular. They are in their original primeval condition. Before the scores of motorists on the tour return to Los Angeles, the Mexican line will be crossed. One of the peculiar features of the tour will be the good roads which will be encountered out of Tia Juana as compared to those on this side of the line. The tourers will visit the quaint old Mexican village Monday and will enjoy a barbecue. A reception for the wanderers awaits them in the old town where a special bull fight has been arranged.

Interesting sidelights on the tour make it intensely interesting to those who are in the cars. The Auto Vehicle Company, under whose auspices the run is given, has provided drivers for all those who have trouble handling their cars. Not a man on the tour has asked for assistance.

ROAD RACE COURSE MECCA OF SPEEDERS.

Eighty Miles an Hour Maintained on Fast Stretches and Wonderful Time Is Predicted—One Ugly Turn May Mean Disaster to Drivers.

SKIMMING along at a speed of at least eighty miles an hour, the space-eating demons that are to try conclusions on the Santa Monica road race course Saturday, were given their first try-outs Thursday and Friday. The result was a surprise to the most enthusiastic. The cars went faster over the Ocean-avenue stretch of the course than anywhere else.

At times the machines hummed along at eighty miles an hour, and better. The course was turned several times in better than nine minutes. The D-shaped track is 8.2 miles. Before the week is two days old several of the cars will be making the circuit at a mile a minute, it is predicted.

There is every indication that the speed estimates of sixty miles or better for the big race are nearer right So fast, in fact, that it can be taken at top speed for almost every foot of the distance.

BAD TURN.

Beginning at the grand stands on Ocean avenue, where the cars will start, the course is a slight down grade to Ocean and Nevada avenues. Here a dangerous turn has been banked with wood planking. This is the most difficult corner on the course and must be taken at slow speed. All cars, with the exception of some of the smaller machines in the small race, drop down to fifteen miles an hour in the trials. The cars in the race will not take this turn faster than thirty miles an hour.

Upon swinging into Nevada avenue a stretch of more than three miles opens away to the Soldiers' Home over

Pope-Hartford Travels Over Four Thousand Miles.

From Lowell to Los Angeles in Forty-three Days.

Transcontinental Journey Is Only Part of Tour.

Ira H. Morse and Mrs. Morse and their chauffeur, Omer Deschenaux, reached Los Angeles Thursday in a Pope-Hartford roadster in which the three had ridden from Lowell, Mass. For more than four thousand miles this hardy trio of autoists fought with the worst roads of this country and won. This long auto journey will take the Pope-Hartford to Seattle and then back across the country, a distance of 10,000 miles.

Outfitted with trunks, extra tires, camping equipment, rifles, ammunition, shovels, poles and a block and pulley, the motorists were prepared for the struggles which they have had. The thirty-five horse-power car has behaved splendidly and the Pope looks good enough for at least 10,000 miles more.

When the car rolled out to the home of C. S. Kittridge, No. 188 Rosetta street, Hollywood, where members of the Morse party will make their headquarters during their stay in this city, it was covered with dust, and scarred from the road battle. The tires were worn almost to the thread, but the engine was in good shape and the car looked like a round-the-world racer.

Into the wilds of Wyoming, through the sandy wastes of Southern Nevada, and over the dismal desolate sands of Death Valley the music of the Pope-Hartford engine sang accompaniment to the crunching of rock and gravel beneath the tires. The car kept rolling on toward the goal and will be sent many more miles before the engine gets a rest.

NOW A FAD.

Long motor journeys are becoming the fad. It is no longer remarkable for a man to undertake a journey of 30,000 miles in an automobile. Motor cars have been built in the past to make long tours. They are now even more near perfect and it is possible to get a greater mileage out of them.

For miles of the long trip the route was through an abandoned wilderness where only trails exist. The road often lost itself in brush-strewn paths which seemed to lead nowhere. At times the autoists were in danger of being dashed down steep inclines. The plucky chauffeur always managed to bring the car through right side up.

One of the stunts pulled off by the autoists was useful on the deserts. Several yards of heavy canvas form a part of the car's equipment. This canvas was particularly useful on the long sandy stretches where the going was difficult and in places where it was impossible to secure traction. The canvas was spread beneath the wheels and the auto was driven along a few feet at a time.

This mode of travel proved especially valuable when a stretch of quicksand in Nevada was crossed. The car would have buried itself in the quaking bog had it not been for the canvas. This canvas road served to bring the car and its crew through safely and without a great deal of difficulty.

On May 18 the Pope-Hartford party left Lowell, Mass., on the first leg of its long run. Soon after starting they overtook E. D. Mead of Greenwich, Ct., who was making the tour to Los Angeles in a Packard "forty." The two traveled together for some distance but became separated in the bad lands of the West.

SEEING THE SIGHTS.

Mr. and Mrs. Morse spent plenty of time seeing the sights and did not hurry over the country. They occupied forty-three days in making the tour, which is good daily mileage for such a distance considering the roads. They made an average of almost 100 miles a day for the entire trip.

They were given an ovation when they left the town of Lowell at noon, May 18. Twenty-four hours later the Packard was to leave from a smaller town in the adjoining State. The two cars accomplished the transcontinental journey in the face of mighty odds.

Mr. Morse is an enthusiastic Pope-Hartford owner. He declares his car can go anywhere. He has taken the machine over roads that would appear to be impassable. Morse says there is no road in this country that he is afraid to tackle.

After a short stay in Los Angeles the Pope-Hartford and its party will motor to Seattle where several weeks will be passed in visiting the fair. Unless plans are changed they will return by the northern route and will follow, for a portion of the tour, the roads covered by the Franklin when the air-cooled car made the record run across the United States.

The Stoddard-Dayton Motor Company reports the following sales last week: George J. Bock, W. S. Morse, J. H. Robinson, Meyer Lissner and Dr. Simonton.

THIS WAY, PLEASE.

FINDS ANOTHER PHOENIX TRAIL.

TOURIST CROSSES DESERT AND BLAZES THE WAY.

Fremeau and Partner in Little Car Come Through Imperial Valley in Search of Route That Does Not Necessitate Use of Ferry—Are Doomed to Use Boat.

Another route from Pheonix to Los Angeles has been discovered. This time it is a two-cylinder Tourist that has blazed the way across the desert. This route also goes through the Imperial Valley but does not touch San Diego. It is just 575 miles long, Ehrenburg is not touched. The Colorado River is crossed at Yuma.

A week ago L. J. Fremeau, and Clyde Wilson, in a two-cylinder Tourist belonging to Dr. Frances Redewell of Phoenix, left the Arizona town for Los Angeles. They decided to choose a route other than across the desert to Ehrenburg. The tiresome ferry was a bugaboo to the two men.

Instead of taking the road by way of Salome they dropped south to Arlington fifty miles from Phoenix and Agua Caliente, forty-seven and one-half miles beyond Arlington. They found the roads fairly good and after leaving Agua Caliente traveled ninety-five miles to Yuma.

Their plans were interrupted at Yuma. They wanted to cross the Colorado River on the railroad ties of the big bridge. The flood waters of the Colorado had risen, however, and the bridge is threatened. They could not cross and had to drop south again to Glamos, about fifteen miles away, where they crossed on a ferry. It was necessary also to cross a lagoon in order to reach the main road. The two could not avoid the ferry.

Fremeau drove the entire way and after crossing the Colorado struck out for Imperial Junction. The road on to San Diego was given up because the country over the hills is not in shape for travel. There is ten miles of road, says Fremeau, that is practically impassable for motor cars. He would have made the attempt, however, had he not found a shorter route.

After leaving Imperial Junction in the Imperial Valley Fremeau struck northwest toward Mecca, a distance of 110 miles. He then passed through Coyote, Dos Palmos, Palm Springs, Indio, Beaumont and Banning.

The overland journey from Phoenix was through roads that are rough and sandy but it was pronounced far better than the road by way of Ehrenburg. The little Tourist showed no signs of distress even when the days were scorching hot. It took six days to make the run.

One of the secrets of the battle with the sands comes in the novel scheme arranged by Fremeau to get traction where the road is bad. Wide canvas covers are prepared for each of the wheels. These are strappd to the tire and are made loose enough to allow for the expansion of the tire. They are secured by heavy straps which buckle over the rim. When inflated these canvass shields form a guard for the tire and enable the machine to get the necessary traction.

This plan could be worked to advantage in the Los Angeles-Phoenix race. A. J. Smith had some such a scheme arranged for his Elmore during the last race. He succeeded in making the best time of any machine through the deeper sands.

Fremeau's run was remarkable in that he reached this city with the Goodyear tires, containing the same air, which had been taken at Phoenix.

ATKINSON TO GO EAST.

Local Autoist to Attend Gathering of Experts Who Will Discuss Motor Topics.

Robert Atkinson of the Schwaebe-Atkinson Motor Company expects to go East in August to attend a convention of agents at the Premier factory. Motor car sellers will be gathered from all sections of the country, and there will be several days of interesting discussion regarding the industry, its progress and the best means of benefiting the Premier business.

L. H. Schwaebe of the same company returned from the East last week, after having visited the Auburn and Premier factories.

"The East is motor mad," said Schwaebe. "Cars are being sold in great numbers and every factory is increasing its output. Instead of an overproduction there is more of a scarcity of cars. There is no indication of a reduction in prices. The tendency is rather the other way."

AUTO OUTLAWS.

Unregistered automobiles are outlawed and have no other rights in the highway than that of being exempt from wanton or wilful injury, according to a decision of the full bench of the Supreme Court of Massachusetts. While driving in the State under the fifteen-day non-resident exemption law, a Connecticut man was injured in collision with an electric car. He sued for $10,000 damages, but lost.

WOMEN ON RUN.

A complete camping outfit, including axes and shovels, is carried by Mrs. Alice R. Ramsey, who is making a transcontinental tour from her home in Hackensack, N. J., to the Pacific Coast in her car, accompanied by a party of women. After reaching San Francisco the fair travelers expect to tour Southern California.

AUTO COURSE FOR RIVERSIDE.

PROMINENT MEN PLAN TO BUILD GREAT SPEEDWAY.

Fifty-two-Acre Site Choice of Those Who Would Build Track on Which Motor Cars Could Be Speeded—Los Angeles Men May Be Asked to Join.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

RIVERSIDE, July 3.—Plans have practically been completed for the construction of an automobile race track near Riverside, which will be the first great automobile speedway in California. Those who are behind the project state that if their plans turn out as expected, this city will possess one of the finest auto tracks in the United States.

The plan is to form a syndicate or club of automobile men and capitalists and issue stock to finance the project. C. A. Dundas, who is one of the prime movers, announces that there will be no delay in the matter. A site of fifty-two acres of level river bottom land near Crestmore is being considered by the promoters for the proposed automobile track.

Its proximity to marble quarries is an advantage, as it is proposed to use marble screenings and marble dust in the construction of the surface. The course will be laid out after the most scientifice methods.

Other proposed attractions in connection with the speedway are a motorcycle track and a swimming pool. It is estimated that $30,000 will be used in carrying out the plans.

There are scores of enthusiastic autoists in Riverside who are said to be willing to back the project. The race course would be close enough to Los Angeles to induce local autoists to make the sixty-two-mile run to Riverside. Los Angeles autoists may be invited to join the project.

POPE-HARTFORD MAKES GOOD.

Motorist Drives from Los Angeles to Tonopah in Twenty Hours and Makes Record.

H. T. Kutzkau of Tonopah, Nev., has just completed a run to that city in a Pope-Hartford, driving the distance in less than twenty-one hours. The best previous time was twenty-five hours. Kutzkau says he found the roads good for the entire distance. He claims to have had no trouble whatever with the car.

The only real hard pull the Pope had was in the Red Rock cañon, writes Kutzkau, when the car became stuck in the sand, which was deep and hard to negotiate. Almost to the hubs the big machine dropped and it was necessary for Kutzkau to shovel away the sand from the wheels before the Pope could pull herself out.

The motorist, with a rope, pulled the car backwards out of the hole. Then he poured oil into his engine and went through the sand on the "high." This was followed by a heavy pull across Deep Spring Valley through twenty miles of sand.

"The roads were heavy," says Kutzkau, "but the little car worked well. The trip was fine and we came through without a murmur. We climbed some heavy grades."

TOUR FROM SAN FRANCISCO.

Party in White Steamer and Mitchell Roadster Drive Leisurely Down the Coast.

Mr. and Mrs. Martin G. Carter reached Los Angeles Wednesday in a White Steamer touring car. They were accompanied by Mr. Carter's brother, Frank M. Carter, who drove a Mitchell roadster. The quartette of motorists came down the Coast route leisurely, stopping at points of interest along the way.

Out of San Francisco the roads were found to be in excellent condition and several side trips were made. Del Monte was visited and the autoists drove over the sixteen-mile road through the pines and along the seashore. Stops were made at San Luis Obispo and at Santa Barbara. The trip was enjoyable.

Cleveland, O., has been selected as the meeting place of the second annual Good Roads Convention during the last week in September.

LIKE CHEVROLET'S BUICK.

A counterpart of an automobile which during the last few weeks has gained an international reputation was shown in Los Angeles for the first time Wednesday.

It is a Buick model "16" tourabout and is a duplicate of the Buick forty-horse-power chassis which Chevrolet drove to victory in the great race for the Cobe cup at Chicago and another of which Chevrolet's team-mate, Robert Burman, drove the first lap of the course at an average speed of 67.6 miles.

This model of the Buick is a four-cylinder and carries four persons comfortably. It is finished in white with blue-black upholstery and is built upon beautiful lines. The car was delivered by the Howard Automobile Company to Ed R. Braley of Pasadena.

MILLIONS IN MOTORS.

Almost Two Hundred Thousand Automobiles to Be Manufactured in Nineteen-Ten, Says Expert.

According to Alfred Reeves, general manager of the American Motor Car Manufacturers' Association, plans are being made for the production of almost 200,000 cars for the season of 1910. Mr. Reeves recently made a trip through the Middle West and he bases his figures on information gained on this trip and a previous journey through New England and Pennsylvania. Of the estimated number for next year, the plans call for 165,000 pleasure cars, 30,000 high-wheel buggies made by carriage concerns, and 5000 steam and electric machines and commercial vehicles.

The average price of these cars will be about $1200, the cars selling below being in the greatest demand, although there is no lessening expected in the demand for cars of higher price. This will mean a total business in cars alone of almost $200,000,000.

HAVE YOU GUESSED YET?

APPERSON AND CHALMERS CONTINUE TO BE FAVORITES.

Locomobile Overtakes Thomas Car—Stearns Forges Ahead of Franklin and Lozier—Columbia Passes the Pope-Hartford and Studebaker—Durocar Overtakes Stoddard-Dayton and Regal Goes Ahead of Mitchell.

THE Apperson and Chalmers-Detroit boosters are increasing the lead of those two cars in the Santa Monica road race guessing contest. The famous "Jackrabbit" car has now been named 2729 times as the probable winner of the heavy car race over the Santa Monica course July 10. The Chalmers-Detroit has been named 4013 times as the sure winner of the light car race.

There seems to be a remarkable unanimity of opinion as to the ability of the last-named car being able to negotiate the 202.417 miles in less time than any other car of the same class. The Apperson is not so decided a favorite in the heavy car class as the Chalmers-Detroit is among the light cars. The Locomobile and Thomas still have many enthusiastic backers. The Locomobile has again gone ahead of the Thomas by a small margin. The Stearns has gone ahead of the Franklin and Lozier in the voting, while the Columbia has taken precedence over the Pope-Hartford and the Studebaker in popular favor as to speed.

In the light car class the Durocar has spurted ahead of the Stoddard-Dayton and is now fourth in the running. The Regal has overtaken the Mitchell.

How they stand:

Perhaps no one has yet picked the two winning cars and estimated correctly the time in which they will cover the 202.417 miles. The Times will reward those who can name the winners and come nearest estimating the time correctly. Do a little figuring and send your estimate to the Automobile Editor of The Times. Use the coupon printed below for the purpose. Any one can fill out as many coupons as he likes. All are numbered in the order in which they are received at The Times office. If more than one person makes the correct guess, the one whose estimate was first received will be the prize-winner. No coupons will be accepted after midnight of July 9.

SIDE-LINE PASSES.

Sinsabaugh annexed the first game of side-line passes with Browne serving. Bell and Bundy then came back, winning the next two, then losing one on Bundy's serve. Bell and Bundy took the next two, and Sinsabaugh making a final stand, rallied at the net with Browne and took another and their last game. Bell and Bundy could not be surpassed and won the last two games and match at 6-4.

After the match McLoughlin and [illegible] played an exhibition match with [illegible] and Duncan, and gave the northerners about all they wanted. The champions put up an article of tennis rarely seen on a local court, and much as the enthusiasts applauded over the previous match they more readily gave a hand to the exhibition players.

Judging from the northerners' previous form, scarcely a single player or follower of the tourney expect Bell and Bundy to win out in the challenge round. The southern team is playing top form but they appear to have nothing on the defenders, and not over [illegible] games to a set are granted to the locals.

The ladies' playing was quite enjoyable, and the Sutton sisters batted the ball to the delectation of the spectators. Miss May, upholding her prestige, allowed her sister but a look-in and invariably pulled down the winning points.

Miss Mary Browne and Mrs. Bruce [illegible] Miss May and Mrs. Hickman the most interesting match, Miss Browne surprising her friends in repeatedly returning May's terrific drives to the [illegible]. Mrs. Bruce saved many points in the deep court, and placed her lobs for unreachable points.

THE RESULTS.

Men's doubles—finals: Bell and Bundy beat Sinsabaugh and Browne, [illegible], 6-4, 6-4.

Ladies' doubles—Semi-finals: Mrs. Bruce and Miss Browne beat Miss Florence Sutton and Miss Shoemaker, [illegible]; Miss May Sutton and Mrs. Hickman beat Mrs. Farquhar and Miss [illegible], 6-3, 6-1. Finals: Miss May Sutton and Mrs. Hickman beat Mrs. Bruce and Miss Browne, 6-4, 6-4.

Ladies' singles—Finals: Miss May Sutton beat Mrs. Bruce, 6-0, 6-2.

Consolation men's doubles—First round: Bacon and Young beat Simons and Gay, 6-0, 6-2; Galusha and Albright beat Overton and Bumiller by default; Crawford and Bumiller beat Feltshans and Dietrich, 5-7, 6-3, 6-2; Rogers and Rogers beat Mace and Herd, 2-6, 6-3, 6-4.

FOR CHAMPIONSHIP.

HOTCHKISS-SUTTON MATCH.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, July 3.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The treat of the local tennis season is in store for the followers of the game Monday, when May Sutton and Mabel Hotchkiss will meet on the courts of the Hotel Rafael at San Rafael. Never has a tennis match on the local courts attracted the attention that this one has. Not only are the tennis enthusiasts interested, but outsiders, those who know but little of the sport, will be on hand Monday.

The meeting between Miss Hotchkiss and Miss Sutton will be for the State championship. Miss Hotchkiss is the present holder of the title, and Miss Sutton won the tournament on the courts at San Rafael two weeks ago. This gave the latter the right to challenge for the title, and Monday's match is the result. No better exhibition could be furnished on any courts in the world than that of which Miss Sutton and Miss Hotchkiss are capable.

TO SHOOT AT GLENDALE.

Los Angeles Rifle and Revolver Club to Test New Range in the Foothills.

The Los Angeles Rifle and Revolver Club will shoot on its new Glendale range Monday all day. The ranges include 200, 300 and 500 yards with a 50-yard pistol range for the revolver cranks of the club.

After the shoot Monday, the final choice of the six men to represent the club against Seattle, Tacoma and Spokane, July 11, will be made. The northern clubs are strong shooting organizations and the local riflemen will have to use their best six men to win.

The present line up of the team is: G. T. Kellogg, E. C. Crossman, H. Decius, H. C. Miles, P. S. Hamsen, R. P. Umsted, A. H. Aikin, H. T. Bathey and Marsh. The six men and two alternates will be selected from the above list.

CHURCH IS ENTHUSIASTIC.

Predicts Increased Output of Cars This Season—Factories Working Three Shifts.

Norman W. Church, western representative for the Stoddard-Dayton Motor Company, returned from the East yesterday very enthusiastic over the prospects for the coming season.

"It is only a question of how many parts the factories can turn out next season," said Church. "Every manufacturer is bemoaning the fact that his factory has not double its present capacity, and every company plans to greatly increase its output.

"I do not hesitate predicting that the season of 1910 will be the greatest the motor car industry has ever known. I am certain that the output of all the leading factories will be much larger.

"At the Stoddard-Dayton plant I found plans for working three shifts of men, and the fires in that factory will never be out.

"The Stoddard factory made 2500 cars the season just passed, and is prepared to make 4000 this season. Experts of the Manufacturers' Association, who have studied the situation, predict that the motor car output next year will reach the 200,000 mark."

Church rode in the 1910 models and made a run in one of the cars from Dayton to Cincinnati and return. The Stoddard will offer four models in 1910, the newest being a $1000 touring car. This car will be fitted with a five-passenger body and will have a wheel base of 102 inches. It will be similar in design to the larger Stoddards, but will be made to supply the cheap four-cylinder demand. This new car will have a twenty-five-horse-power motor.

The present twenty-five-horse-power car is to be larger and better. The other larger models will continue with the refining of certain parts of construction.

The first of the 1910 Stoddards are expected in July. The first shipment will be the new $1600 model.

TOO MUCH FORM.

PROTECTS MOTORISTS.

Any person who shall obstruct any public highway in Wisconsin by wilfully or maliciously placing or causing to be placed therein any depression, ditch, humps or embankments or earth, logs, stone, nails, glass or other materials or substances intended to impede or incommodate the lawful use of such highways, is liable to a fine of not less than $10 nor more than $100, according to a new law recently signed by the Governor.

ROAD RACE.

a road that is almost perfect save for a few rough spots. Eighty miles an hour, or the greatest speed the car has, can be made on this stretch which leads through overhanging trees, which have protected this piece of road, making it the best of the course.

The turn into the Palisades at the Soldiers' Home where the course goes through the United States government grounds is particularly fast. The curve can be taken at sixty miles an hour and then the stretch of the Palisades opens before the racers.

Men and teams have worked on the Palisades to make that piece of road what it is. Thousands of barrels of oil have been poured on the surface, which is now dustless. A wonderful opportunity to watch the racers struggling along the narrow stretch of the Palisades is afforded by vantage points along this leg of the course.

HOME STRETCH.

Coming out of the Palisades into the Ocean avenue home stretch, there is an "S" turn, which causes the faster cars to slow down. There is plenty of room to get up momentum again, however, before reaching the grand stand, where some of the greatest thrills of the race should be witnessed.

Seats for 6000 persons have been erected, and parking space for 15,000 more will be provided. The bridge over Nevada avenue will lead to the choice spots beyond, where the race can be rarely enjoyed. There will be a charge of 50 cents a passenger to automobilists crossing the bridge. Pedestrians will not be allowed on the bridge during the races.

There is not a spot along the course, however, where the race cannot be seen to advantage. Along at least three-fourths of the course the race can be watched for nothing. There will be no one to prevent spectators from occupying the vantage spots of Nevada avenue, the Palisades and a large part of Ocean avenue. All of these will probably be occupied by daylight the day of the big race. Many are planning to pass the night at Santa Monica in order to be on hand for the speed dashes of the day.

THE RACERS.

Of course, everybody is interested in the men and the cars that will furnish the excitement for the day. Twenty-four motor cars, the fastest in the West, will be raced over this course. The big race is to start at 8 o'clock in the morning, and should be over at 11:30 o'clock. The smaller event starts at 12:30 o'clock, and should be over at 5 o'clock.

The cars will be started at one-minute intervals in pairs. The Apperson "Jackrabbit" and the Stoddard-Dayton will be started together, promptly on the hour at 8 o'clock. Harris Hanshue will drive the Apperson, now the favorite in the race, and Frank Siefert will handle the Stoddard-Dayton, which many pick to make the fastest lap.

As the Apperson and Stoddard are rounding the first turn, the Franklin "Greyhound," with Ralph Hamlin at the wheel, and the Chalmers-Detroit "Bluebird," Bert Dingley driving, will get under way. These two cars will race away toward Nevada avenue while the starter is counting the seconds for the Studebaker, whose driver has not been chosen, and the Rambler, with L. B. Harvey up. These two cars should make a splendid tussle for first place, as they race around the stretch, and it will be interesting to watch which gets the mastery before the grand-stand is reached.

The Premier, with G. Bradbeer up, and the Lozier, with H. Tettsleff at the helm, will be speeded on their way while the Studebaker and Rambler are fighting it out. The Lozier should make the better getaway. It is one of the fastest cars in the big race, and is picked by many for first honors.

"WILD BILL" OUT.

Next in line of start will be the Columbia and Pope-Hartford. J. A. Scott will drive the Pope. "Wild Bill" Ruess has been tamed. He will not appear in the race. Bill says they "haven't got his goat," but he will stay out of the big event nevertheless. Scott was injured recently in a smash-up, when the car left the road while it was being speeded home from the track. Scott will be able to drive in the race, and expects to be on the course the early part of this week.

Harold Stone will be on the Columbia, the smallest car in the race. He will be sent away with the Pope-Hartford for the run of his life. Just what the Columbia will do is problematical. That it has the right stuff in it was proved yesterday when the little car took the ugly turn at Ocean and Nevada avenues faster than any other car in the big event.

While the smoke of the Pope and Columbia is still hanging over the course, the Stearns and the Haynes will come to the tape and the starter will slap Frank Free on the back as the second hand ticks off the starting time. S. Q. Shannon will be given the word at the same moment and the two cars will shoot away. The Stearns should take the pole quickly from its rival. It is a faster car. The Haynes, however, was showing remarkable speed on the course Saturday, and was taking the turns at as speedy a clip as some of the faster cars.

Six minutes will have been ticked off by the starter when the Locomobile and the Thomas came to the scratch. Murray Page, one of the crack drivers of the race course, and, perhaps, one of the steadiest men at a wheel, will be behind the steering post of the Loco. The Thomas should lead the Loco around the first lap. It will remain to be seen, however, whether the Loco, winner of the twenty-four-hour and 150-mile tests, cannot again show a pair of rear tires to every other car in her event.

LONE CHADWICK.

When the Chadwick, the last lone starter of the big event, and one of the fastest cars in the race, is driven to the tape, the roar of the naked exhausts of the Apperson or the Stoddard should be heard as they emerge from the Palisades. It is possible that one or both of these cars will reach the grand stand on the completion of the first circuit before the Chadwick gets away.

Bruno Seibel sent his black monster over the course Friday in 8½ minutes. He did not know the turns, and had to shut down in places. The Chadwick made eighty miles an hour on the better stretches of the course. Bruno hopes to pick up one or two cars on the first lap. His plan will be to pass everything, then stay comfortably in the lead and win the race, if possible.

There is not a driver or mechanic in either race who has not "doped" his car to win. Many things may happen to interfere with the cars and men. Only one of fifteen machines can win, and with every man hoping, the race should be one of many thrills.

OH YOU CHALMERS!

Bert Dingley and the Chalmers-Detroit are the favorites in the little car race. Favorites, however, sometimes even fail to place.

J. A. Nokrent, in the little Buick "White Streak," was making the best time in the light class yesterday. The little car took the turn almost wide open and "Nick" sent the machine over the course at a wonderful clip.

This little car race will be the star event of the afternoon. With nine fast cars starting in pairs a minute apart, the excitement will be begun at 12:30 o'clock, when the Cadillac and the Stoddard-Dayton get away. One minute later the Maxwell and the Chalmers will go scooting down Ocean avenue, to be followed at a like interval by the Studebaker and the Regal. The Durocar and the Mitchell will race away next, to be followed by the Buick, the lone last starter.

When the little cars begin the 202.417 miles' grind the course will not be as fast as for the big event. It will be choppy in places and the turns will probably be damaged. At that the little cars are picked to make better than forty-five miles an hour.

Santa Monica road race officials: Referee, Frank A. Garbutt; judges, A. B. Daniels, Fernando Nelson, Henry T. Hazard; chief timer, W. H. Thayer; clerk of course, Horace B. Day; scorer, Walter Chanslor; paddock inspector, D. B. Rose; technical committee, William E. Bush, P. A. Renton, L. L. Brentner; umpire, A. N. Young, Robert Atkinson, Volney Beardsley, C. S. Anthony. R. P. Hillman, representative contest board A.A.A.

No cars other than those numbered for the race will be allowed to speed on the course from this date until after July 10, and no contesting cars will be allowed on the course after 11 a.m. and no contesting cars will be allowed to practice on Sunday, as the road superintendent will need that day to pick up the little details of the road.

FIRECRACKERS AUTO'S DANGER.

"Do not throw firecrackers or any kind of fireworks under an automobile."

This warning is sounded by prominent autoists of this city who fear not only the destruction of motor cars, but the maiming and killing of persons as a result of explosions which may follow the careless handling of fire. Those who have fireworks to explode should be careful not to throw them under an automobile, say the auto men.

Leaking gasoline tanks or gasoline dripping from a carburetor would become ignited at once from a firecracker carelessly thrown. This would cause a flame and consequent explosion, which might do more than simply destroying the machine.

There is always the danger of fire near a gasoline motor car. This danger is aggravated when so many small boys are handling fireworks. Autoists should avoid leaving their machines alone on the public streets today or tomorrow as far as possible, and thus help the small boy to keep out of trouble.

NOTHING DOING.

NO FIGHTS FOR SANDY SPORTS.

SHERIFF WILL PREVENT BOUTS AT HUNTINGTON BEACH.

District Attorney of Orange County Declares That Webster and Frankie Sullivan Will Be Arrested If They Meet in Their Scheduled Bout on Monday.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

SANTA ANA, July 3.—Sheriff Lacy with deputies will go to Huntington Beach Monday, and should an attempt be made to pull off the boxing contests scheduled for that afternoon, arrests will be made. Today Dist.-Atty. Davis and Sheriff Lacy had a conference concerning the proposed fights, with the result that the District Attorney gave it as his opinion that the contests as advertised will be in violation of the State law.

The advertisements state that Danny Webster, bantamweight champion of the Pacific Coast, will meet Frankie Sullivan for the championship of the Pacific Coast in a twenty-round bout; that Jimmie Austin, 105-pound champion of the Pacific Coast, will fight Kid Curley of Long Beach; that the admission will be $1 and $2, and no gambling will be permitted.

The District Attorney says that boxing contests are permitted only under the auspices of a domestic incorporated club, paying an annual license to the county or incorporated city in which the contests are held, and under the county or city ordinance. The District Attorney is informed that there is no club at Huntington Beach, and that the city has no governing ordinance.

About a year ago, Deputy Sheriff Wilson stopped a fight at Garden Grove. That locality is in county territory. Huntington Beach is an incorporated city.

HOODOO SIGN FOR GLARNER.

Olympic Club Captain Given Number Thirteen.

Fifty Crack Athletes Enter Big Track Meet.

New Records Are Probable in Several Events.

"No. 13 is the number I want to wear in the championship track meet," wrote Andrew Glarner, the captain and crack half-miler of the Olympic Club of San Francisco, to Manager Braden.

"De-lighted; grab it quick," answered Braden, who was wondering whether to cut out the number from the identification tags that the athletes will wear, or to take a chance in offering it to some one.

Glarner wants the hoodoo number because he has worn it in contests for the last five years and attributes his luck in scoring many victories to the fact that he always had a "13" on his back.

Forty-seven athletes had registered for the P.A.A. track and field championships, July 14, when the entry list closed last night. George W. Braden, who is managing the contest, will accept any entries that were mailed yesterday and it is expected that about sixty men will participate in the games.

LIST OF ENTRIES.

The complete list of entries follows:

RECORDS THREATENED.

The track and field championships will be the greatest events of their kind ever pulled off in the South. Not for many years has such a bunch of star athletes been rounded up on the Coast to compete against each other and it is probable that new Coast records will be made in some of the events.

Ralph Rose, the great shot putter, and some of the best former and present athletes of the northern universities, are to wear the winged "O" of the Olympic Club and against them will be pitted the best track and field men of this city and of other cities of the Pacific States.

Edwin A. McCauley, the crack quarter-miler of the Alameda High School, will have all his expenses paid to the championship meet by the Elks of Alameda, who believe he will win honors.

Hunger of the Tucson Athletic Club, who is entered in the two-mile event, was at Cornell last year. He was considered one of the best two-milers in the East. He also was an excellent cross-country runner.

Spencer Dickson, who will represent the Olympic Club in the pole vault, is a student at Santa Clara College. He has cleared 12ft. in his event and is considered the best vaulter now competing on the Coast.

Entries for the eighteen-mile foot race that is to be held at Ascot Park, Monday afternoon, July 12, are coming in rapidly. Only one entry was received for the regulation Marathon, but when the distance was cut down, the amateurs began to sign up.

Harry McLean, the full-blood Indian who will represent Phoenix Indian School in the long grind, has the best record of any of the entries so far. He is said to have covered fifteen miles in seventy-seven in practice last week.

May Abolish Hammer Throw.

NEW YORK, July 3.—As a result of the discussion regarding the advisability of abolishing hammer throwing from the list of competetive field sports on account of the danger attached to it, President James E. Sullivan of the A.A.U., has addressed a letter to prominent weight throwers and others interested in athletics, requesting that they give their opinions, or any suggestions in reference to the matter, so that the board of governors of the A.A.U. can act intelligently when the subject is brought up officially at the next meeting in November.

The elapsed time of the Alexandra was 2hr. 15m.; the course was twelve miles, three four-mile legs. The next race will be sailed Monday.

GETTING READY.

HARNESS NAGS STABLED HERE.

Circuit Horses Ready for Elks' Week Races.

Classy Events Will Be Run for Big Purses.

Regular San Diego Meeting Is Called Off.

Nearly all the horses that are to be driven in the big harness meeting at Agricultural Park during Elks' week are now stabled at the local track.

The San Diego harness-horse meeting of the California circuit, which was to have started tomorrow, was called off yesterday because the southern management had failed to put the track in the proper condition. The horsemen had intended to ship their strings to San Diego immediately after the San Bernardino meeting, which closed Thursday, but a representative was first sent to San Diego to investigate the conditions, and when it was found that the track was in poor shape, they decided to compete there. The horses were shipped to this city yesterday.

The Canfield Stake for two-year-olds, $1400, which was in danger of being postponed, is now a certainty, and will be held July 16. Through a misunderstanding, Canfield failed to make his entry at the proper time.

MATINEE RACES.

The association arranged to hold a matinee race each day of the meeting, for which trophies valued at $65, $25, and $15, are to be offered for the first three place winners, respectively. A running race, five-eighths of a mile dash, to carry not less than 150 pounds, for similar prizes, is to be held, probably on the last day of the meeting. The matinee races will be open to members of any recognized driving clubs, who own and drive their entries.

For the horses that fail to place in the 2:20 trot class a consolation race, purse $300, is to be held.

The entry list for the meeting includes the best harness horses on the Pacific Coast. The purses, which will range from $300 to $1000, are the largest that are to be offered in the California circuit, and it is expected that the horsemen will endeavor to make their best showing.

The 2:07 class trotting races, which are to be held July 16, are expected to be the feature of the meeting. Delilah, the bay mare owned by G. W. Bonnell of Redlands, won first money in this class at San Bernardino, beating Josephine, H. B. Rutherford's bay mare, which was the favorite. Hymettus, the black gelding belonging to L. H. Todhunter of Sacramento, is expected to make a fight for first honors in the local meeting, and there are other entries that have won many prizes. Bonnie Steinway, the chestnut horse owned by A. L. Parod of Pleasanton, broke down at San Bernardino, and has been withdrawn from the local meeting.

The races are to be held as follows:

July 14—The 2:20 pacing class, the 2:20 trotting class, matinée race.

July 15—The 2:12 pacing class, the 2:12 trotting class, matinée race.

July 16—The 2:07 pacing class. Canfield Stake, for two-year-olds, matinée race.

July 17.—The 2:15 pacing class, the 2:15 trotting class, running race, matinée race.

Amateur Boxing Champions Who are to Defend Their Titles in contests to be held during Elks week, in which men are entered from all parts of the Pacific Coast.

AMATEURS.

BOXING AND WRESTLING BOUTS DRAW CHAMPIONS.

THE Olympic Club entries for the Pacific Coast amateur boxing championships that are to be held at Venice for three nights, beginning July 15, are expected early this week. Several Olympic men are the holders of Coast championships, and if these scrappers take part in the Venice tourney, the local men will have to be in excellent form to make a creditable showing.

The Southern California championships in four classes are held by members of the Los Angeles Athletic Club. Van Court is working daily with his men. He believes that they will be able to hold their own against all comers.

Cliff Reumann, the champion middleweight, is expected to beat any one that the Olympic Club is able to produce, and his friends are ready to back him with all kinds of real money. Reumann has more "class" than any other amateur in the South.

Jorgstorff, the 220-pound heavyweight champion, has won by default in the last two tournaments, and if the Olympic Club sends a representative in the heavyweight class, Jorgstorff will have his first chance in a long time to show what he can do.

Sam Coulter, the ex-lightweight champion, probably will have to enter the welterweight class, as he is having trouble in getting down to 135 pounds. Coulter was beaten by Beauchamp of the Broadway Athletic Club in the last championship tournament, but he claims that he was not in good condition.

Charles Boscha, the former champion in the 125-pound class, also may have to step up a notch. He could not get within the weight limit a few months ago, and he probably will fight in the 125-pound lightweight division.

Van Court has a number of new scrappers that he is trying to whip into shape for the tournament. If any of his men win Coast championships they probably will be sent to the national championships that are to be held at New Orleans in the early fall.

Al Treloar is working hard with his wrestlers, preparing them to go up against the Olympic champions in the tournament at Ascot Park, July 12. These bouts promise to be fully as interesting as the amateur boxing contests as the best men in the North and South have registered, and will be pitted against each other. The Los Angeles Athletic Club has entered eight men, all of whom have had experience at the game. Treloar has taught them his best tricks, and he believes they will give a good account of themselves.

KETCHEL AND BAT NELSON ARE TO STAR IN THE RING.

LOS ANGELES will do more than its share toward contributing to the excitement of the nations in the fight line in Elks' week, for the bugs who will gather here will see two world's champions in action in Bat Nelson and Stanley Ketchel.

Two other champions were possibilities for a few days in Jack Johnson and Sam Langford, but Johnson was not anxious to meet Langford and stalled around until he lost the chance. Nelson is to meet Ad Wolgast, the classy heavy featherweight of Milwaukee, who fought Abe Attell to a draw, while Ketchel is to go against the fighting fireman, Jim Flynn, of Pueblo.

Jim Flynn still thinks he has a fine fat chance to beat Ketchel when they meet on July 14 and will give the first exhibition of his condition this afternoon in some of the regulation stunts he will pull off at Jack Doyle's South Side Athletic Club, where Jim is training. He will box with Arthur Collins, the negro pug; George Brown and Morris, the former wonder discovered by Art Pitcher.

Flynn declares that any pug of Ketchel's style is just made to order for him and that he likes any one who swings. He admits he can do little with a boxer like Kaufman or Papke, but would fight either of them at any time. He fully realizes the importance of his coming battle and has been training for two weeks. What he might do against Ketchel is only a guess, but he is training as hard as he ever did and expects to prove that he has some class.

Ad Wolgast will not begin his real grind for the Nelson scrap until tomorrow, but he has promised to go to Doyle's camp and box with Mike Kitchos, Hobo Dougherty and Frankie Sullivan. Wolgast is confident of victory and he figures that if he can hold Abe Attell level for ten rounds he should be able to do the same thing with Nelson, although Bat will outweigh him five pounds. Wolgast also has an idea he can beat the champion and this might be his luck, for Nelson cannot go on forever.

Big Jack Johnson sent word here yesterday that he expected to arrive in Los Angeles this week from Chicago, and it is more than likely that he can be talked into a match with a good man after his arrival.

The preliminaries for the Nelson-Wolgast battle will be arranged this week. In all probability the card will consist of a ten-round semi-final, a six-round and a four-round, and the same scheme will be followed for the Ketchel-Flynn fight. One of the objects of Manager McCarey's visit to San Francisco, where he now is, is to secure some good boys to meet the best in this end of the State.

MATCH FOR WELSH.

SIGNED FOR JOSEPHS.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

NEW YORK, July 3.—Young Josephs, the English lightweight, who recently gave Young Otto a severe beating in London, has been matched to fight twenty rounds before the National Club, in London, with Freddie Welsh a week from next Monday night, for the lightweight championship of England.

The club has offered a purse of $2750, and the men will bet $1000 on the side. In the event of his victory, which is not doubted here, Welsh will return to this country and demand a forty-five-round fight from Battling Nelson for the lightweight championship of the world.

To Try Again.

The women's golf team of the Los Angeles Country Club was notified yesterday by the Western Women's Golf Association to play off its tie game with the Midlothian Golf Club of Chicago Tuesday morning at 10:20 o'clock.

HOGAN PLUCKS BERRY'S ANGELS

Hosp Trimmed Through Hitt's Good Pitching.

Brashear Pleases Fans With Left Fence Homer.

Haley and Happy Show Fine Fielding Stunts.

Vernon, 5; Los Angeles, 4.

The worm finally turned yesterday and showed the hand that has been [illegible] it continually during the past week, and Unhappy Hogan went home last night and slept, for the first time during the week, for his Perhaps team had beaten the Angels in a close and exciting game that was featured by beautiful fielding that bordered on the sensational at times. Both Hitt and Hosp were punched around hard at times, and as the Perhaps swats came when needed, they grabbed the glory.

Strange to state, Kit Brashear hit the ball over the left fence for a home run, and as luck would have it the pill was just outside the foul line by a few inches, the drive coming after the first two men up had fanned. Beall and Bernard hit doubles for Vernon, while the only one of the Angels who could send the ball to the fence was Howard, who soused out two doubles. With twenty hits by both teams, the fans had nothing to complain of in the way of batting.

In the first of the fifth inning, when Happy Hogan made a low throw to third base that allowed a run to score for the Angels, Hogan put Graham out of the game, sending Berger to third and putting Haley on second. This was not absolutely necessary, but it gave Haley a fine chance to show a sensational catch in the eighth inning, when, with two out, [illegible] hit a high liner over second base. Haley, who was playing over toward third base, dashed toward second, and, sticking up his left hand, turned it outwards and snared the ball.

Delmas made a double play unassisted, and started two others, while Happy Hogan ran over and bumped into the grand stand on the west side of the diamond to catch a high foul that Smith popped up in the first inning, and Godwin had two assists, which is something unusual for a left fielder.

The swats in the right place tell the whole story. The Angels started their runs in the first inning, when [illegible] was walked. He was sacrificed to second, and scored on Beall's drive to left. In the second, two singles, a [illegible] and Hogan's low throw to third made another run. The third came from Howard's first double and two sacrifices, and the fourth from a single, a sacrifice and Howard's second double.

The Vernons could not do anything with Hosp until the fourth inning, when he soaked Caffyn with the ball. Brashear sacrificed, and when Eagan [illegible] left, Caffyn scored on the drive and the throw-in. Two more runs came in the next inning, on two singles, a double, a fielder's choice and an out. Brashear's home run made the fourth run in the eighth inning, and [illegible] double, Martinke's single and a muff of Haley's fly produced the fifth run. The game was not over until the last man was out in the last half of the ninth inning, and [illegible] made this when he was touched out at the plate trying to steal home.

SEALS WIN ANOTHER.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

SACRAMENTO, July 3.—With Henley in the box the Seals won again today, the score being 1 to 0. It was a good game of baseball since the [illegible] opened but was devoid of exciting features. The lone run was scored in the fifth when Melchoir opened with a two-base hit barely inside the left foul line. He was scored when Berry hit a slow one to the plate. Henley and Baum pitched great ball.

NEXT TIME THE GHOST WALKS HE'LL BE FIVE BONES SHORT FOR THEE, MR. HOGAN!
JUST A FOND MEMORY OF HIS PAST.
I NEVER SPOKE RUDELY TO AN UMPIRE IN ALL MY LIFE!
GALE

'Gene McGreevy, Reformed Ball Player.

THE UMPIRE.

ROCKEFELLER'S ONLY RIVAL AS KNOCKER'S CLUB TARGET.

'Gene McGreevy, the Best of His Class Ever Seen Here.

BY GREY OLIVER.

DID you ever think of a man being up against himself?

This is one of the things that is the matter with 'Gene McGreevy, good fellow, ex-ball player, erstwhile saloon-keeper, and umpire who is having the time of his life just now trying to make the fans forget that two ball teams cannot win the same game.

If you fell over gasping and weeping on your own grave, crossed your fingers and hoped to die if it were so, you couldn't make Jim Brooks of the Vernon team believe anything else but that McGreevy started out in life by watching his mother get up in the middle of the night and pick his father's pockets; that he got money to buy cigarettes and beer by wrecking trains; took to second story work in order to get his wife some diamonds; and finally became an umpire because so many policemen thought he was the fellow that stole Charley Ross.

As a matter of fact, McGreevy is none of these and probably would not admit that he was anything but a reformed ball player. This is sufficient honor for any man to aspire to but he doubtless even forgets that.

Hundreds of wild-eyed fans that go to ball games once a week think that an umpire has nothing to do but work about two hours a day and draw down $300 a month for it, but in even attempting this McGreevy has made himself the best umpire the Coast fans ever saw, with the possible exception of some of those that come out here from the big brush.

Making twenty rabid ball-players behave themselves and trying to remember 500 rules that the fellows that make them sometimes wish they had not made, while 1000 baseball fans are calling you every name they can think of, may be easy, but being John D. Rockefeller beats it.

McGreevy would rather be an umpire, for when you are a ball player you have to do a lot of hard work trying to keep the fly balls from hitting you on the head.

Mac began life as a pitcher on the old Recreation Park grounds in San Francisco in 1893 and two years later landed in the Quincy, Ill., team and heaved many times that year against a long-legged young kid named Frank Dillon, who pitched for the Rockford, Ill., club. Mac flung the ball at the batsmen until 1903 and then quit the game for three years to run a saloon. In 1906 when the Peoria and Cedar Rapids teams were tied for first place, the regular umpire faded away one night and McGreevy took his place and he has been at it ever since.

McGreevy may not look it but he is the best seen here, for he knows the game and shows the players that they do not run the earth. He does not bite, scratch or kick, drives double as well as single, and is a good fellow. If you don't believe it, ask his wife.

SEMI-PRO GAMES.

TEDDY BEARS AND GIANTS.

The Teddy Bears and Giants are to meet in the first baseball match of a three-game series at Joy Park this afternoon, at 2:30 o'clock.

The Teddy Bears form one of the strongest amateur teams in the city. The Giants have been strengthened during the last week and the game promises to be closely contested. The line-up:

Giants.		Teddy Bears.
Clark, McClain		Clark, Schults
Hunt	pitcher	Derama
Slater	catcher	McKean
Bronson	first base	Nelson
Taylor	second base	Ferraris
Wilson	third base	Rogerson
Hubert	shortstop	Cowan
Battles	center field	Mulligan
Hinkel	right field	Golden

Double-Header.

Two games of baseball are to be played at Athletic Park, Boyle Heights, this afternoon. Colegrove is to meet the Edisons at 1:30 o'clock, and the Market National team of the Southern State League will play Globe Mills at 3 o'clock. Batteries—Colegrove, Lebaig and Smith; Edisons, Cornett, Stoll, Price and Findlay.

BALLS AND STRIKES.

Old Los Angeles fans will remember Del Mason who was a heaver on the Los Angeles team some years ago. The Jersey City club of the Eastern League has just asked for waivers on him, which shows that he is not good enough for class A ball.

The Little Rock club of the Southern League has been ordered by the National Commission to return outfielder Davis to the Pacific Coast League. You certainly have to leave home to get news about your own community for no one in the Coast League can remember any Davis except "Slats" Davis, who was once an umpire here.

There can be no doubt but that Spider Baum belongs to the Altoona team and he will have to report there next spring, if he stays in organized ball, unless Sacramento buys him.

Bescher, Oakes and Mitchell are sure of their jobs as outfielders on the Cincinnati team, as Griffith says he is satisfied with their work.

Heaver Ragon of the Chicago Cubs has been sold to the Des Moines club of the Western League. He was secured from Cincinnati and did not turn out to be good enough for the big league.

Cobb of the Detroits thinks that the Washington team will finish fifth in the league race on account of the strong heavers it has in Gray, Groom and Johnson, all of the Pacific Coast League.

Scout McGuire, who advised the Boston team to purchase outfielder Duff Lewis from the Oakland club, declares that in hitting, fielding and throwing Lewis probably has not an equal at the present time. Is not this an awful line of talk to hand out?

Down in the Virginia league some days ago the players of the Norfolk club made a double squeeze play, which is said to be the first one ever even tried. With men on second and third both scored on the squeeze, the second base runner being a very fast man. The story giving an account of this freak thing says the infielders of the team that allowed this were the fastest in the Virginia League.

The Waterloo club of the Central Association has sold Maurice Kent to the Cincinnati club for September delivery. This young heaver is a graduate of the Iowa State University.

Roy Hale, formerly a pitcher on the Los Angeles club, has been released by the Terre Haute club. He was here in the days of Warren Hall, Bergeman, Hollingsworth and Swindells.

Secretary Farrell of the National Association has formally posted a notice of the suspension by the National Board of Eddie Householder, who is now with the Santa Cruz outlaws.

WOULD MODIFY LAWS.

The Auto Vehicle Club of Washington is working to gain a modification of the motor vehicle regulations of the national capital. The motorists object to the regulation which provides that owners whose cars drop oil on the pavement are to be fined, and they think the rule requiring motor cars to display lights at night should be extended to include horse-drawn vehicles as well.

MANY MOTORS.

Up to the present time the State Highway Commission of Massachusetts has registered nearly 18,000 motor vehicles, and the number is being increased every week. One of the members of the Highway Commission has estimated that the total number of registrations issued this year will amount to about 20,500.

SOUNDS GOOD.

YANKEE MOTORS BEAT THE WORLD.

AMERICAN-MADE CARS PLEASE ENGLISH AUTOISTS.

Spencer F. Edge, Enthusiastic Over Our Cars After Visit to This Country, Sounds Note of Warning to British Manufacturers—Says Our Autos Will Sweep Europe.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, July 3.—Exclusive Dispatch.] Spencer F. Edge, a well-known British motorist, has returned from America enthusiastic over the rapid development of motoring in that country.

"Nearly everybody in America is going in for some sort of car," he said today, "and the fever has reached the remotest villages in the far rural regions. Many farmers have learned that the motor car is not only a great machine for pleasure, but an even more important means of pushing modern business. Petrol sooner or later in large measure will supersede the horse in hauling grain to market and drawing heavy plows.

"American manufacturers of cars are close students of the demands of public conditions in the country. They are also ingenious, inventive and immensely enterprising. The finest cars made in America are equal to the finest made in the world and the cheaper American cars are without equals in any other country. They give more value for their cost, weight and size than any other article of manufacture on wheels. Unless the European manufacturers wake to the importance of the cheap car market and produce more cheap cars and better ones the Americans are going to sweep Europe with these machines, as they are now sweeping America.

"The Yankees have lots of bad roads, but they are finding out the best way to negotiate them in motor cars. Moreover they build cars that go after bad roads and hills like a hungry boy after popcorn."

FOR THE AMATEURS. LAY SPEED TRAPS

Motorists who go to Santa Monica Sunday and Monday may get into trouble if they speed on the race course. At the request of the Automobile Dealers' Association the Santa Monica officials will have several speed traps for the purpose of arresting any driver who operates his car at a speed greater than twenty miles an hour.

Many of the amateur drivers have undertaken to circle the course at racing speed, cutting up parts of the road.

GETTING STARTED.

LARGE AND MERRY PARTY.

One hundred and fifty enthusiastic motorists left the Auto Vehicle Company's factory at Tenth and Main streets early yesterday morning on the second annual Tour of the Tourist. Forty drivers in forty cars, two and four-cylinder machines of the made-in-California type are to be driven over the 500-mile endurance course laid out by the officials. It is the first Los Angeles-Tia Juana tour ever held.

Unbiased judges have been chosen who will mark the score cards without favoritism to any autoists who takes part in the tour. Badges will be given those who succeed in finishing with a perfect score.

One of the most interesting machines on the run is the repair car, with George Kussman in charge. This Tourist auto carries an assortment of parts for the cars on the tour. It will be possible to rebuild a car on the road if it is necessary. Expert mechanics will ride on the car.

An unbroken line of communication from the front to the rear is to be maintained. This military procession of automobiles will file through the country from town to town spreading the story of the second annual run which, from all indications, is to be as great a success as the initial tour.

One of the features of this year's tour is a "pace car" which is to be driven by Volney S. Beardsley. A speed of fifteen miles an hour is to be maintained and those exceeding the pace will be penalized.

Each car was given a number and the driver is supposed to maintain his place in the line. There is to be no racing. Cars are to stay a certain distance apart on the roads to avoid the dust as far as possible.

For the first time in the history of the motor car industry in the West an automobile tour into Mexico is being held. Two-score Los Angeles made motor cars will cross the line into the Land of the Aztecs.

For five days these cars will be far from their base of supplies, yet no trouble whatever is anticipated. So carefully has the run been planned, and so well have the officials been drilled that each will know just what to do when an accident occurs.

There will be doctors on the tour with emergency supplies in case of accident. All of the modern conveniences as far as hotel accommodations have been supplied. The cars will remain at Coronado and the guests will be housed at the Coronado Hotel for the greater part of two days while side trips are being made.

While the tour is a pleasure run careful tab is being taken on the performance of the cars and expert factory men and designers are on the tour to study the cars in preparation for possible changes in coming Tourist models.

Each driver will start with 1000 points. He will be expected to reach each control within a certain time limit. Failure to do so, or failure to bring his car through in good shape, will subject a driver to penalization.

Where Is The Other Fellow

That's the question you ask yourself when you are engaged in a climbing contest on an "R-S,' against a would-be competitor.

Where is he? Out of sight, as a rule.

Nowhere is the superiority of the "R-S" more apparent than steep grades. It is then that the famous "R-S" motor, with its chanical intake-valve and other individual features, begins to what it can do in the way of power.

No. 1 Model 1909 "R-S" (single cylinder) develops from 3 to h.p. Model "D' "R-S" (twin cylinder) develops 6-h.p.

OLYMPIC CLUB TO SEND MEN.

Best Swimmers of Northern City to Compete.

Southern Champions to Have Hard Fight on Hand.

Holborow Expected to Make the Best Time.

Complete arrangements have been made for the Pacific Coast swimming championships that are to be held under the auspices of the Southern California Swimming Association, in the Venice plunge, for three consecutive nights, beginning Friday, and as assurances have been received from the Olympic Club of San Francisco that it will be represented by its best swimmers the tournament promises to be the best that has ever been held in the South.

The Piedmont Club of Oakland also has entered two men, who are expected to figure in the place winning. Most of the northern men have better records to their credit than the Southern California champions against whom they will compete, but the local water dogs will have the advantage of swimming amid familiar surroundings, and they are confident that the northerners will not win all the trophies.

A comparison of the records of the local swimmers with those of the northern men show that in nearly every event the San Francisco men have made better time than the southern champions. McWood, the northern middle-distance man, has covered the [illegible] distance in about 1m. 1s., while Holborow's time is 1m. 6s. [illegible]'s record for the 220-yard distance is 2m. 58 4-5s., which is better than has been made in the North. Pomeroy of the Olympic Club has a mark of 6m. 9s. for the 440-yard swim, while Howard Taylor, who won the local indoor championship last year, covered the distance in 7m. 2s. [illegible]'s time for the half-mile is [illegible] against 14m. 58 3-5s. made by [illegible] Lee when he won the [illegible] California championship. Wallington, however, has made the distance in 14m. 22s.

[illegible] records have been sent [illegible] North this year, but McWood, Bromley and Kellogg of the Olympic Club and Ed Kitts of [illegible] who will represent the North, have bettered the records of the [illegible] or the old-timers have not [illegible] to get into condition. The [illegible] of the northerners in the various [illegible] was made at the Pacific Coast championships, while the performances of the local men were made in a pre[illegible] tournament.

SCHEDULED EVENTS.

The events are to be run off as follows:

[illegible] night—The fifty-yard dash, [illegible]; the 220-yard dash, in heats; [illegible] high and fancy diving.

[illegible] night—The 100-yard dash, [illegible]-yard dash.

Special diving stunts and other attractions are to be held in connection with the tournament.

[illegible] Holborow, the Southern California champion in the 50 and 100-yard [illegible] is still a young man. He was in [illegible] for the first time in 1904. [illegible] defeated several times by [illegible] Kyle of San Diego, during the [illegible] years he was in the game, [illegible] 1908 he outdistanced Kyle in [illegible] races, and has had the San [illegible] goat ever since.

[illegible] Abegg, who holds the Southern California record for the 220-yard [illegible] has about decided to abandon [illegible], and enter only the 440 and [illegible] events. His victory over [illegible] Pomeroy, the Coast champion, [illegible] last year has convinced him [illegible] the quarter-mile is his strongest [illegible].

[illegible] Taylor, the present holder of the Southern California championship in the 440-yard race, entered competition for the first time at Naples [illegible], when he finished second in [illegible]-yard race, crowding Pom[illegible] third place.

[illegible] Lee, the local 880-yard champion, captain of the Bimini water-[illegible], captain of the Los Angeles [illegible] School Swimming Club, and a [illegible] of the gymnasium team. He [illegible] factor in several branches [illegible], and a brilliant swimming [illegible] has been predicted for him.

Wallington, who was beaten by [illegible] the 440-yard race, is training [illegible] regain his lost laurels. Elt [illegible] Stanford is getting into condition [illegible] Catalina, and can be counted [illegible] make a good showing in his [illegible].

[illegible] Helen Perkins of Long Beach, [illegible] the women's championship, [illegible] to win first in the women's [illegible].

[illegible] Crary, the local champion in [illegible]-yard juvenile event, will de[illegible] title and make an effort to [illegible] Coast championship.

RULES OF COMPETITION.

[illegible] rules for the diving competitions [illegible] championships follow:

[illegible] take-offs for fancy diving shall [illegible] of two heights, twenty and [illegible] feet.

ROUND AND ROUND.

OLD-TIME RIDER AGAIN ON TRACK.

ALBERT SHOCK TO RACE WITH TWENTY HORSES.

Contest at Fiesta Stadium to Continue Six Days, Eight Hours Each Day—Bicycle Against Speedy Steeds Are to Start in Long Grind in Elks' Week.

Albert Shock, who, fifteen years ago, was the champion long-distance bicycle rider of the world, is to engage in a six days' race against twenty horses at Fiesta Stadium during Elks' week. Shock rode here in similar races a decade ago, and in this form of sport has never been defeated.

The race is to continue eight hours every day during the week, and Shock will ride a "bike" on the five-lap saucer track while the horses will run on a six-lap dirt track. The terms of the contest call for a change of horses at the end of each mile, and a change of jockeys at the end of every five miles. Shock is to endeavor to cover a greater distance on his bicycle than that made by the bunch of steeds during the forty-eight hours.

The race is to begin at 2 o'clock, July 12, and the racers will keep on the go until 10 o'clock at night. The same arrangement is to be followed out for the remainder of the week. Shock figures that he will have to ride almost continuously during the hours of the race in order to hold up his end, but from past performances he believes that he will be able to outdistance the animals.

P. J. Kerner, who is pitting the horses against Shock, believes that he has collected a score of animals that will be able to reel off a larger number of miles than the man on the bicycle. Shock's chance of winning depends upon his ability to keep going. Although he has not engaged in a race for several years, he has been working on the Fiesta track for some time, and has trained down to racing form.

Shock is 53 years of age. His advent in the field of athletics was made in 1876 in a walking match. In 1883 he competed, in a six-day race for the first time, riding a high wheel.

The first six-day race, continuous riding, on safety bicycles, was won by Shock at Madison Square Garden in 1893. He covered 1600 miles and three laps, beating his nearest competitor by more than 100 miles. He won his last six-day race at Washington in 1897, riding more than 1766 miles in 142 hours.

A purse of $2500, of which the winner will take 65 per cent., is said to be the prize of the Fiesta Park race. William Bostave and John R. Costoon are to relay each other every five miles in riding the horses.

If Shock still has the remarkable endurance that he had twelve years ago he should be able to pile up a large mileage during the long contest. He claims that he is in excellent condition and prepared to stay on his wheel all day if necessary in order to keep ahead of the horses.

4 Cylinder Tourists for Delivery At Once

We are glad to be able to make this announcement.

The ever-increasing demand for four-cylinder 1909 Tourists this season swamped our factory. For months we have been increasing our capacity, until now our sales and factory output are somewhere near even—for a few days at least.

We have a few—and only a few—Type "H" and Type "G" Tourists ready to be delivered at once.

Type "H" 40, four-cylinder, 35-40 B. H. P. For immediate delivery in four-passenger roadsters and five-passenger touring cars, $2250.

All equipped with Magneto or Atwater-Kent system, optional. 118-inch wheel base, 34x4 inch tires. Five lamps, generator, trunk rack and tools complete. Top extra.

The sale of these Type "H" machines this year has been tremendous, and every one of them is making good—every buyer is more than satisfied.

You don't need a higher-priced car for use on the coast—and unless you do pay a much higher price, you can't buy a car in any way equal to the Type "H" Tourist. A statement we want to prove to you.

Type "G" four-cylinder, 25-30 B. H. P. Ready for immediate delivery in four-passenger Toy Tonneau, and five-passenger touring cars, $1650.

106-inch wheel base, 32x3½ inch tires, oil pan base motor, Magneto or Atwater-Kent system, optional; five lamps, generator, tools complete. Tops extra.

Actual comparison—side by side—and equipment against equipment—will prove to you conclusively that this car in structure, materials and equipment cannot be duplicated on the Coast today for $1650, or anywhere near that price.

Two Handsome 4 Cyl. 40 H. P. Limousines at Greatly Reduced Prices

The only cars left of the "exhibition cars" put on sale two weeks ago. They are strictly down-to-the-minute Limousines in every detail. Equipment and upholstery the very best. A splendid buy for any one in the automobile rental business. Cars as showy as these will not stand idle long at a time. Elks are coming next week—and automobiles will be in great demand. So will these two cars. Better see them early Monday—for we have put a "move quick" price on them.

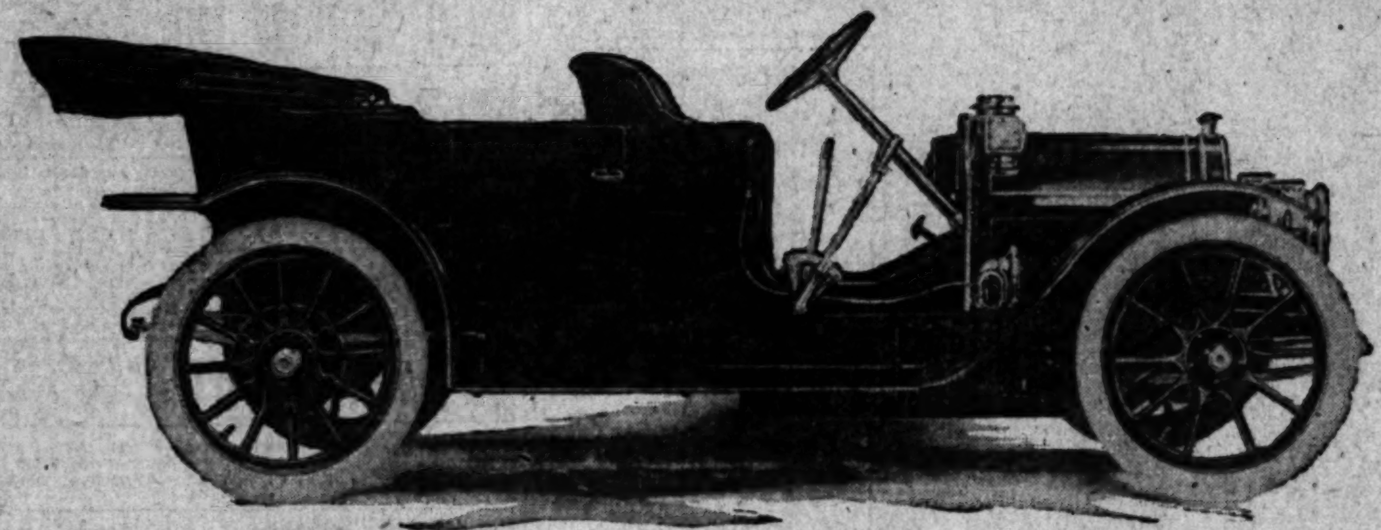
Chalmers-Detroit 1910 Announcement

Our 1910 Models Will Be on Show This Month

Chalmers-Detroit "30"
1910 Model $1650
F. O. B. LOS ANGELES



The Chalmers-Detroit "30," 1910 Model, has a 115-inch wheel base. That's three inches longer than our "Forty" of last season. It has 34 inch wheels, against 32 inch last season. Tonneau is more roomy and stylish, the hood accordingly longer and higher. Double Drop Frame.

Bosch Magneto	$125.00
Prest-o-lite and Gas Lamps	50.00
	$175.00
The Above Equipment Taken Together	$100.00

Note the picture above. This amazing car with all the lines of the costliest cars—Showy, roomy, long and luxurious—sells again this season for $1650 f.o.b. Los Angeles

On May 12—right at the height of the season—the last Chalmers-Detroit "30," of the 1909 model, was sold.

Since then the factory has turned away orders for more than 800 cars.

Think of a shortage of 800 cars of this model the first season—unfilled orders for $1,200,000. Yet we told you this would happen. When people awoke to this amazing car we had never a hope of supplying them.

Now we announce our 1910 models. We will have our new show cars about July 20. We'll begin our deliveries about August 1st.

So, you who were disappointed in not getting the 1909 models can get the new models within a few weeks. Get your orders in now.

Larger Cars—Same Price

For 1910, we are going to give you even more than before for the money.

Our new Chalmers-Detroit "30"—our $1650 car—will have a 115-inch wheel base. That's three inches longer than our 1909 "Forty."

It will have 34-inch wheels—two inches larger than last season.

The hood will be three inches longer and two inches higher—in keeping with the larger body. The tonneau will be large and roomy. And not a car on the market, regardless of price, will have a more stylish body. Note the picture above.

Our 1910 "Forty" will have a 122-inch wheel base—ten inches longer than last season. It will have 36-inch wheels, and room for seven passengers. Our 1909 "Forty" was a five-passenger car.

Our new "Forty" will be upholstered in hand-buffed leather, and a Bosch Magneto will be furnished free.

Yet, with all these costly improvements, not a penny is added to the price of either car.

How They Have Done It

The cost of materials has immensely advanced—from $75 to $100 per car. But they have more than offset this extra cost, and this is how they have done it:

This year they have doubled their factory and increased their capacity by 1,000 cars. These 1,000 additional cars will be produced without a dollar's extra cost for management, for advertising or supervision.

Last year their fixed expense on the "30" was divided by 2,500 cars. This year the same expense is divided by 3,500 cars. That makes a considerable difference per car.

Then, our cars are not altered in mechanical ways. Last year's experience developed no weakness whatever. This year increasing the bore of our cylinders to four inches and making slight changes in the exhaust valves gives us considerably more power, but we still rate the motor at 30 h.p. In the other vital features, there's no possible room for improvement.

So the same tools and machinery will serve for another year. That expense of last season doesn't need to be repeated.

Thus they have saved a great deal. And every penny they save has been given to you in the shape of more beautiful cars.

Nine Per Cent Profit Still

The factory profit for 1909 was approximately 9 per cent. Their profit for 1910 will be about the same. They are going to build 1,000 more cars than they did in 1909, and every cent that they save by increasing their output will go into size, finish and style.

In other words, they offset the increased cost by an increased output. The Chalmers-Detroit cars will always give the most for the money.

They will always give you every penny's worth of value it is possible to give and retain what would be considered fair profit in any business.

But our cars of last season were mechanically perfect. So all the saving has gone into size and beauty.

Extras at Low Cost

Here is an additional policy adopted for 1910; that is, to furnish the following extras at the lowest possible cost—much cheaper than you could possibly buy them unless you bought them from us:

We will fit our $1650 car with a Bosch Magneto, a Prest-O-Lite gas tank and two of the Atwood-Castle new-style gas lamps, all for $100 extra. The cost of these extras at regular prices would be $175.

The Records of 1909

The Chalmers-Detroit "30" was a new car only year ago. One could judge it only by the splendi records of the Chalmers-Detroit "Forty."

Its main prestige lay in the fact that Mr. Cofi designed it—the man who designed our "Forty." Bu $1500 was a new price—an amazing price. And the world wondered what sort of car it would bu Now the records are in.

One of our "30's" has been run 32,000 miles, a has just completed a path-finding trip from Denver Mexico City. Never has any car, at any price, ma an equal endurance record.

Owners have paid us for repair parts on all ca shipped during the year just passed, exactly $2.44 p car. We believe this is another world record.

In the Economy Test, made in New York by New York Auto Dealers' Association, our "30" ma 25.7 miles on a gallon of gasoline.

On a long distance road race its average spe was 50.2 miles per hour.

Never did a car prove more satisfactory. Nev did a car cost so little for upkeep. Mr. Coffin h devoted another year to its study. Yet he has foun no mechanical way to improve it.

It won the Indiana Trophy for the light car cl —the greatest road race ever held in the West, averaging 51.4 miles per hour.

Note our "Forty" for 1910 has a 122-inch wheel base--ten inches longer than last season. It has 36-inch wheels--two inches larger than last season. It has seats for seven passengers at $75 extra. Upholstered in hand-buffed leather. MAGNETO FREE

The Buyers of 1909

A considerable number of the best engineers in America bought the Chalmers-Detroit for 1909. These names are among them:

Mr. Geo. H. Helvey, designer of the Corliss engine.

Mr. John B. Herreshoff, designer of the yachts which have successfully defended the America Cup.

Mr. Joseph Boyer, president of the Burroughs Adding Machine Co.

Mr. J. G. Vincent, head of the Burroughs invention department.

Mr. L. H. Perlman, president Welch Motor Car Company of New York.

Mr. N. Platt, president Baker Electric Vehicle Co. of New York.

Mr. John F. O'Rourke, builder of the New York Subway and Hudson River Tunnel.

Dr. Lee DeForest, of Wireless Telegraphy fame.

Our buyers also include the names of many men with the widest automobile experience. Of men who are known to demand the utmost without much regard for the price, we find these names among them:

Geo. W. Vanderbilt, for his Biltmore estate.

Percy Rockefeller. John S. Huyler. O. J. Gude.

A. R. Shattuck, ex-president of the Automobile Club of America.

Ezra A. Fitch, of the firm which furnished most of Mr. Roosevelt's African outfit.

Charles Hathaway. A. R. Pardington.

Douglas Robinson. Arthur Brisbane.

Such buyers show how the Chalmers-Detroits are regarded by men who know.

The tide of automobile demand is turning to these medium-priced cars. Not alone because of their moderate cost, but mainly because of their low cost of upkeep.

Most men find in the Chalmers-Detroit "30" all that they want in a car. And no price can buy more than we give in our "Forty," save unneeded power.

Last season these cars had no real competitio This season we have doubled their sightliness wi out adding a penny of cost. We have even reduc the price by reducing the extras.

There can be no question of choice. There is noth ing on the market which begins to compare with th value one gets in these cars.

Make your comparisons. Get your order in ear to insure prompt delivery. If you buy early you hav four or five months use of a car at a time when th weather is best for motoring, before the car's calenda year really begins.

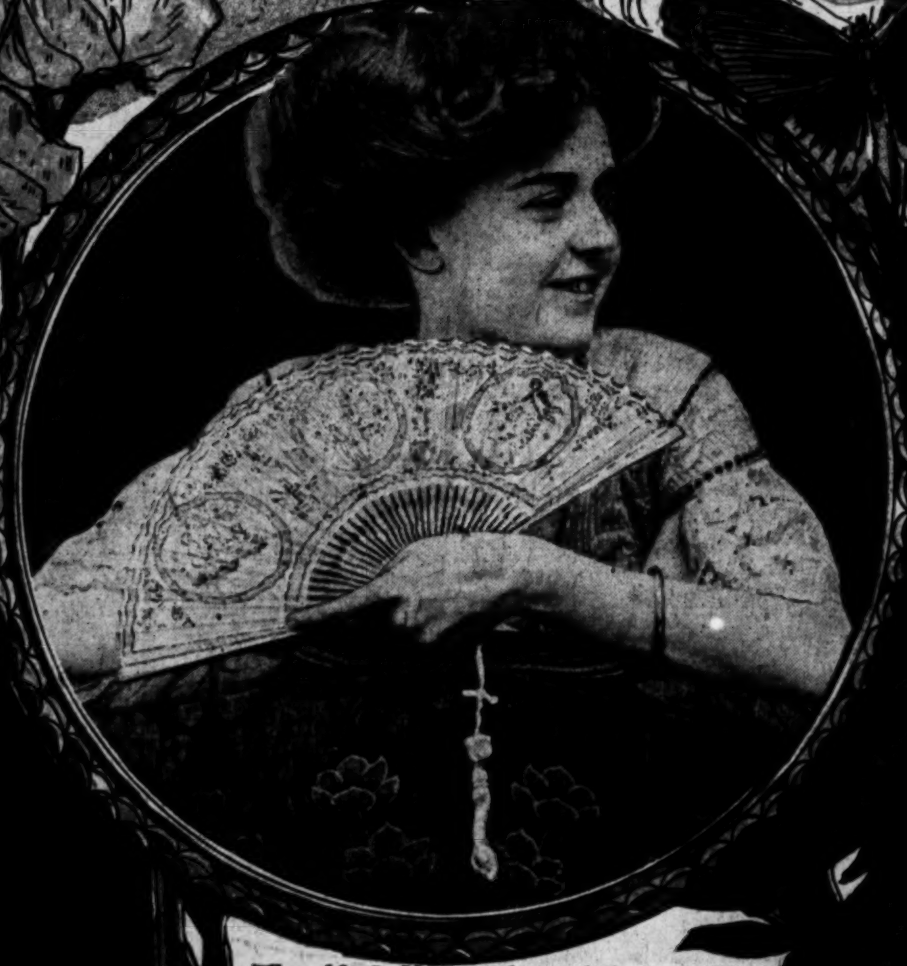
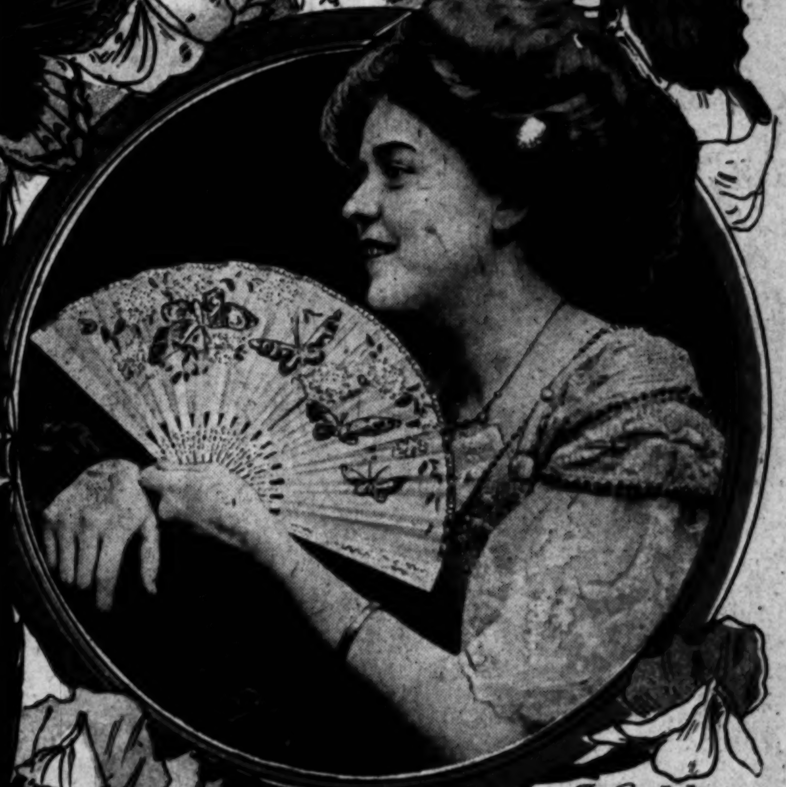
The Fascinating Fan

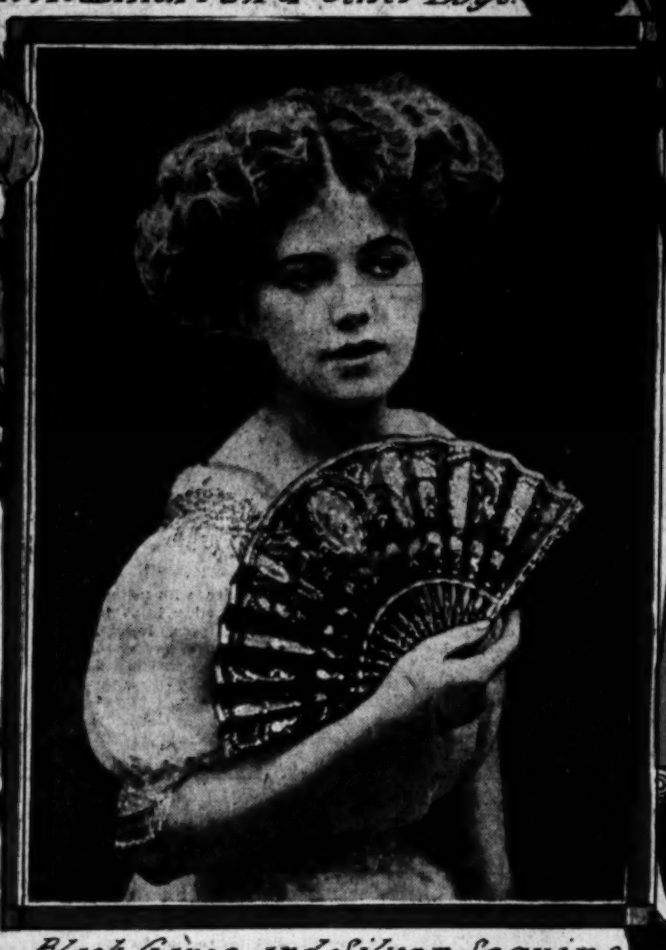


The Medallion Fan of Other Days.



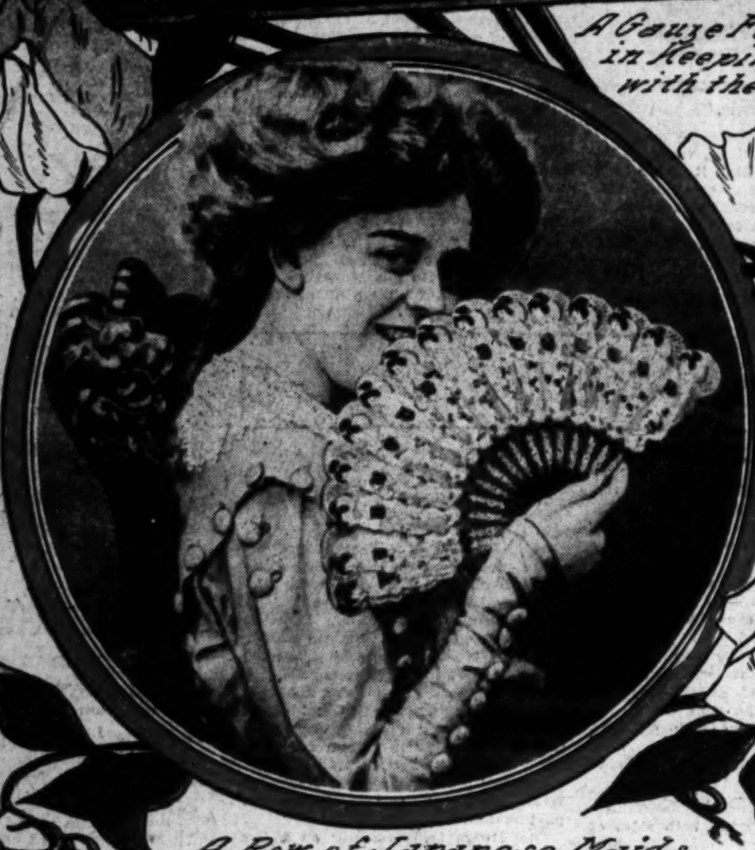
A Golden Butterfly Decoration.

A Gauze Fan in Keeping with the Gown.

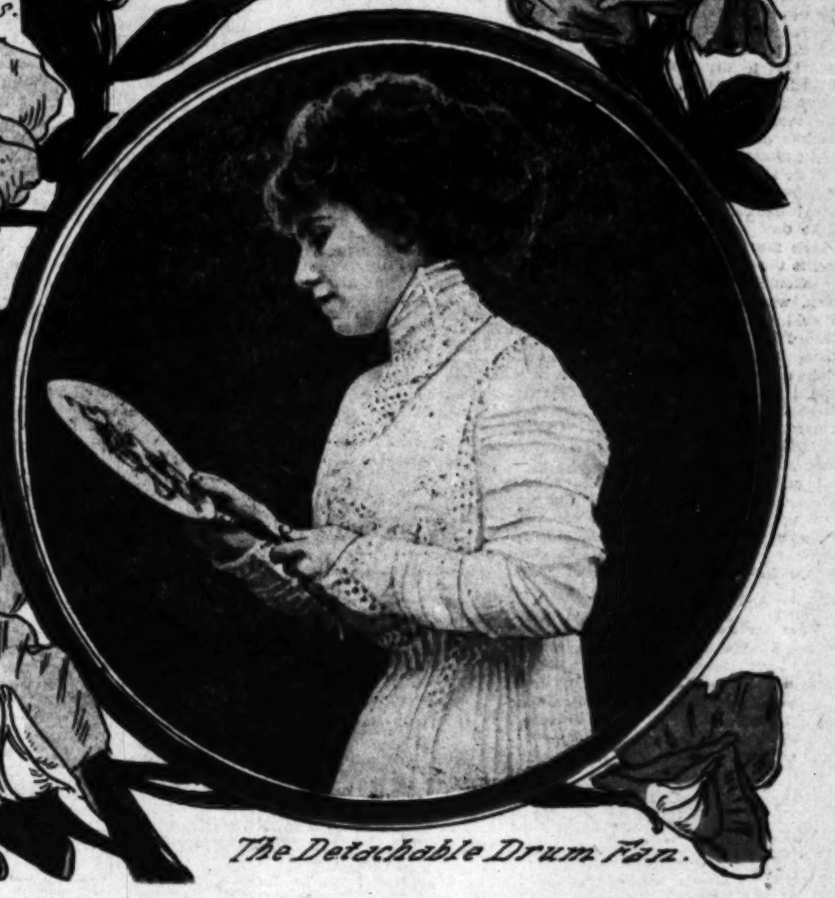


Black Gauze and Silver Sequins.

A Painted Louis Fan



A Row of Japanese Maids.



The Detachable Drum Fan.

THE fan, whether in its most fascinating form or in its plainest palmleaf make-up, is to us a mere accessory—a plaything—useless except on the warmest days, and then only when stern duty allows us a free hand with which to coax the passing breeze. If the fan was much to the frivolous ladies of France, where it developed into the thing it now is, it was more to the old court diplomat, who knew its language and used it as tool and weapon, and to the far-away Japanese, whose symbolism included every sort, from "the fan of the kitchen" to the fan in war. Just what was expected in warfare of this tender stick of wood, with its top of gauze or feathers, is hardly clear, but certain it is that warriors died on battlefields holding their fans before them.

Japan has not lost her love for this symbolic thing. The row of flirtatious Japanese maidens in gayest color attests the eastern ingenuity in fans, as does the drum fan of painted pineapple gauze. The drum, or covered disk, which is decorated with figures or landscapes, is detachable, so that it may be dipped in cold water and then replaced in its handle to cool the air with its moisture.

Black gauze has been adorned with silver sequins to good effect in one of our modern fans, and another gauze one in keeping with the gown is delicately painted with large white flowers. Sequins play a leading part in fan decoration. Some golden butterflies afloat on white silk is typical of the present-day fan done in imitation of those foreign and exclusive ones upon which almost every French artist has experimented for some idle hour in an effort to get away from his oppressively large canvas. These artists made the fan of today what it is by thus amusing themselves on satin, silk and gauze in the same spirit that many of them have toyed with the miniature. The modern feather fan, which has had periods of popularity, grew out of the long-handled frond of feathers used by the Egyptian slaves to fan their dusky queen. Sandalwoods and carved ivories, which have been used for whole fans as well as sticks, have come and gone according to the whims of women. Huge half-circles have been carried or infinitesimal bits of elegance, according to the fashion belt into which women have allowed themselves to drift.

The medallion fan of other days is a painted satin in the mixed colors of the Louis XV period. It is of fair size, while the smaller painted rose fan of the Louis XIV reign is here to set the size that we will be called upon to carry when the panier and pointed bodice have their swing. This very smallness takes us back to those revolutionary days when pitiable, frivolous Du Barry rode in a cart to the guillotine carrying a fascinating little fan whose charm she never questioned.

I HAD written out the caption of another paper for this week's discussion when the mail was brought in. A thick letter, bearing a California postmark, dropped from the bag when it was opened. After reading all the shorter epistles, as is my wont, I "tackled" the bulky missive and did not lay it down until the last word was read. Then I turned back to the first page and went over it a second time.

It is well written, and with honesty so evident and earnestness so unfeigned that I cannot cavil at the sentiments therein expressed. A long half hour of musing—a veritable brown study—resulted in the determination to substitute the California woman's dissertation upon raw foods for the talk I had planned.

Before yielding the floor to her, let me remark that here is no new theory, although the application of it to this particular matter, the reduction of obesity, may be novel. Ten years and more ago the papers teemed with arguments for and against raw foods as the exclusive diet of the human species. We received samples of sun-baked bread and flour ground from desiccated vegetables, and circulars setting forth the superiority of dried fruits and nut pastes to cooked desserts. We were invited to lectures illustrated by the exhibition of robust boys, and men with sinews of steel, who had been fed from the cradle upon raw carrots, potatoes and turnips, and who could not abide the thought of spoiling the kindly foods of the earth by killing the natural juices with fire, and thus changing the chemical properties designed by nature for the sustenance and upbuilding of her favorite child—man as the Creator meant him to be.

AN OPEN QUESTION

As a rule of wide application, we have remained unconverted. The kitchen range, condemned by the teachers of the new school—which they tell us is the old—as an altar whereupon reek unholy sacrifices to the depraved tastes of an artificial civilization, burns steadily, and odors more fragrant than incense, to the senses of degenerate flesh-eaters, titillate our nostrils with the incoming and the outgoing of each day.

Thus stands the case I shall submit to our enlightened constituency—candid and broadminded as I have ever found it to be.

How much of practical truth is there in the theory that uncooked foods are—or should be—the natural diet of the men, women and children of our age? Would the practice strenuously defended by the apostles of the school I have spoken of, banish disease and make athletes of our race? Or is the new school but one of a hundred fads that have their little day, and die, leaving gastronomic and culinary lore as they have been from the beginning of all the time we have known and read of?

I ask a free expression of opinion from our intelligent members. Can we live upon the provender that contents graminivorous animals? Are we sinning against our bodies and minds and controverting God's designs in and for us?

A PECULIAR DIET

Now for our California letter, for which I bespeak a respectful perusal:

"I have read the appeal of 'A Frightened Woman,' and, having been at one time in the same trouble, I feel that I must tell her of my experience.

"I am five feet three inches in height, and from 130 to 135 pounds in weight is as much as I could carry gracefully. So when I began to take on flesh, and kept up the habit, I was much annoyed, and when I reached 170 pounds I also was 'frightened,' and finally consulted our family physician. He said, 'It's nothing! You are taking on flesh and you should take more exercise.'

"Now, I dislike to 'take exercise,' and, as the effect lasts only as long as the exercises are continued, I didn't try his prescription.

"I was, likewise, very much troubled with rheumatism, and longed for help just as this correspondent from Columbus, Ohio, wishes to get relief.

"Just about this time some acquaintance from Pasadena called. They believe thoroughly in 'raw foods,' and live according to their belief. I had no faith whatever in the theory. They were enthusiastic about it and were confident that it would help me. I was glad enough, by that time, to try something.

"The consequences were far beyond my highest expectations. In six weeks I lost thirty-five pounds, and that without taking a daily walk or any kind of exercise. And after I had arrived at normal weight I never lost another pound in a year. Besides this great benefit I was entirely cured of rheumatism.

"It is now two years since I started with this system. I have not had a twinge of rheumatism, and our baby, who is 9 months old, is the healthiest and best child I ever saw, while the older children suffered in infancy from poor digestion and other ailments resulting from malnutrition.

"I shall be happy to confer with any one who wishes to know the particulars of the system, and who is willing to try it. One thing is sure: one doesn't have to starve one's self. I have found numbers of people who are so fond of 'good things to eat' that they won't try anything which restricts them in that respect.

"I send you an account of how I used the raw foods. I can't say enough in praise of the results, but after being accustomed to eat cooked foods for a lifetime it takes 'lots' of determination to continue a long time in the new way.

"The raw food method, as I took it, was to eat nothing that had been cooked—no meat, eggs, butter or milk—and to drink nothing but water, but plenty of that.

"One meal a day is sufficient. In two or three days one gets used to this. About 4 P. M., or later, eat some fruit—as much or as little as you like. After this, some raw vegetables, with neither pepper, salt, sugar nor other helps to taste. I ate tomatoes, peas, lettuce, onions and cucumbers—one or more kinds, and as much or as little as I cared for—and always nuts. These were English walnuts and almonds, they being my favorites. They seem to supply all the fats I needed. Finally, I ate two teaspoonfuls of wheat, whole. One may grind it if one likes it better that way. I also took two spoonfuls of dried peas, ground, and sometimes I ate a spoonful of whole flaxseed.

"All these must be eaten dry and, of course, very slowly, the wheat especially, as it is the foundation of the diet. After this meal one may easily go twenty-four hours and feel better for not eating more. In all of this food one should swallow only what is thoroughly dissolved in the mouth. The rest, fiber and skins, must be rejected, and never taken into the stomach.

"Mrs. F. M. G. (Hollywood, Cal.)."

Lest some skeptical meat-eater may suspect me of palming off a burlesque upon a credulous audience, let me remind him that the address in full of our enthusiastic vegetarian who finds one meal per diem all she requires to keep her well and strong and contented awaits the call of any one who would like to consult her further with regard to the extraordinary system she exploits. The practical and sensible housemother should look at all sides of the question (and of all questions) before discarding it in toto. And let us confess on some hot day in early summer that there are alluring features in a system which involves neither fire nor other preparation for feeding the body than the exertion of champing a handful of wheat and peas into a digestible paste, winding up the solitary meal of the twenty-four hours with a spoonful or two of nuts as a dessert. No heat in kitchen or dining room—in fact, no kitchen! And, to parody the blissful anticipation of the "old lady who lived where help wasn't hired"—

Everything there will be quite to our wishes,
For where there's no cooking there'll be no washing of dishes.

Seriously, will our doctors and dietitians favor us with a professional verdict in the case? Were carnivorous teeth lacking in the dental outfit of the original human being? Are they one of the many "inventions" which the depraved descendants have "sought out"? Or a blunder in the making which the latter-day reformer is bent upon setting right?

How far may vegetarianism be carried with advantage to the race?

On Soap Making

THERE is one evident fault in "V. C. P.'s" attempt to make soft soap, if she used sal soda.

In view of this blunder, a short digest of the properties of soap stock—that is, tallow and other fats—may be of service.

Tallow, butter, household grease (drippings) and vegetable fats and oils are composed of fat acids and glycerine, and a variable amount, always small, of what are chemically known as "free fat acids." These act very differently from "fat acids" combined with glycerine. Free fat acids may be converted into soap by the use of sal soda, whereas the fat acids combined with glycerine (neutral fat) cannot be made into soap except by boiling with caustic soda (concentrated lye).

In order to succeed in soap making:

First. Weigh your grease ("soap stock") into a vessel of convenient size—a cast-iron pot, if you have one.

Second. Allow two ounces of pure, freshly opened concentrated lye for each pound of the fat. Dissolve the lye in nine times its weight of water. If you have three pounds of fat you will need six ounces of concentrated lye, dissolved in fifty-four ounces of water.

Third. Heat the fat and the lye separately; then pour the lye upon the fat, stirring vigorously with a wooden spoon. Should it froth violently, stop pouring until the mixture subsides; then go on with the lye.

When the ingredients are thoroughly mixed bring to the boil and keep up a gentle simmer until the solution is of uniform consistency throughout. Stir frequently and vigorously.

When you have a smooth compound take a little out with the paddle, let it cool slightly, rub it upon paper and hold up to the light. If grease be not converted into soap, a transparent grease will appear upon the paper. It may be distinguished readily from a wet spot. In this case boil a while longer.

If these directions are carried out carefully there is no danger of failure; but do not, upon any consideration, alter the proportions of soap stock and concentrated lye, and boil a long time.

To test the consistency of soft soap cool a small portion. If too thick, add water.

H. S. (Detroit).

The foregoing concise and satisfactory recipe for the manufacture of soft soap is written out, he says, "in compliance with my wife's request," by a practical chemist, as an answer to my query, "What is wrong?" appended to the letter of a housemother who had failed in her attempt to make the desired article.

"Mrs. H. S." will accept our congratulations upon her good fortune in possessing so clever and complaisant a "John." It is not every man who cares anything for his wife's failures and successes in these lines, and some who are interested cannot "lend a hand." The Exchange is honored by the accession of so capable a member.

A Recipe and a Fairy Story

A few months ago somebody asked for the repetition of a cracker cake recipe. You replied that you did not recall the recipe, or that it had never appeared in the Exchange. Perhaps this is what was wanted. You published it about four years ago. I have tried it and find it very good:

Date Tarts.

Twelve eggs, whites and yolks beaten separately; one-half pound of dates or raisins cut up fine; one pound of sugar; ten large square soda crackers, or twelve if small; one teaspoonful of mixed allspice and cinnamon; two ounces of grated chocolate and the juice and grated rind of a lemon.

Add the sugar to the beaten yolks, beaten to a cream; add spices, lemon, chocolate, dates and the crackers, crushed fine; lastly, fold on the well-beaten whites. Bake in an unbuttered cake mould forty or forty-five minutes; or bake as you would angel's food cake.

I hope I am not too late in the season with a helping hint.

One day as I was bewailing the fruit-stained plight of my table linen, a fine old Vermont housekeeper said to me: "Just wash it all when the fruit trees are in bloom. Wash it early in the day and let it hang out until evening and the fruit fairies will have stolen every stain." I obeyed. It was an ideal day. The air was redolent with the fragrance of fruit blossoms and I enjoyed every minute of life and the season. The fruit stains vanished completely along with my skepticism. It seemed too good to be true.

Hint the second:

I removed the ugly impress of a hot flat-iron from a gray cloth skirt by covering the spot with a thick paste of laundry starch and water, placing it in the sun out of doors for four or five hours, then brushing out the starch.

Now, I have relieved my mind, or rather my conscience, for I have felt guilty for a long time because I have been enjoying the Corner all these years and I ought to contribute my share.

I like your good old-fashioned views as to training children and your stand against divorce. I think if we would treat divorced people who marry again (and were divorced for that purpose) to a dignified degree of social ostracism it might have some effect on the tendency to seek a divorce upon insignificant grounds.

Have you the address of "Lonely Boy," Grand Haven, Mich.? I should like to send him some papers, including a year's numbers of St. Nicholas, if he still wishes to get reading matter.

Affirming allegiance to you and the Exchange, I remain,

A BUSY MOTHER AND HOUSEWIFE.
(Evanston, Ill.).

"Lonely Boy's" address is over a year old. He was abundantly supplied with books and papers soon after his appeal appeared. I do not know where or how he is now. I wish, if this should fall under his eye, that he would write to us again.

Your fairy story is as pretty as pretty can be. Suppose we try the bleaching process when the fruit is green and ripening, when the sun is at the hottest and the days are at the longest, and see if the fairies will not be as obliging as when the trees are in bloom. I hope some worried housemother will take the hint and inform us of the result.

My views upon the importance to child, even more than to mother, of prompt and implicit obedience in nursery and home are as pronounced as my convictions that the "until death us do part" has the force of a solemn oath, dictated by Our Lord and lawgiver, and not to be set aside for any cause lighter than that which He designates. I reaffirm here my belief that if remarriage on the part of either party to the rupture of this contract were a legal impossibility, there would not be one divorce where there are now fifty—a belief that strengthens with perusal of proceedings in our divorce courts.

With the Utmost Care

Will you kindly tell me how to can asparagus? And green beans?

I have canned tomatoes successfully by boiling and sealing the jars while the tomatoes are hot. The rule does not seem to apply to the two vegetables I have named.

May I trouble you for a reply before the canning season is over?

The suggestions in the Exchange are most valuable to me.

MARIE S. (Los Angeles, Cal.).

Canned Asparagus.

Fill a large kettle or boiler half way to the top with boiling water, slightly salted. Cut off the hard, lower part of the asparagus stalks, wash and lay in the boiler. When you have as much as the water will cover well, cook tender, but not until the asparagus breaks. Ten minutes' steady, slow boil should suffice. Take the asparagus out carefully, stalk by stalk, and pack, tips up, in heated glass jars. The cans should stand in a pan of boiling water on the range while you are filling them. When a jar has in it all the asparagus it will hold, fill with the water from the kettle in which it was cooked, which must be kept at a hard boil all the time. Everything depends upon heat and the exclusion of air. The cans should be filled to overflowing, the rubbers and tops, previously sterilized by immersion in boiling water, must be fitted on without the loss of a second, and the work is done. Set away the cans in a cool, dark place and wrap each in paper to make sure the light does not reach them. It will darken the delicate vegetable.

Canned Beans.

Trim the strings from both sides of string beans and cut them into short lengths. Have your kettle ready, half full of boiling water, seasoned with salt and pepper. Put in all the beans it will cover well and cook ten minutes from the time the boil begins. Take out the beans with a skimmer or perforated spoon and pack into the heated cans or jars. Fill to overflowing with the boiling water from the kettle; seal as directed in last recipe. Keep in the dark and in a cool place.

Lima beans are canned in the same way after they are shelled.

It is but fair to warn you that these vegetables and corn do not keep always as well as tomatoes. The utmost care must be taken to sterilize jars, tops and rubbers and to have everything used in the work boiling hot at the moment of canning. Hence the work must be done on the stove and by two persons, one filling and the other sealing the overflowing cans.

An Inviting Kitchen

I wish to correct the impression made by your friend's disastrous results with the table oilcloth on her kitchen walls. If properly hung there is no place left for roaches or other pests. It should be made fast to the wall with flour paste as wall paper is put on, but using a little heavier paste. I have had it upon my kitchen in my Kentucky home for four years and with great satisfaction. Neither heat nor water injures it, and it is more easily kept clean than are painted walls.

Mine is a mottled green and white design, in a tile effect. The ceiling is painted a dull soft green and the woodwork is of a little darker olive, with window shades to match. This, with linoleum on the floor, a large table covered with zinc and a white enameled sink, makes a clean and cool-looking kitchen.

The oilcloth is made in designs especially suitable for walls. There are several brands of it on the market.

Mrs. R. E. G. (Austin, Texas).

The picture of that kitchen awakens a lively desire to don a big bib-apron and fall to work at that table in company with the cheery mistress of the domain. With a fireless cooker on the table and the shades lowered half-way down the second sash, it would be a cozy corner for a couple of congenial cronies in mid-July, while they are preparing vegetables for dinner, or paring them for canning, or paring fruit for some one of the manifold forms of "Heavenly Hash" bestowed upon us during the past month.

The dream is refreshing on a hot day.

All health and prosperity to this "old Kentucky home"!

Canning Corn

Kindly send me recipes for canning corn, string beans, wax beans and green peas. LOUISE C. (Dallas, Texas).

It is the heyday of canning time down in Texas—evidently! Read what I have said to your fellow-housemother who puts a similar question in this issue.

The art of canning corn is the most difficult of all that I have ever essayed. But you may cut it from the cob, bring it to a boil slowly in the juice that flows from it in cutting, setting the pot in boiling water until it begins to cook; then, after boiling hard five minutes, proceed as with beans. Salt very slightly before boiling. Seal at once and wrap each can in thick paper.

A Norwegian Cheese

THERE is a most peculiar-looking cheese that is kept under glass on some very exclusive delicatessen counters.

It is so ancient and yellow it suggests nothing newer than the old-world legend of the bishop of Bingen on his mouse tower on the Rhine; but the up-to-date authority on milk and cream products tells us it is Gedost cheese, which is of Norwegian make and, by way of being unusual, it is sweet.

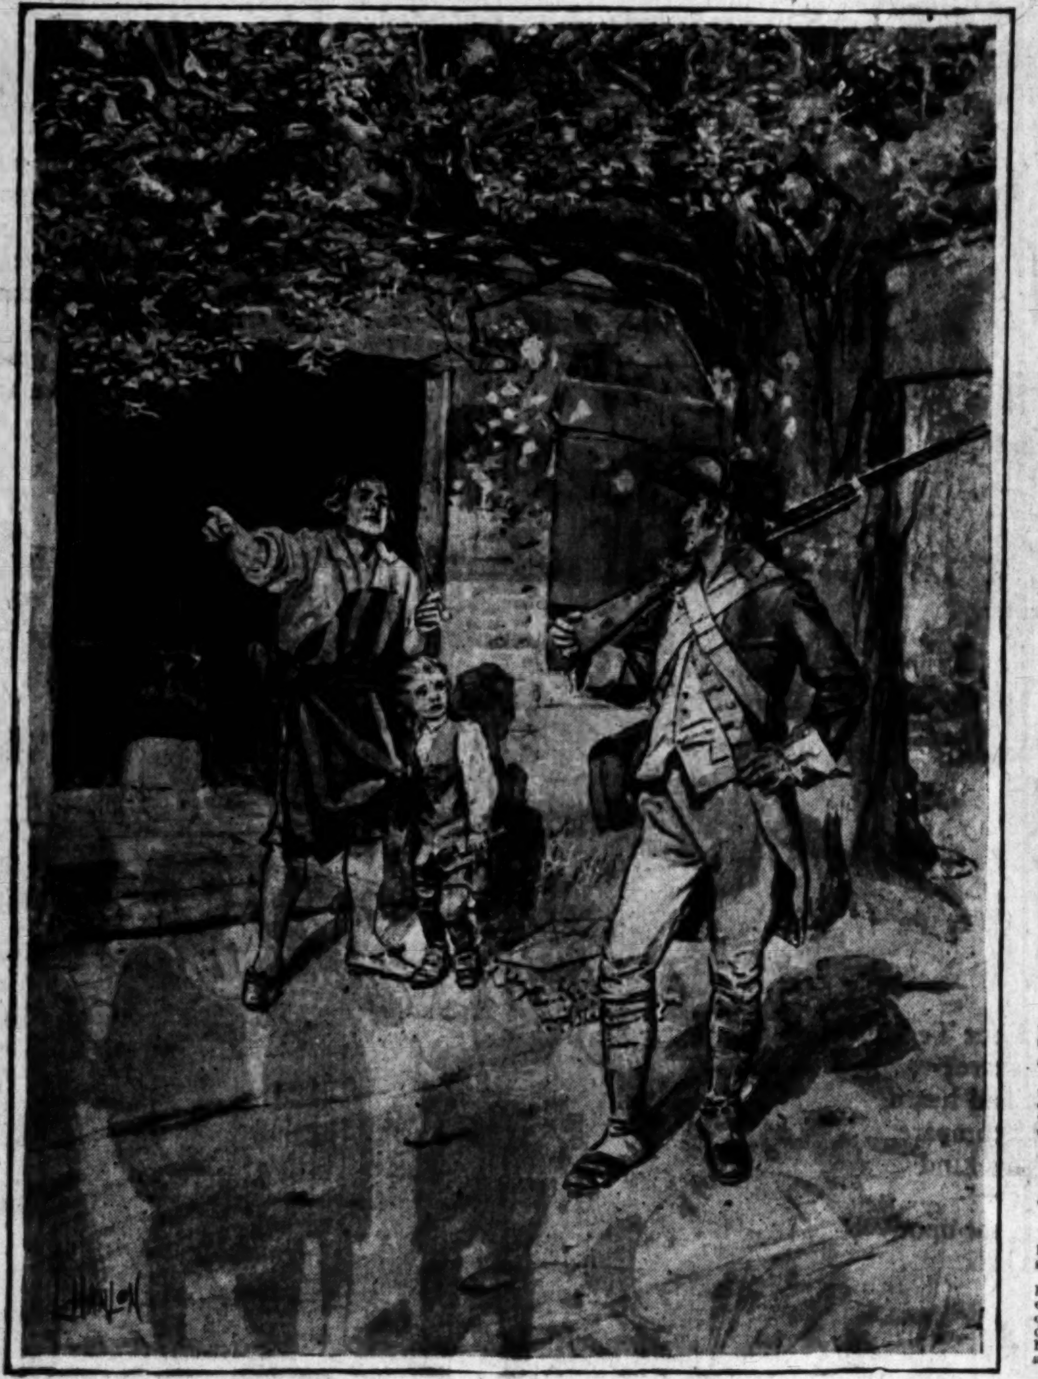
Davy Goes to War



THE SMITH POINTS OUT THE WAY TO THE CONTINENTAL SOLDIER

"TELL me, good friend, which way leads to the harbor?" asked the soldier in the bedraggled uniform of a Continental soldier, as he leaned upon his musket in front of the smithy.

The blacksmith took his long-stemmed pipe from his mouth to reply: "Straight on, my man, and may good luck go with you and our forces."

Shouldering his musket, the soldier paused to thank the blacksmith, and remarked, "Faith, we are sadly in need of luck." Then he continued his journey.

Once more the smith bent to his task at the forge. By his side stood little David. Usually the lad found the work of his father most absorbing; but now his thoughts were not upon the metal as it was beaten into shape. He was thinking of the soldier who had passed a short time since.

"Father," said he, "'twill be a long time 'fore I'm a man, won't it?"

The smith wiped the sweat from his brow and chuckled as he replied: "You are sprouting up like a weed, boy. Ask mother, and she will tell you that she is losing her baby fast enough. But what troubles you now, my boy?"

"I was just thinking," said David, reflectively, "that I'd like to go 'way and fight with the soldiers, only I'm not big and it'll be years and years 'fore I'll be a man, I s'pose."

"Time enough," quoth the father, as he renewed his labor.

FOLLOWED THE SOLDIER

Yet David could not banish the vision of the soldier who was going out to fight—to fight, just as he himself would like to battle and do brave deeds. Finally, he slipped from the shop, and hardly conscious of what he was doing, ran down the road along which the soldier was traveling.

David's legs were short; his steps were tiny; but so quickly did he move those sturdy limbs that before very long the soldier was in sight. At the same time there came the sound of firing in the distance. Presently the boy heard the tramp of many feet. The soldier heard them, too, for immediately he ran to the side of the road and hid himself in the thicket.

Soon there appeared round the turn of the road a company of the Britishers. David by this time had imitated the example of his soldier friend and was hidden close by. The soldier, thinking to make at least one shot and then escape into the thick underbrush, where capture seemed impossible, carefully sighted his rifle. He fired, and a scarlet-coated figure tumbled to the ground. Quickly the soldier dashed deeper into the wood, biting off the end of a cartridge and reloading his musket as he ran. He would have got away, no doubt, had not a chance shot of the enemy found in him a mark. Down he crashed, as did the man he had shot.

All of this Davy had seen. At first the little fellow was greatly frightened. Then the thought came to him that this was war, in which he had often longed to take a share. Now was his opportunity. And, although his little frame trembled with excitement, the boy crawled to where the dead Continental soldier lay. He raised the musket slightly. It was heavy—so heavy that it required all his strength to lift it partly from the ground. Then he seized the trigger and pulled with all his might. Thunderously the report sounded in his ears.

A party of British cautiously approached. David realized that now he must find a hiding place. Therefore, he silently withdrew and secreted himself in a clump of bushes.

For many minutes the British soldiers searched. The commander of the force evidently imagined that a considerable number of the Americans were posted to check his advance. Long time the skirmishers hunted. Then they withdrew, and after some consultation with his lieutenants, the leader ordered the march resumed.

Now that everything was over, David felt weak and faint. How far it seemed to home! He waited, of course, until the British were lost in the distance. Then he trudged back to the smithy.

Breathlessly, tremulously, he poured forth his story to his father, who listened, scarcely crediting the tale. But the story was true—and there was more to it. For it so happened that this tiny fellow had halted the British long enough to prevent them from reinforcing their comrades who were engaged in a desperate fight with the American army. And this delay caused the British to lose the battle!

Yes, David had been to war, and he had done nobly for his country. But now that he had seen just what war really was, no longer did he desire so strongly to shoulder a gun and march away to fight. It was nice to march, no doubt; but then it wouldn't be nice to be shot like his poor friend, the Continental soldier.

Ate His Children

THE queen of Denmark once paid a visit to the Danish colony in Iceland, where the good old bishop exerted himself to the utmost to show her everything that was worth seeing. The queen paid many compliments to her host, and, having learned that he was a family man, graciously inquired how many children he had. It happened that the Danish word for "children" is almost identical in sound with the Icelandic word for "sheep," so the worthy bishop, whose knowledge of Danish was not as complete as it might have been, understood her majesty to ask how many sheep he owned, and promptly answered:

"Two hundred."

"Two hundred children!" cried the queen, thinking the good man was joking. "How can you possibly maintain such a number?"

"Easily enough, please your majesty," replied the genial old prelate, with a cheerful smile. "In the summer I turn them out upon the hills to grass and, when winter comes I kill and eat them!"

Always Wore a Hat

THERE lived a very old man called the duke of Sussex. He nearly always had bad health, and what he was most afraid of was having to stand with his head uncovered.

Now, like all the other people, the duke had to take off his hat when in the presence of the great lady who was then queen of England, but he so much dreaded catching cold that one day he humbly asked the queen if she would allow him to wear his nightcap always.

This queen, who was very thankful for all that the wise old duke had done for her, at once graciously granted the request. Indeed, she even said to him, "My lord, you can wear two nightcaps if you like!"

So afterward the duke always wore his nightcap when he was in the presence of the queen, and no one laughed at him, because they knew that he was a very wise and learned man.

"ADVANCE WITH GREATEST DIGNITY TO THEIR SEATS"

Synopsis of Preceding Instalment.

EVELYN REYNOLDS, a daughter of rich parents, wishes to brighten the lives of the Peebles children, who are very poor. The Peebles dwell in an alley to the rear of the Reynolds' dwelling. First inviting them over the garden wall, Evelyn afterward takes them into the house, where they hear wonderful music from a phonograph. While she is arranging to have refreshments served by the maid, her guests slide down the banisters. Evelyn returns and is surprised to find the six Peebles thus engaged.

"OH, you'll get hurt!" cried Evelyn, in a distressed voice, as Billie, unable to pause in his flight, shot over the newel post and fell in a heap to the floor. There he lay, providing a cushion for five hasty travelers who followed in rapid succession.

"It's great! Let's have another!" shrieked Mandy by way of reply. Disentangling herself from the heap, she darted up the stairway. But hardly had she reached the landing from which the daring slide was to be repeated than a stern-faced lady, garbed in black, suddenly made her appearance from a room nearby. She quickly glanced from one to another of the disturbers, and then sharply demanded:

"Come! What is the meaning of this?"

The Peebles didn't stop to explain. So accustomed were they to being pursued that they regarded 'most every grown-up in authority as an enemy. With a shrill yell of "Cheese it!" Jimmy dashed through the hallway and out into the garden. Close upon his heels fled his brothers and sisters without a word of good-bye to their hostess. The next instant Evelyn found herself alone with Mrs. Green, the housekeeper.

"I'm afraid you've frightened them so they will never come back," said the little girl regretfully.

"Humph! I shouldn't think any one would care to have such heathen return," sniffed Mrs. Green.

Evelyn sighed. Truly, it did seem that her plans would fail as did those of the knight, Don Quixote, with whom she had been compared by her father. She certainly had made a poor beginning, anyway.

Two days passed, during which time Evelyn saw nothing of the Peebles, although she watched the little backyard across the alley diligently. But on the third day she managed to catch a glimpse of Mandy as that worthy tried to dodge into the house before her former hostess could call to her.

"Mandy! Please come over!" cried Evelyn.

A minute passed, then Mandy poked her face cautiously out the door, as though fearing Mrs. Green still was lurking in wait for her. Observing that the coast was clear, however, she was finally induced to approach the garden wall.

"Do come over," pleaded Evelyn.

"Is SHE about?" queried Mandy in a whisper.

"She?" replied the mystified Evelyn.

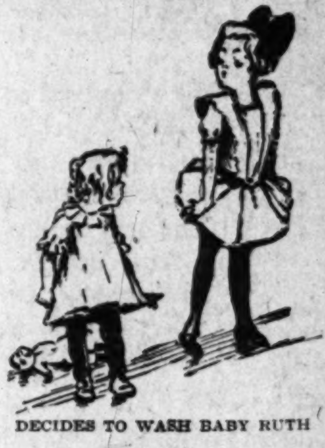
Mandy screwed her face into a pucker, and jerking her thumb mysteriously toward the mansion, explained, "The lady what chased us."

"Oh, no," the other responded, reassuringly, "Mrs. Green isn't about; besides, she wouldn't harm you."

Mandy shook her head doubtfully. "I don't know; she looks just 'zactly like a lady what hit me over the head wunst I was playin' on a doorstep."

"But what is it you want to be a-tellin' me?" she asked, curiosity getting the better of discretion.

"I wanted to know if you and Lizzie and Jimmy and all the rest of you couldn't pay me a visit this evening. I'll do my best to entertain you," said "Miss Quixote." She smiled in her friendliest fashion as she awaited a decision.



DECIDES TO WASH BABY RUTH

After much reflection, Mandy responded slowly, "Well, I guess we kin. I'll ask ma."

To Evelyn's unbounded delight, "ma" gave consent, and Mandy promised that all the Peebles children would call at half-past 7 o'clock.

At the hour appointed the Peebles filed solemnly through the gate which opened upon the carriage drive. Mrs. Peebles had emphatically insisted that they shouldn't climb over the garden wall, as was the custom theretofore. "Swell folks don't pay no calls in that way," she had said. On the other hand, the Peebles didn't have the courage to climb the great stone steps at the entrance to the mansion. So, after a long parley with the coachman, they were admitted through the gates and were permitted to knock upon a door at the rear of the house.

Try as she would to put them entirely at their ease, Evelyn was unable to make her guests unbend from stiff dignity. Arrayed in their very best clothes, the Peebles had also donned their "company manners," and their studied politeness was remarkable.

Their manner was as stiff as that of the footman who showed them to their seats in the reception hall, which Evelyn had made ready for the entertainment.

When the small audience was seated Evelyn motioned to the footman. Almost immediately there appeared on the large canvas screen at the end of the room a troop of marching soldiers. The cinematograph was in splendid working order. So lifelike were the soldiers, as they marched with precision, that Jim started to cheer.

Springing from his chair he whooped: "Hooray! Hoo——"

"Be still! Don't you know no better?" loudly whispered Mandy, disapprovingly. Tim suffered himself to be yanked into his chair, where he remained silent the rest of the evening. And, although there were many excellent selections by the phonograph and other "moving pictures," not one word escaped the Peebles thereafter until their departure.

Then Jimmy extended his hand bashfully to Evelyn and murmured: "Thanks for havin' invited us."

"Thanks!" muttered Mandy, also shaking hands with the hostess. "Thanks," said each of the other Peebles. They filed out in the same order in which they had come.

"I do wonder if they really enjoyed it," said Evelyn to herself when the last good-byes were said and she had invited the six to visit her soon again. "They surely weren't very enthusiastic," added she, dolefully.

But the Peebles really did enjoy their entertainment. The great mansion had become a most fascinating place to them. Not long after the entertainment Evelyn found Baby Ruth Peebles perched on the garden wall, surveying the flower beds with round-eyed interest.

"The baby would be quite pretty if she wasn't so dirty," thought Evelyn, from her position on the terrace. Then with a sudden resolution she started down the garden walk.

"I'm going to give the baby a bath," said she.

Outwitting the King of France

IN FRANCE long ago the chief men of the city of Orleans said they had the right of drinking the health of their king while they were sitting down.

Other people, of course, had always to stand up when they drank the wine and exclaimed, "Long live the king!"

On one occasion the leading citizens of Orleans had to pay a visit to the king of France, and the king, knowing all about their custom of sitting down to drink his health, ordered all the chairs to be taken out of the room. So when the citizens were taken into the room to make their bows to the king they found that there was not a single chair to sit upon.

After they had made their speeches the king ordered wine to be supplied to his visitors. But the good citizens of Orleans, seeing nothing for them to sit upon, wanted to do without the wine!

The king would have them drink, however, so the Orleans men took the winecups into their hands, and then they all sat down on the floor! And there they drank the wine and cried, "Long live the king!"

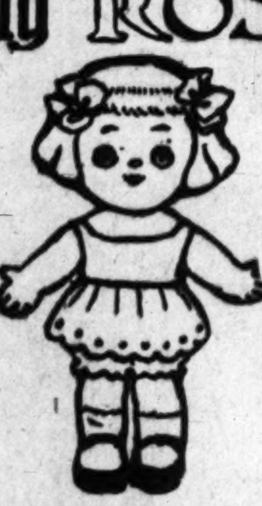
The king laughed very much, indeed, at the way in which he had been defeated, for he had meant to make the Orleans men drink while standing up, and he said to them: "Well, tell my good city of Orleans that they can have their privilege. Besides, I could not have this seat taken away!"

No Choice in the Matter.

Mary: You're only 'dopted. Your father and mother are not real parents.

Millie: That makes it all the better. My parents picked me out, and yours had to take you 'zactly as you came.

The Dolly Rosie Drew



ONCE upon a time there was a little girl named Rosie. She was a clever little girl and very fond of drawing. Paper dollies she liked, too. Here is the picture of a paper dolly that Rosie dearly loves. It's a very nice one, isn't it? You know, she made it all herself.

Rosie also made three pretty dresses and three dainty hats for her dolly.

Wouldn't YOU like to have a doll such as Rosie has, and cunning dresses and hats for the dolly? This is the way you can do it:

Get a piece of thin paper and a sharp pencil. First trace Rosie's dolly and the pretty little hats and dresses and then draw them for yourself. Take your paint box and neatly color the doll. Give her beautiful yellow hair, pink cheeks and blue eyes. Color the hats and dresses, also. Then you will have a dolly to be proud of, and dolly will have a wardrobe to be proud of.

Funny Compositions

SOME more school "howlers" have come to light. Here is a selection:

Switzerland is a very wonderful place; you can often see the mountains touring among the clouds.

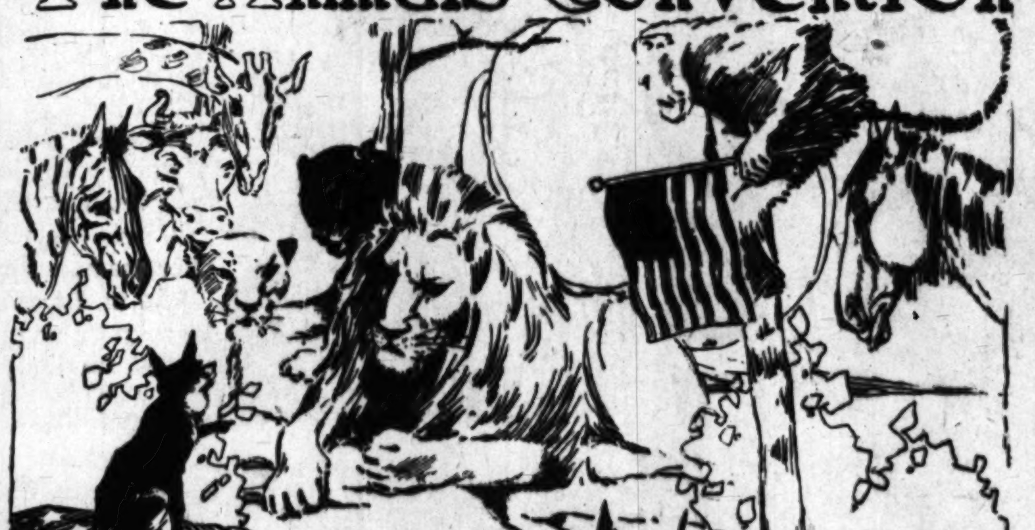
The chief clause in Magna Charta was that one which said that no one was to be punished without his own consent.

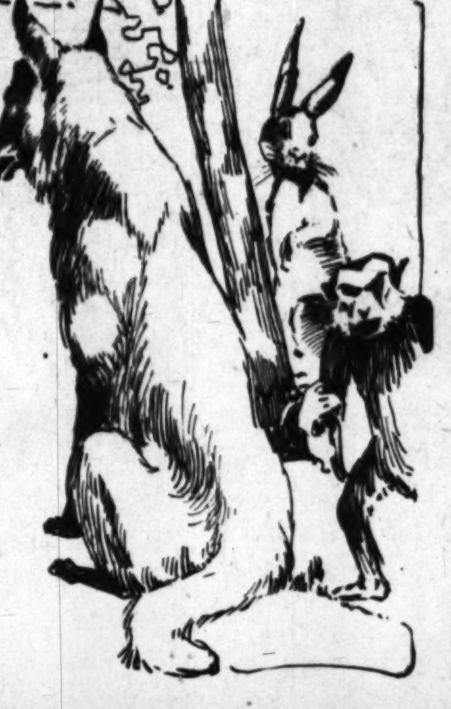
Alfred the Great was the first king who invented schools.

The crusades were on account of the Turks. They had taken Constantinople, and were so cruel they would not let traders use the Suez Canal.

Africa is a very dark place, nearly covered with trees and animals.

The Animal's Convention





ALL patriotic animals assembled in convention—
There were some from every land beneath the sky—
And after much discussion, they declared it their intention
To celebrate the Fourth Day of July.

All things were done in order: The zebra furnished stripes;
Some cows upon their foreheads bore the stars;
The fireflies and the glowworms were appointed to arrange
Illuminations that would startle Mars;
The elephant announced he'd have to go and search his trunk
Before he could decide what he should bring;
While all the cats united wondrous "mew-sic" to supply,
And began at once most joyfully to sing.

At length some one suggested that refreshments should be served,
And they set to work to plan a glorious feast;
But there the trouble started, for no menu could be found
To suit the taste of each respective beast.
They quarreled and contended as to what was best to eat,
And none with any other could agree.
They roared and yelped and bellowed till the mountains round them shook,
And their fury was a dreadful thing to see.

And so the great convention was declared adjourned forever,
And former friends spoke not as they passed by;
But all agreed in saying they would never, never, never Try to celebrate the Fourth Day of July.

1.—Now starch and frills were not designed For Independence Day,
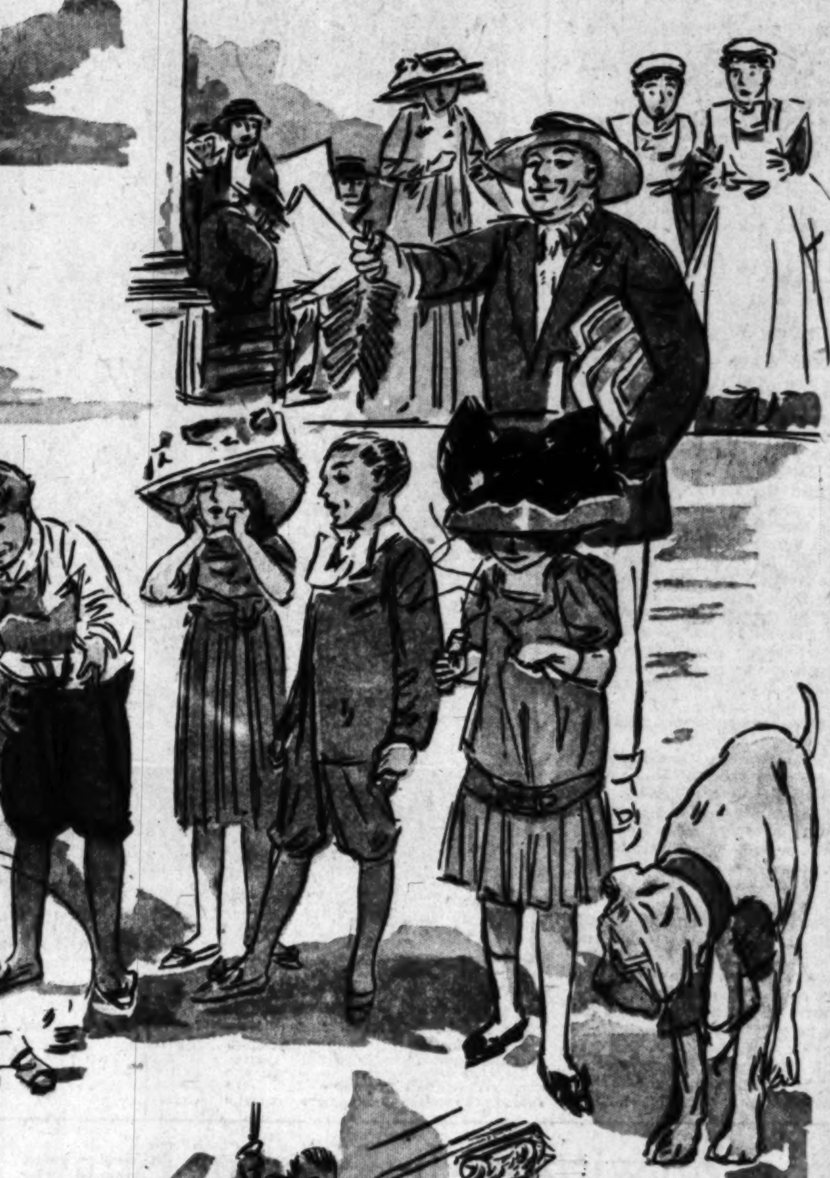
But Cynthianna's little group
Strove nobly to be gay.
In spite of go-to-meeting clothes
And nurses in a row,
They sought to taste the season's joys
That ragged children know.

2.—Torpedoes, Cynthianna found,
Make such a feeble snap
And Archie's pistol promised well,
But spluttered every cap.
The others in affliction felt
Enthusiasm lag,
When they were graciously, at length,
Allowed to wave a flag.



3.—"Oh, rats!" cried Uncle Monte, who
By chance was passing by,
"This is no way to celebrate
The fourth day of July."
He then dismissed the nurses, told
Them not to be afraid.
Said he, "I'm on this quarterdeck
And marshal of parade."

4.—He whispered to a messenger
And Cynthia, in glee,
Soon had more packs of crackers than
She'd ever hoped to see.
They all took part in setting off
And such a rattling roar
In this select community
Was never heard before.

5.—They all were pleased but Teddy, who Sustained an awful scare;
For former noises he had heard
With these did not compare.
A demonstration of this kind
He didn't like a bit,—
Thus, contemplating, sat upon
A cracker that was lit.

6.—The cracker then exploded, and Poor Teddy, with a yelp,
Soon disappeared amidst a crowd
Of people crying, "Help!"
There came a shout, "The brute is mad!"
And in the great hotel
A group of languid invalids
Most suddenly grew well.

7.—With Cynthianna close behind
Ted streaked it through the hall,
While twenty nimble persons tried
In vain to climb the wall.
She caught him in the office, nor
The warnings would she hear.
A clerk was planning vengeance from
His post, the chandelier.

8.—Then, with her arms about his neck,
She hastened to assert
That Teddy wasn't mad a bit,
But that the cracker hurt.
"Each dog," she said, "has got his day,
I've heard my papa state.
I guess the Fourth is clearly not
My Teddy's special date."

Windstorm Whips the Heavy Water Against Pavilion and Endangers Two Small Boats.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

SALT LAKE CITY, July 4.—A windstorm swept over Great Salt Lake this evening, dashed the heavy water in huge broadsides against the Salt Air pavilion, and threatened the existence of two small pleasure boats that were cruising off shore.

After a struggle with wind and waves, in which the voyagers were drenched, the launches regained the pavilion. In making a landing one of the boats was dashed against the pier and badly damaged. No one, however, was injured.

The gale, although of brief duration, was one of the most violent in the history of the lake. Rumors that one of the boats had gone down with sixty passengers reached here and there was great anxiety until the report was disproved.

LAW AND LIBERTY.

THE recurrence of the anniversary of the declaration of liberty by the American people furnishes a suitable occasion to consider the subject not only of political, but of religious liberty. This latter subject is one which we hear a great deal, and most of what … is said in a loose manner which indicates but superficial thought. It has, indeed, become quite a … to bandy about the words "religious liberty" and freedom of thought."

… persons seem to regard even Christianity, the … liberal and beneficial of all religions, as in the nature of a restraint, a curtailment of liberty. They have the impression that the Christian has to constantly deny himself pleasures and privileges which he might otherwise enjoy; that he in fact is in a kind of physical, mental and moral straitjacket. This is a mistaken … On the contrary, in the very nature of things the … Christian—note the adjective "true"—cannot feel that he is deprived of liberty by the laws of conduct to which he gives allegiance. This declaration is likely to be disputed. The Christian religion certainly does demand the observance of exacting rules of living. There must be no exercise of sinful passions, the indulgence of … inclinations must be denied, and in general the Christian's life must be free from sensual and selfish indulgence and given up to the service of his God and his fellow-man.

But what is liberty? It is freedom to govern one's conduct by his will, to pursue his desires without restraint. It is the will, then, which determines what is restraint and what is liberty of action. That which is contrary to the will is restraint; that which complies with the will is liberty. When desire is directed toward … purpose, it is restraint not to be permitted to pursue that purpose, but when this desire is diverted to another end and the original purpose is abandoned, there is no sense of restraint with reference to that purpose; restraint comes, if at all, in the line of the new desire. So long as the will is bent on sensual pleasures, the indulgence of the passions and appetites, there can be no sense of liberty without these. The sense of restraint will be felt so long as these are denied. But Christianity presents to the will a different and far better kind of pleasures, and he who is thoroughly imbued with the Christian spirit has no desire for the lower, sensual and selfish indulgences. The man who is completely Christianized has had his will completely diverted from the old form of pleasure to the new. He has a new conception of what is desirable. What to him was restraint before is now liberty. He is freed from the desire for forbidden things. He has learned the truth and the truth has made him free.

The law to which he is subject is a law of love and he loves to obey it. He knows that compliance with it is the best means of promoting his own welfare. He is glad because of the liberty to live in accordance with it, and has no sense of restraint because it forbids things which formerly attracted his desires. His relations to the laws of his religion are like those of the good citizen to the laws of the State. Such a citizen is not restrained by the laws against crime. He has no desire to commit crime, and hence the laws interfere not the least with his liberty. In fact, he never takes thought of the existence of such laws so far as they relate to himself. He thinks of them only as they are violated by others.

This change of the desires does not come in a moment, at least not generally. It is a growth, a development, and it is only in the fullness of the development that the will becomes completely changed. The liberty is therefore a subject of degrees and corresponds in degree to the diversion of the will to the new objects of desire. At first, the sense of liberty is limited, but it gradually grows with the awakening of new desires and the experience of new pleasures, until in the fullness of the development it becomes complete. Then the law gives no sense of restraint; it's only office is that of loving helpfulness to a more pleasurable and higher life.

A MAN'S CHRISTIAN.

In Harper's for July, Norman Duncan gives an astonishing account of a missionary preacher named Higgins, who works heroically among the lumber camps of the West.

"It is a simple situation," explains Mr. Duncan. "There are 30,000 men—more or less of them according to the season—making the wages of men in the woods. Most of them accumulate a hot desire to wring some enjoyment from life in return for the labor they do. They have no care about money when they have it. They fling it in gold over the bars (and any sober man may rob their very pockets;) they waste in a night what they earn in a winter—and then crawl back to the woods. Naturally the lumber towns are crowded with parasites upon their lusts and prodigality—with gamblers and saloon-keepers and purveyors of low passion. Some—larger capitalists, more acute and more acquisitive, of a greed less nice—profess the three occupations at once. They are the men of real power in the remoter communities, makers of Mayors and chiefs of police and magistrates—or were until Higgins came along to dispute them. Single-handed, not long ago, he cleansed the town of Bemidji of its established and flaunting wickedness. "Boys," said he to the keepers of places, 'I'm going to clean you out. I want to be fair to you—and so I tell you. Don't you ever come sneaking up to me and say I didn't give you warning!' They laughed at him when he stripped off his coat and got to work. But when the fight was over, when the shutters were up for good—so had he compelled the respect of these men—they came to the preacher, saying: 'Higgins, you gave us a show; you fought us fair—and we want to shake hands.'

" 'That's all right, boys,' said Higgins.

" 'Will you shake hands?'

" 'Sure, I'll shake hands, boys!'

"Jack Worth—that notorious gambler and saloon-keeper of Bemidji—quietly approached Higgins.

" 'Frank,' said he, 'you win; but I've no hard feelings.'

" 'That's all right, Jack,' said Higgins.

"The Pilot remembered that he had sat close to the deathbed of the young motherless son of this same Jack Worth in the room above the saloon. They had been good friends—the big Pilot and the boy. And Jack Worth had loved the boy in a way that only Higgins knew. 'Papa,' said the boy, at this time, death being then very near, 'I want you to promise me something.' Jack Worth listened. 'I want you to promise me, papa,' the boy went on, 'that you'll never drink another drop in all your life.' Jack Worth promised, and kept his promise; and Jack Worth and the preacher had preserved a queer friendship since that night.

" 'Jack,' said the Pilot, now, 'what are you going to do?'

" 'I don't know, Frank.'

" 'Aren't you going to quit this dirty business?'

" 'I ran a square game in my house, and you know it,' the gambler replied.

" 'That's all right, Jack,' Higgins said; 'but look here, old man! isn't little Johnnie ever going to pull you out of this?'

" 'Maybe, Frank,' was the reply. 'I don't know.'

"At any rate—to return—all these men are the parishioners of the Rev. Francis Edmund Higgins of the Presbyterian church; all the loggers and lumber jacks and road monkeys and cookees and punk hunters and wood butchers and swamp men teamsters and bull-cooks and the what-nots of the woods and the gamblers and saloon-keepers and panderers and bartenders (and a host of filthy little runners and pullers-in and small thieves) of the towns.

Sermons in Song..

The Sea

By Wilbur D. Nesbit

Thy way is in the sea, and thy path in the great waters, and thy footsteps are not known.—[Psalm Lxxvii, 19.

The sea knows all the truth of time;
  The sea sings ever that it knows,
Now in a lulling, lazy rhyme,
  Now hurling it in billow blows.
The sea bears thoughts too great for speech,
  For it has known creation's gleams
And it holds memories that reach
  The heart of the eternal dreams.

It caught the glow the first star flung
  Across the wonder of the night,
And as the star in glory swung
  The sea flung back the living light;
It heard the songs of primal suns
  As they raced gladly to the dawn,
And through its chant today there runs
  The chord creation rests upon.

The deserts break in bloom for man,
  The barrens yield their treasure hoard,
But neither pleading, plot, nor plan
  May find the strength the sea has stored.
Man has his way and works his will
  And holds dominion in all lands—
The changeless sea is changeless still,
  And laughs at his impotent hands.

The sea unmastered, dreams and wakes;
  It sways with impulse half-world wide
When from the depths of space there breaks
  The mystic call that lifts the tide.
It whispers with the wind, it sighs
  Its secret in the ebb and flow—
It bothered with the bending skies
  A thousand thousand years ago.

Unchanging in its great unrest—
  The heart throb of eternity—
It keeps the gates of east and west
  And murmurs of all time, the sea.
We may not interpret its song
  Of crashing chords or lulling rhyme,
Nor even know how long, how long
  The sea has held the truth of time.

MANY CONVERTS.

WONDERFUL WORK DONE BY AMERICAN MISSIONARIES.

From Our Own Correspondent.

SEOUL, 1909.—Just before I left Washington last summer to start on this trip across the Pacific, one of our leading bankers said to me:

"I understand you are going out to describe the awakening of Asia. There is one thing I wish you would investigate in a practical way. That is the mission movement. There are tens of thousands of us business men who are giving regularly toward the introduction of Christianity among the heathen. We want to know what our money is doing, and whether it will pay us to continue giving or not. You are an unprejudiced observer, and we should like to know what you think."

Korean school boys of Y.M.C.A.

Native church built by Koreans

New Y.M.C.A. building at Seoul.

This desire to know the truth about missions is not confined to our business men. It is a live question to the 32,000,000 who belong to our various church organizations and to every Sunday-school and religious body throughout the whole United States.

150,000 Native Christians.

I am glad to have this country as my first field for such investigation. The Koreans are now doing more than any other nation along such lines. Our missionaries went to the Japanese first, but Korea has today more converts than Japan and proportionately many times more than China, which has been exploited by the churches for several generations.

The Christian movement is one of the vital elements of the reorganization of this country. A great revival is now taking place among the people, and more than 30,000 converts have been added to the church within a year. There are about 150,000 native Christians, and there will be 200,000 before many months. This land has, all told, a population of less than 15,000,000, and of these one in every hundred has professed our religion. If a similar success could be had in Japan that country would have 500,000 Christians; if in China, it would have 4,000,000, and if in India, 3,000,000 or more.

You remember the wonderful work which was done by Edward Everett Hale's plan of "Ten times one is ten"—the endless-chain principle—in which every one engaged to interest ten others in making the world better. The same thing, although not on a numerical scale, is going on in Korea. The converted natives are different from us in that as soon as they adopt Christianity they go out and try to convert their friends and neighbors.

Indeed, the mission movement is now being pushed by the natives themselves under the direction of our missionaries. Native churches are being built by native contributions in all of the cities, and there is a Korean congregation in every large village. The Protestant organizations already number something like 120,000 adherents, while the Roman Catholics count 50,000 Koreans. The Protestants have 900 native preachers and 900 Sunday-schools with about 70,000 men, women and children as regular attendants. There are more grown people than children in the Sunday-schools; and all are anxious to learn about the new religion and what it can do for them. There are 500 self-supporting day schools, run by the churches, and altogether 60,000 or 70,000 gold dollars were spent upon such schools last year. When it is remembered that the Koreans are one of the poorest peoples on earth, and that they live from hand to mouth, these gifts are a surprising evidence of their faith.

The Foreign Mission Bodies.

But first let me tell you about the foreign missions which are operating in Korea. There are four, each with a large staff of American or European workers. The Roman Catholics are French Jesuits. They have been here for more than a century and have a fully organized church. At their head is a bishop, who is assisted by a large staff of priests and nuns, among whom are Koreans. The Catholics have a cathedral in Seoul. It stands on a hill overlooking the rest of the city, and it is by far the largest church building in Korea.

The Protestant missions are all working together. They have about 200 American and European men and women employed, and their stations cover the country. The Protestants are divided into Presbyterians, Methodists and Anglicans. The Presbyterians represent both sections of the church in the United States, north and south, and there are also small branches of the same denomination from Canada and Australia. Our Methodist Episcopal churches, north and south, are carrying on a great work, and the English have a well-managed mission at the head of which is a bishop. In addition, there are the mission of the Russian Greek Church in Seoul, the Young Men's Christian Association and the Salvation Army, whose advance guard came last fall. All of the larger missions have schools and hospitals, and all have many native workers. As I have said, the movement has so advanced that the most of the foreigners are now employed in directing native Christians, who have become the chief element in the evangelization of the country.

The Koreans at Church.

You religious drones of the United States, who stay at home from church and prayer meeting whenever it rains, should come out to Korea to learn what live Christianity means! Take, for instance, a native church which I attended this week. It was that of Dr. J. S. Gale, belonging to the Presbyterian mission in Seoul. The church stands on a hill, not far from the palace of the Emperor, and above the big technical school which the Japanese have just founded. Its audience hall is sixty feet wide by eighty feet long, and it s about 1500. This church was built by native contri tions, and its members gave $2500 to its support la year. In connection with two other native Presby rian congregations, its members are supporting t mission churches outside the city. This church has regular attendance of 1200, and when I entered it la Sunday there were more than that in the audien room. Fully 600 of those present were men. I do much if any United States city of 300,000 has a sing church with 600 men among its regular attendants; a more than 500 of these Korean men had come to th day-school as well as to church. There were fully th many women.

But how do I know that the men and women w equally divided?

That is easy in a Korean congregation. The men sit together on one-half the church floor, while t women are squatted on the other half, a wide ca screen being stretched from one end of the church the other between them. The women are supposed n to be seen by any men but their husbands. They co to the church with green cloaks wrapped round th heads and they put these on upon going out.

The church floor is covered with white matting. take off their shoes as they come in and lay them b side them on the floor as they listen to the serm At the front of the hall is a rostrum supporting a p pit, from the middle of which the screen extends thro the church, so that both men and women can see t pastor and he can see them. It was on this rostru I sat.

A Queer Congregation.

The congregation comprised all classes of Korea Among the men were Cabinet ministers, governors a princes, sitting side by side with common coolies a other low men. The same differences of conditi were observed among the women. The men all w hats; and, of the women, all were bareheaded. T men had on gowns of white, rose-pink or sky-blue g cloths or cotton, with white cotton under trousers a white padded stockings. Their hats were of black h hair, so braided together that their topknots could seen through the meshes. The women wore jackets a skirts of white, lilac, pink and sea-green, and their h was carefully combed. Some of the women had bab with them, and I heard a slight squall now and th Before the sermon began, one little girl stood up w her baby sister tied to her back. The little one w crying. The girl rose and fell on her toes to quiet it.

I have never seen such attention in any church. T faces of the people fairly shone as one of the eld nicknamed the wisest man in Korea, once a mem of the Korean legation in Washington, addressed th There was not a snore to be heard, and of the wh 1200 not one went to sleep. The preacher held th from start to close, now and then bringing out lau ter. After this, a hymn was sung, the preceptor sta ing in his stocking feet, big hat and long gown on t rostrum, while a Korean girl played the organ, a li affair so small that at the close, the sexton carried out on his shoulder. Hymn-books were used by and every one in that congregation is able to read. I deed, the church will not take in any one who can read the Scriptures. When a man becomes conve he is asked as to his education and is told he m learn to read before the church will admit him. T Korean language is such that this can be accompli in the space of one month or so. Indeed, the spur the desire for church membership is one of the g forces now working toward the education of the K reans.

How Money Talks.

After this hymn was sung, fifty men and women w baptized and taken into the church. They were all grown and the sexes were about equally divided. T sat on the floor during the ceremony, the Rev. Dr. Gale touching the heads of each with water from a glass bowl.

Before the dismissal, a collection was taken up, and it seemed to me that every one gave something, although most could afford but a penny or so. One woman brought in $7. This was the widow of a honey merchant who had a church box, in which he put his odd cents, and when the accumulation amounted to something turned it in. His widow is doing the same, and this was her gift for the month. No one who does not appreciate the poverty of Korea can realize how the people are giving. They say money talks. If it tells the truth, these people believe what they profess.

Faith With Works.

Faith without works is said to be dead. If so, our American Christianity is in a bad state in comparison with Korean Christianity. There is a Methodist church in Seoul, maintained by the natives, which is larger and quite as earnest as the one I have described, and there are a number of other mission churches, most of which receive little help outside Korea. There are many places in which money could be used to advantage, and I know of no foreign country where it will meet with such large returns as right here. Some of the native churches are miserably poor. Take that of Dr. Bunker, near the east gate in Seoul. It consists of one room of about the size of a parlor in an American flat, and so small that only 100 men can be crowded down upon the floor. At all the services in that church the doors and windows are full, and many must stand outside. That church has three meetings every Sunday morning. There is one for boys, which lasts from 9 to 10; then one for men, from 10 to 12, and after that a third service for the women. Dr. Bunker tells me that his people all give, although they are of the poorest class of Koreans, and that many of them cut down their food in order to give to the church. They will eat a spoonful or so less rice at a meal or perhaps eat half the meal amount on one day every week. The collections of the congregation amount to about $2 per Sunday, and this is made up of coins worth from one-fourth of a cent to a nickel. The church has already saved $250 toward a new building, and it is now aiding mission churches outside. Last Sunday, Dr. Bunker baptized one woman who was 79 years of age.

At Pyengyang there is a Presbyterian church which has 2200 regular attendants on Sundays and 1200 at the prayer-meetings during mid-week. One of its members is a middle-aged woman who walks ten miles in from the country twice a week, rain or shine. Think of walking forty miles a week to preaching and prayer meeting! That is what she does.

Bible Study Classes.

An interesting feature of the Christian movement here is the Bible study classes which are carried on regularly in different parts of the country at certain times of the year. These people are anxious to study the Scriptures and to have them explained. Many of them commit parts of the New Testament, the Proverbs and Psalms, and Dr. Gale tells me that he has members of his church whom he uses as a concordance, asking them where certain verses of the Scriptures are instead of looking at the books. At a Christmas celebration last winter, an old woman of 83 was told to repeat some verses from the Bible. She started in with Proverbs, and rattled off three chapters before they were able to stop her. She said she could give six more if they wanted them. That woman walks three miles every Sunday to church.

The Bible study classes come in the winter and spring. The men have one time and the women another when they thus meet together. They will walk for miles to these classes, bringing their rice or enough money to pay for their board while they stay. Some come 200 miles and walk all the way. These meetings last two weeks, and during this time the people read and discuss the Scriptures. Last year the men's classes were held in February, and those for the women in [illegible]. At the meetings in Seoul there were 400 men, [illegible] of whom came from near the Sea of Japan, some from the north and others from all over the country. The meetings were led by one of the foreign missionaries who gave an outline of the book of the New Testament which had been selected for study. After this, the men read the book together, asking questions and discussing each verse. They all took notes in order to carry their learning back to their villages. At the women's meeting, the foreign ladies presided and the exercises were similar.

The Medical Missions.

I might write a chapter on the medical missions of Korea. American doctors have done enormous good here. There are twelve hospitals and dispensaries scattered over the country, in which 60,000 patients are annually treated, and there are special corps of trained workers, including teachers, doctors and nurses, who are doing a great deal for Korean women along such lines. The big Red Cross Hospital which the Japanese have opened is based upon work done by the missionaries, and one of its leading doctors is William B. Scranton, who came here twenty-five years ago as a medical missionary of the Methodist church.

It was Dr. Horace N. Allen who sewed up the body of Prince Min Yung Ik when he was cut almost to pieces in a revolt at the palace. He thereby gained the good will of the King. This insured to the missionaries the friendship of the nobility, and enabled America for years to lead in all the advanced movements here. Dr. Allen risked his life in attempting that cure. When he arrived at the palace, he found thirteen native physicians about to pour boiling wax into the gaping wounds of the Prince; and it was only by tact that he was able to make them stand back and allow him to dress the wounds. As a thank offering the King then started a government hospital with Allen in charge. It had forty beds and it treated over 10,000 patients the first year.

The Methodists have now five hospitals, in which 20,000 cases are treated annually, and the British Society for the Propagation of the Gospel has four. The Presbyterians have a number of hospitals, one of the largest of them being the Severance Hospital, situated outside the Nan-dai-mon Gate. This is the gift of Louis M. Severance, a well-known Presbyterian business man of Cleveland, O., who has given a great deal of money toward mission work throughout the Far East. Mr. Severance takes a business look at such undertakings. He says he believes that money invested in missions in Korea pays bigger dividends in the way of results than the same money so invested anywhere else. The head of this hospital is Dr. Avison, and the chief assistant is Dr. J. W. Hirst of Philadelphia. This hospital treated something like 11,000 patients last year, of whom more than 9000 came to the dispensary. The hospital is now practically self-supporting. It receives only $160 a year from America, the rest of the expenses, amounting to 13,000 yen, coming from the work of the physicians in charge. A large part of this is derived from Korean patients, and over $4000 from medical services to foreigners in Seoul. The hospital has a medical college connected with it, and it graduated seven Korean doctors last year. It has Korean nurses and a nurses' training school, and also a clinic at which the better-class Korean patients pay 1 yen per visit.

The Korean Y.M.C.A.

One of the most striking of the new buildings of Seoul is a three-story brick structure which has just been completed near the old Bell Tower in the heart of the city. This is the home of the Young Men's Christian Association. It is the gift of John Wanamaker, and, as far as good is concerned, it will probably do more, dollar for dollar, than any money he has ever spent. The building has cost less than $40,000, but it could not be erected in the United States for three times that, and, with the ground upon which it stands, it is worth several hundred thousand dollars today. It covers, I judge, something like a quarter of an acre, and is thoroughly equipped as a technical training school, and as a modern educational institution similar to the Y.M.C.A.'s of our country. It has a large lecture hall, social rooms and lacks only a modern gymnasium to make it complete. There is room on the lot for this, and it will be added as soon as the money can be raised.

The Korean Y.M.C.A. is only eight years old; but it has already 1300 members, and these comprise some of the best men of Korea. When the corner-stone of the new building was laid, Prince Ito aided in the celebration, and the little Crown Prince, who is now in Japan, gave $5000 to the association in bank notes of 10 yen each. It was the Prince who laid the corner-stone, and his name is on the front of the building.

Among the members of the Y.M.C.A. are fifty high Korean officials, students of the modern schools and colleges here, and leading men in the business and missionary circles. A fund of 100,000 yen is now being raised to endow the institution, and more than 1000 Koreans have already subscribed about 4000 yen to this fund.

The institution is carrying on a large educational work, and in the past it has had to turn away many students for lack of room. It has now sixteen teachers, thirteen of whom are Koreans, two Japanese and one American. It gives a three-year course, including many of the studies of our high schools, and it has also night schools for advanced work in English and Japanese, and in book-keeping. It has a manual-training department, and also an athletic branch devoted to gymnastic sports of all kinds. It has a religious department which is doing great work, and a social work department which gives two lectures a week, and often has audiences of several thousand people.

The secretary of the association is Mr. Frank M. Brockman, a young American, who came here from the Y.M.C.A. at Suchow, China, and among its trustees are the Hon. T. Aria, the Japanese head of the Finance Department; Mr. Thomas Sammons, the American Consul-General, and the heads of the English and German consulates.

Mr. Brockman tells me that the association needs $15,000 to build a gymnasium and $10,000 to complete the equipment of the industrial department, as well as a few thousand dollars more to employ native men who have graduated from American colleges on the educational force. I know of no place where any investment will bring better returns.

ROME AS A HEALTH RESORT.

Lies Between Sea and Mountains—Has Wiped Out Roman Fever.

Two important factors are almost always lost sight of in looking at Rome from a hygienic and climatic point of view, writes the Roman correspondent of the Medical Record. These are the sea and the mountains. Rome is really a seaport, although the Tiber is not freely navigable to all vessels. The distance to the mouth of the river is a short fifteen miles, while an air line from the city to the sea reduces the distance greatly.

About the same distance on the other sides are the Sabine Hills, Mount Soracte, the Alban Hills, and further north the spurs of the Apennines, the city itself being about 200 feet above sea level. There is not a better watered city in the world, and few as well watered, with its excellent drinking water and copious fountains in every piazza or open space. Nor is there a city that affords purer air, as might be expected from the topographical situation.

The winter climate is cold enough to make indoor fires comfortable, and we always have a stretch of about six weeks of unbroken cloudless weather in December and January—just crisp enough to be invigorating. The temperature of the summer months averages about 85 degrees. For bronchial affections in all their forms and neurasthenia a winter in Rome is usually very beneficial, and you can be assured of being cooler all through the summer than in either New York or Boston.

The municipality evidently favors open air, whether for prophylaxis or treatment, and realizing how many cases of incipient phthisis or those predisposed to it may be thus cured or benefited has established hospices in the hills for the climatic treatment and recreation of children during the summer months. These hospices are entirely gratuitous, the only requisites for admission being that the child must be between 7 and 12 years of age and must have an attestation of poverty and a physician's certificate of vaccination.

Roman fever, so called, no longer exists. It was really a malarial fever with every now and then a malignant case. Since the Campagna has been drained and cultivated, and old portions of the city where fevers of this nature were of more frequent occurrence have been demolished and new buildings with modern improvements put up, no one ever hears of Roman fever.

To find malaria you must go further nowadays to the district known as the Agro Romano, which is to the south of the Alban Hills and toward the sea, where are the famous and deadly Pontine marshes. Even there, by means of draining the marshes and planting eucalyptus trees, the percentage of cases of malarial fever among the inhabitants is rapidly and constantly diminishing.

It is noticeable that employés of the customs, railway employés, and others who live in these districts and who have the doors and windows of their cabins closely screened with a very fine wire gauze, through which it is impossible for mosquitoes to pass, remain exempt from malarial fever which is, however, prevalent among those who have not their doors and windows thus protected.

Lodging vs. Boarding-houses.

Who that has lived in lodgings in England will deny their superiority to the boarding-house? The rooms are rented "with cooking and attendance." The lodger buys her own own food and the landlady cooks and serves it, in her private apartments; the bedrooms are kept in order by the landlady, and if there is no bathroom, baths are supplied in the bedrooms; and boots are cleaned. In America, on the contrary, ladies who are not rich have to clean their own boots, and the question of baths is politely but firmly ignored. Unless one gets into a house where "hot and cold" is "laid on," and bathing is no trouble, one is not expected to bathe in America, and hot water is regarded as a luxury. In England, luxurious bathrooms being fewer, one is expected to take a bath no matter how troublesome; and poor indeed must be the house where hot water is not brought to one's room twice daily. There is something, after all, in taking civilization slowly; it assimilates better. There are fewer glittering conveniences but infinitely more solid comfort, to which the English love of method, neatness and order contributes greatly. Even in lodgings, one is waited on by a neat white-capped and aproned maid, while the foreign-born American domestic, who is not above taking the liberal sum offered for her service, shows her scorn of service in her slovenly garb and general incompetence.

Of course, I do not mean to imply that all lodgings are good and comfortable, and all boarding-houses bad and uncomfortable; there are good and bad of both, but personally I prefer to enjoy my comforts and discomforts in private. Misery doesn't always love company and the world's "Ha, ha" every time one laughs, becomes a mere monotonous echo, when it isn't one's own world.

I hope that some day, when we are older and wiser, we shall see the unwisdom of sharing our family lives with so many others for months at a time.—[Grace Graham, in Putnam's Magazine.

Where Birds Are Safe from Guns.

Off the east coast of Louisiana are islands where government protection gives the birds a safe home. The results of this protection have been marvelous. Herbert K. Job writes in the July Harper's of his trip to these wonderful islands, where herons, terns, and laughing gulls almost cover every inch of the ground since the protective policy has been in practice. These birds eventually leave the islands and people all our coasts; but before the protection they were being rapidly exterminated for millinery and other purposes. Mr. Job took some unusual photographs from a tiny tent which he set up among the birds.

DESCENDANTS of the signers of the Declaration of Independence are, for the first time in history, making a pilgrimage this year to old Independence Hall where Sunday the Fourth of July they will meet in the historic chamber wherein their forefathers adopted the Declaration of Independence July 4, 1776. And just as their patriot ancestors on that day of days proceeded from their hall to attend special services at Christ Church, immediately after adopting the Declaration, so will these pilgrims solemnly tread the same way, from the cradle of liberty to the same ancient house of worship, where special services will again be held in commemoration of those of 133 years before. This programme has been arranged by William Shields McKean of Washington, national secretary of the "Descendants of Signers."

The blood of the signers flows today in the veins of many men of attainment. Who these are is shown by an extensive catalogue, privately compiled by Mr. McKean, of persons eligible for membership to this new patriotic society.

Jefferson's Descendants.

Thomas Jefferson, author of the sacred instrument, is survived by no descendant having his surname. His only children living to marriageable age were three daughters, from whom are descended a number of Virginia Randolphs, Eppses, Andersons, Burkes, Ruffins and Meiklehams, also the Massachusetts Coolidges. Jefferson's last surviving granddaughter, Mrs. Septima Randolph Meikleham, died in Washington, in the autumn of 1887. Another of his grandchildren was Thomas Jefferson Randolph of Edge Hill, Va., who wrote an able work on the currency and died in 1875, aged 83. The next generation also brought forth an author, Sarah Nicholas Randolph, who died about ten years ago.

A noted living great-grandson of Jefferson is Thomas Jefferson Coolidge, the wealthy Boston manufacturer and former president of the Santa Fé Road, who was Minister to Paris during Cleveland's last administration, and who has since been a member of the joint high commission for adjusting our disputes with Canada.

Distinguished Adamses of Present.

John Adams's most distinguished descendants have borne his surname. First there was his son, John Quincy Adams, the President; then his grandson, Charles Francis Adams, who was representative and Minister to England, and who came near being the third of his family—in a direct line—to receive a nomination for the Presidency.

And now, in the fourth generation, we have the three brothers, Gen. Charles Francis Adams, Union veteran and historian; Henry Adams, author and former editor of the North American Review, and Brooks Adams, attorney and author. Their elder brother, John Quincy, was a legislator and candidate for Governor of Massachusetts.

In this distinguished family there is also the coincidence of husband and wife both descendants of "signers." The present Charles Francis Adams married Miss Mary Ogden, a great-granddaughter of John Witherspoon, the New Jersey signer, whose statue was unveiled a few weeks ago in Washington.

The Harrisons.

The blood of Benjamin Harrison, the signer, has been as prolific of attainment as that of the Adams family, for from his blood, in direct line, sprang also two Presidents—his youngest son, William Henry Harrison, and his great-grandson, Benjamin Harrison, second. The present head of the family, which produced President Benjamin Harrison, is the latter's eldest son, Russell Benjamin Harrison, great-great-grandson of the signer, who served as a colonel throughout the Spanish-American war, and afterward, for five years, in Porto Rico and Cuba, and who, after trying his luck as a journalist, electric, civil and mining engineer, is now law in Indianapolis.

Ben Franklin's Progeny.

Among Benjamin Franklin's descendants is Admiral Richard Wainwright, U.S.N., who was the ecutive officer of the Maine when she was blown Havana Harbor, and who was advanced ten number "eminent and conspicuous conduct" during the battle of Santiago, wherein he commanded the ter. His mother was Sallie Franklin Bache, a granddaughter of Benjamin Franklin's only Sarah, wife of Richard Bache, who succeeded Dr. lin as Postmaster-General. Their son, Benjamin lin Bache, accompanied his grandfather, Franklin, to Paris, and after receiving his education France and Geneva, returned to Philadelphia to the General Advertiser, afterward the Aurora, violently opposed the administrations of both ton and Adams. His brother, the distinguished tist, Alexander Dallas Bache was superintendent United States Coast Survey during the Civil War, one of the incorporators of the Smithsonian Instit The aforementioned brother, Benjamin F., had two Franklin, professor of chemistry in the Jefferson College, Philadelphia, and the late Brig.-Gen. Bache, Engineer Corps, U.S.A., who built the Breakwater. The well-known correspondent and zine writer. Rene Bache, is also a direct descend Franklin.

Posterity of Charles Carroll.

A distinguished great-grandson of Maryland's Carroll of Carrollton, is John Lee Carroll, who, seventy-ninth year of his age, lives upon his Doughoregan Manor, at Ellicott City, Md. He was ernor of Maryland for four years in the late and is now the president-general of the Sons of the olution. These Roman Catholic Carrolls were O'Carrolls, and their sept, one of the most ancie powerful in Ireland, sprang from the Kings of Charles Carroll, who upon the Declaration affixed Carrollton" to his signature to distinguish him kinsman, a barrister of the same name, was the surviving signer. When he died, in his ninety year, late in 1832, his great-grandson, the future of Maryland, was past 2 years old. Charles Carrol signer's son Charles, married the beautiful Harriet Chew, daughter of Benjamin Chew of Philadelphia. It was she whom Gen. Washington took with him to Gilbert Stuart's studio that she might, as he said, "give to my countenance its most agreeable expression." One of the signer's daughters married Maj.-Gen. Robert Goodloe Harper, who was Senator from Maryland and candidate for Vice-President. The beautiful Mary Carroll, younger daughter of the signer, married Richard Caton, an English merchant and geologist, who settled in Baltimore and made a fortune in cotton manufacture. Of their daughters, Mary was greatly admired by the Duke of Wellington and became Marchioness of Wellesley; Elizabeth became Lady Stafford; Louisa became Duchess of Leeds, and a fourth married John McTavish, British Consul at Baltimore. Their son married Ella, youngest daughter of Gen. Winfield Scott. The widowed Countess Esterhazy, late of Washington, but now living abroad, was a Miss Carroll, and is a direct descendant of the signer.

Novelists With Signers' Blood.

Two distinguished novelists whose veins pulsate with signers' blood are F. Hopkinson Smith, author of "The Tides of Barnegat," "Col. Carter of Cartersville," etc., who is the great-grandson of Francis Hopkinson, the New Jersey signer, and Thomas Nelson Page, author of "Red Rock," "Marse Chan," etc., who is the great-grandson of Thomas Nelson, signer from Virginia. Joseph Hopkinson, the Philadelphia jurist who wrote the words of the national song, "Hail Columbia," was the son of Francis Hopkinson and the confidential friend of Joseph Bonaparte, ex-King of Spain, during the latter's exile at Bordentown, N. J., where Hopkinson managed Bonaparte's affairs during his absence. Thomas McKean, the Philadelphia author, who wrote "The Vortex," is the descendant of Thomas McKean, one of the Delaware signers.

Indeed, that ink and signers' blood should flow together seems to be almost a law of nature. Bayard Tuckerman, biographer and author of the "History of English Prose Fiction," and his brother Alfred, also an author, although better known as a bibliographer, are among the posterity of George Walton, who signed for Georgia. And two other literary brothers, Ellery and Henry Sedgwick, have in their veins the blood of William Ellery, who helped declare independence on behalf of Rhode Island. Ellery Sedgwick, author of the "Life of Thomas Paine," was editor of Leslie's Monthly and the American Magazine, and now is one of the editors of the Atlantic Monthly. His brother, Henry Dwight, is the author of "Essays of Great Writers" and five other books, including a history of Italy. And among the numerous offspring of Carter Braxton, one of Virginia's signers, is Alfred Brockenbrough Williams, editor-in-chief of the Richmond News-Leader, who thirty years ago as an enterprising reporter for the Charleston News and Courier became noted for a number of journalistic enterprises, including a voyage to Liberia with a sailing ship full of negro emigrants, and a pedestrian expedition disguised as a tramp. The Liberian trip resulted in his exposure of the horrors and mismanagement of the colonization enterprise at that time, and his tramp excursion got him into the South Carolina convict camp, and his exposure of its iniquities led to the destruction of the convict-leasing system in the State. Another Richmond writer of this pedigreed category is William Gordon McCabe, the educator, whose mother, née Sophia Gordon Taylor, was a granddaughter of George Taylor, the Pennsylvania signer.

Other Leaders of Men.

The legal talent of William Hooper, who signed for North Carolina, has been inherited by his lineal descendant, Hannis Taylor, who was our Minister to Spain under President Cleveland, and who now is special counsel for the government before the Spanish Treaty Claims Commission.

Also gifted in the professional calling of an illustrious signer ancestor is Chief Justice Simeon E. Baldwin of Connecticut, who is professor of international law at Yale and author of many learned law books. To this family of Roger Sherman also belonged Senator George F. Hoar and Secretary of State William M. Evarts.

The spirit of leadership which imbued Connecticut's [illegible] signer, Oliver Wolcott, lives again in the breast of his lineal descendant, James Wolcott Wadsworth, Jr., the able young politician, who lately served as Speaker of the New York Assembly. His father, of the same name, was for ten years in the House, where he was chairman of the Committee on Agriculture when he became involved with President Roosevelt in the meat-bill controversy, which resulted in his defeat for re-election. And in this connection mention of the ex-President recalls that his name is borne by two of Oliver Wolcott's descendants, Loraine and Oliver Wolcott Roosevelt. This Wolcott blood was good and red. The signer's son, Oliver, was ten times elected Governor of Connecticut, and succeeded Hamilton as Secretary of the Treasury.

Present Robert Treat Paine.

One of the few cases where a living man of note bears the exact name of a signer ancestor is that of the distinguished Boston philanthropist, who is a great-grandson of Robert Treat Paine, the Massachusetts signer. The present Robert Treat Paine, ex-legislator and one-time candidate for Congress, has for thirty-one years been president of the Associated Charities of Boston, for the workingmen of which city he has organized an institute, a co-operative bank, a building association and a loan association. He and the late Mrs. Paine endowed, with [illegible], a trust for other charitable purposes.

Elbridge Gerry of Today.

Only a small handful of grandchildren of signers survive, and one of the most distinguished of these is Elbridge Thomas Gerry, the New York humanitarian, who is the grandson of Elbridge Gerry, the Massachusetts signer, who became Vice-President of the United States. The latter's son, Thomas R. Gerry, entered the navy and married Hannah G. Goelet, youngest daughter of Peter P. Goelet. These were the parents of the present Elbridge Gerry, who instead of idling away his time on the fortune left him, studied law and dedicated his life to saving his less fortunate fellow-creatures from pain. He led the movement for the abolition of hanging in New York State, twenty years ago, and was chairman of the commission which substituted electrocution. For many years he was vice-president of the American Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, is best known for his work, for a quarter of a century, as president of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, more popularly known as the "Gerry Society," which has co-operated with the courts in saving thousands of children, especially young girls, from the cruelty of their elders and the vice of the nether world. At the same time Mr. Gerry has taken an interest in clean sports, especially yachting. He was commodore of the New York Yacht Club for twelve consecutive terms. His private law library, containing 30,000 volumes, is said to be the largest of its class in the world.

Signers' Granddaughters.

Two other living grandchildren of signers are Miss Henrietta Channing Ellery of Newport, granddaughter of Rhode Island's signer, William Ellery; and Miss Margaret J. Woods of Lewistown, Penn., granddaughter of John Witherspoon. And speaking of women descendants of signers, there is Mrs. John Sharp Williams, wife of the wit of the House of Representatives, who is a great-granddaughter of John Witherspoon, and who before her marriage was Elizabeth Dial Webb of Alabama. Mrs. Joseph Forney Johnston, wife of the United States Senator from Alabama, is a descendant of William Hooper, one of the North Carolina declarants, while Mrs. Thomas F. Bayard, widow of the late Secretary of State, is a great-great-granddaughter of George Clymer, who signed for Pennsylvania.

The oldest living descendant of a signer appears to be Scudder Hart Darragh, a retired iron manufacturer of Beaver, Penn., who is a great-grandson of John Hart, who signed the Declaration as one of the New Jersey delegates. He is 92 years old.

I WAS staying at the Semoramus Hotel in Cairo last March, at the same time that Hall Caine, the noted English novelist, was making his yearly visit to Egypt's capital. One Sunday afternoon I was lucky enough to meet him, but after a pleasant chat of half an hour or so, I discovered to my surprise that he had made me talk rather than I him. I had heard much of Hall Caine's self-conceit, so I had been afraid to meet him; however, from all I could observe, I should say that few authors are less conceited than he.

HALL CAINE.

American education, especially co-education, is a subject in which Mr. Caine is intensely interested, and he asked particularly about its effect in the United States. Of its effect on our women he seemed to have little doubt, but wondered if it was equally beneficial to our men.

Caine's opinion of the education and ability of American women is very high. He considers that they are at present better educated and more intellectual than American men. However, he went on to state that he considered this condition a wave of the times, that all over the English-speaking world women were becoming better educated than men. To him there is some doubt as to what the result will be.

Evidently Mr. Caine has met many bright American women, for their brilliancy has particularly impressed him. In speaking of the difference in the mind of man and woman, he said: "Woman's mind is keener in certain ways than man's; women observe more closely than men, and so gain more by travel."

Before I went to Cairo, I had visited Jerusalem, and Mr. Caine asked me what I thought of that city. I told him how false had been my ideas of "the Holy City," and how disappointed I had been in the place about which I had imagined so much. I tried to explain that the various shrines and holy places were so palpably unreal that it hurt me to see them.

Then Caine waxed enthusiastic. He said that Jerusalem made him want to swear; that it was a place to which no one would want to go twice; that the shrines, and particularly the star in the floor of the so-called manger at Bethlehem, seemed horrible to him. He concluded: "It is all an awful travesty. Would that people would dare to be honest about it! One man, and only one, has dared to tell the truth about Jerusalem, and he told it in such a humorous way that few knew he meant it. I refer to one of your countrymen, Mark Twain."

While in Cairo, I had climbed the Pyramid of Cheops, and Caine, learning this, asked me why I did it, and what feeling the Pyramids gave me; in other words, what they meant to me. From this question and his interest in the answer, I caught a glimpse of the novelist as I knew him from "The Christian" and "The Deemster." It was the psychological experience in which he was interested. After this, we spoke of the beauties of Cairo—a city of which Hall Caine is very fond, and of the people who were visiting in the city, the various kinds of sightseers. Caine said that many people came and slept and ate in the city, and imagined that they had seen Cairo, but it was the same way everywhere, many English as well as American people went to places to say that they had been there. Few of the English who visit America see it at all; they have been, but have not seen. It is a fault common to much of the traveling public.

Just before I left the United States, I had seen Maude Adams in "What Every Woman Knows." Caine expressed his great admiration for our much-loved actress, and asked about her new play and her interpretation of "Maggie"—how it compared with her other characters. When I spoke of visiting England he told me that I must not miss Windermere, Grasmere and Edinburgh—places which he felt sure would impress me very favorably.

Hall Caine is a tall, slight, well-formed man, kind and courteous in his ways, and aristocratic in look and bearing. He is pleasant in manner, and has a low, sweet voice. He lacks entirely the snobbishness ascribed to Englishmen. The author of "The Christian" is a delightful man for an American to meet, for he knows the people of the United States better than most Englishmen, and so can value them more truly.

I shall always count as one of my choicest experiences my chat with the novelist whose books I had known and admired so long, and I shall always assert that Hall Caine's greatest quality is tact, for he surely made me feel at ease in a minute after I began to talk to him.

TO H. R. H. JULIANA LOU.

Thet little Crown Princess of Holland has been christened Juliana Louise Emma Marie Wilhelmina.—[Cable dispatch.

The Holland folk are tickled much
Because they've got a Princess Dutch—
A brand-new blue-eyed baby girl
To keep their loyal hearts awhirl;
An heiress for their little throne
That they can call their very own,
Who soon will rule them as she likes
As little Princess of the Dikes,
　　And for her name
　　This very same
Is christened by her subjects true
As Juliana, Juliana, Juliana Lou!
　　O Juliana Lou,
　　We doff our caps to you!
　　　A Princess fair
　　　You truly air,
　　O Juliana Lou!

Some day you'll come into your place
As ruler of the Holland race,
And as a Queen, serenely calm,
You'll rule o'er giddy Amsterdam,
　　And Rotterdam,
　　And Potterdam,
And all the other dams there be
Along the beauteous damson sea;
And as you walk your regal ways
May all your sauce be Hollandaise,
And may you never use a crutch
Because somebody's beat the Dutch;
　　But rule serene,
　　A happy Queen
　　Your days all through—
O Juliana, Juliana, Juliana Lou!
　　O Juliana Lou,
　　We doff our caps to you.
　　　A Dutch-treat fair
　　　You truly air,
　　O Juliana Lou!

Naples, the Beautiful.

TWO CONTRASTING IMPRESSIONS OF THE OLD CITY.

By a Special Contributor.

THE lover of Naples (and what wanderer has known her intimately without succumbing to her charm?) must carry always in his mind two pictures of the city—pictures that are strangely contradictory in their impression.

The one which will haunt his day dreams, through many a passing year, is that view of the city, from the hillside above Posilippo—the exquisite sweep of its lines, following the contour of the bay, and stretching upward to the rugged monastery buildings, which crown and dignify the heights. Its dazzling whiteness (interlaced with the somber foliage of scattered gardens,) set against and vying with the gleaming blue of the water, and backed by the tender green of the encircling hills.

It is like a vision of the perfect city, over which peace broods eternally. And yet, like Vesuvius, whose outline rests so tranquilly against the sky, it has a heart of fire. It is this heart of fire, the turbulent, vivid life, pulsing through the city's veins, which gives the subject matter of the second picture—a many-sided picture this, glowing with color, sometimes grave and sometimes gay in tone, but always intense.

This intensity makes itself felt from the first moment of the traveler's arrival. The train has scarcely come to a standstill, before half a dozen dark excited faces peer in at the window—the door is thrown open by eager hands, and one's possessions are seized upon by two or three of the most agile among the porters, who proceed to fight over them. The owner of the handbags under consideration stands bewildered, his presence ignored by the contestants who hurl torrents of words at each other, and who presently, being unable to decide which has the best right to the bags, conclude with sudden amiability to divide the labor, and accordingly attend the traveler to his cab in a body.

Outside the door, a crowd of beggars, seeing the array of porters, jump at once to the conclusion that the honored personage is an American "millionaire," and join the procession, each proclaiming aloud his special woe.

This attracts the attention of the waiting cabmen, who immediately stand up and wave their whips, each recounting with passionate gestures numberless reasons why the distinguished foreigner should take his particular cab.

It is with swimming senses that the "distinguished foreigner" finally makes his escape, dashing out of the station yard behind a shaggy, energetic little pony, and followed by a chorus of blessings and imprecations, according to the falling of the pennies.

This first encounter prepares the startled Anglo-Saxon for the violence and passion with which the Neapolitans transact the simplest affairs of daily life. But if in his veins there runs a strain of Latin blood which thrills in sympathetic response to the warmth and abandon of these children of the south, and if, in addition, he be addicted to the habit of philosophizing, then it will be hard indeed to drag him away from the contemplation of this two-fold Naples.

One takes, as headquarters, a quiet hotel, half-way up the hill, in a region of private villas, away from the haunts of the tourist; choosing rooms in a one-storied ell of the building, where one's windows look into a neighbor's orange grove, and one's door opens upon a shady portico, bordering a sun-flooded court, where roses run riot, on trellis and wall.

The roof of this ell serves the hotel as a terrace (the French windows of the drawing-room opening upon it,) and from this coign of vantage one looks out over the climbing city to Vesuvius, standing in such innocent beauty beyond the curved line of the bay, and out across the blue, blue water to Capri, resting dreamlike on its shimmering surface.

To get from this stillness and peace into that Naples which is alive, one has only to step through a side gate of the courtyard, and follow the cobble-paved lane in its downward twistings. It leads between high garden walls, past the back doors of big houses, and past queer cave-like places, where whole families are stowed away (the family donkey holding equal rights with the children, in compensation for bearing the family burdens)—and so on, always downward, until at length, passing beneath a broken grass-grown arch, it ends in one of those steep dark streets (some of them little more than stairways,) which stretch from the waterfront upward.

Tall houses line it on either side, facing each other so closely that neighbors may (and do) suspend their clothes lines from balcony to balcony, across the way.

At night the tall houses must draw into their manifold rooms the hoards which use them as shelter, but all day long they stand silent and deserted, for all the inhabitants of all the stories use the street as "living-room."

The families occupying the dark, windowless ground floors do their washing, ironing, sewing, and cooking before their front doors, while children of all ages, in all stages of dress and undress, tumble about underfoot, ecstatically dirty and happy.

The clatter of tongues echoes incessantly up and down the narrow way, and could one but understand the dialect of the people there would be ample opportunity for becoming acquainted with their inmost thoughts, not to mention family affairs and neighborhood gossip.

Two girls will be having their hair dressed by their respective mothers before their respective front doors, fifty feet apart, and carry on an animated conversation with each other during the performance, sending their voices over all the hubbub in between—one of them pausing occasionally to stir some savory mess which is brewing over a charcoal brazier beside her chair. Toward evening, a man driving several goats may be seen making his way in and out, up and down, these crowded lanes. He plays a little doleful tune on a wooden whistle to announce his coming, upon which bowls and buckets are produced, and the goats milked before the houses of the customers. Often a bottle tied to a string will descend swiftly and mysteriously from an upper window, and after being filled, is drawn up again by the same invisible agency.

One steps directly from this "confusion twice confounded," into the broad, immaculate promenade and drive that skirts the bay—from gloom and shadow into dazzling sunlight—sunlight that is reflected from white houses, and white pavements; that loses itself in cool green gardens, and flashes again on the waters of the bay.

This is the tourist's Naples—this boulevard lined with hotels and haunted by peddlers of fictitious tortoise shell, and gay mosaics—the parade ground of the well-dressed, the playground of aristocratic children, and the gathering-place of that cosmopolitan crowd which drifts about Europe in the wake of "the season."

This eminently clean and proper Naples, extends in a sweeping curve, from beautiful Posilippo to that jutting point of land, upon which stands the gloomy fortress-like Castle del l'Ovo, the origin of which is lost in medieval legend.

Beyond this point is the immense quai of Santa Lucia, the market square of Naples, joy of the artist's heart, and happy hunting-ground for the unregenerate traveler of vagabond tendencies.

Here on certain days of the week the entire army of street peddlers is gathered and, spread in tempting array on their portable stalls, is everything dear to the heart of the Neapolitan.

Venders of fruit, of flowers, of ribbons, of tinware and crockery, of the bright-colored bodices and gay neckerchiefs worn by the women, all call their wares with burning eloquence or wage a fierce war of words with chary customers who haggle over their purchases. Both buyer and seller reach a frenzy of excitement during this process. They tear their hair, strike their breasts, shake their fists in one another's faces, and call upon all the saints in the calendar, but, the bargain once struck, they drop with startling suddenness into the most amicable relations, parting almost invariably with a smile and a friendly "adio."

It is at the Santa Lucia also that the fishing smacks deposit their silvery odoriferous cargoes, the lively trading between the catchers of fish, and the sellers thereof adding not a little to the general noise and commotion.

And on market day, in the Santa Lucia, what a gathering of donkeys! Poor, little patient toilers that they are!

One sees a quaint two-wheeled cart, piled mountain high with greens and vegetables, advancing at a lively rate, apparently at its own volition, and only as it draws quite near does one discover the donkey, who is harnessed underneath it, his sleepy little face and long ears protruding from the midst of the merchandise—a sight both comical and pathetic.

Business grows gradually duller, as the sun mounts high. The vendors who have expended such an amount of energy in disposing of their goods, feel entitled to a siesta, and accordingly lie down, in the shade of their stalls, pull their hats over their faces, and taste the sweets of idleness. The fish man who happens to have sold his last fish, stretches himself luxuriantly upon his shiny, smelly counter, and dreams. Little ragamuffins who have spent the morning running and shouting, stealing and begging among the busy folk, curl up in tangled groups on the pavement, and are asleep in two breaths, serenely unconcerned as to the difficulty they thus present to pedestrians.

During the first weeks, the traveler, possessed of that most inconvenient thing, the "sightseer's conscience," makes dutiful excursions to Capodimonte—to the museum, with its Pompeiian treasures—to San Martino, and sundry other places, and then with fainter zeal, preparing to hunt through the churches, for rare works of art, learned, with secret satisfaction, that Neapolitan churches are, for the most part, architectural nonentities, harboring little that cannot be studied to better advantage elsewhere—whereupon the conscience above mentioned, goes to sleep in true Neapolitan fashion, leaving its owner as free to run after every street pageant as the raggedest urchin of the Santa Lucia.

And the pageant is never lacking. Now it is the festival day of some great saint, beloved of the people, and one joins the throng of worshipers, stirred by the fury of their devotion. Now it is the races, and one must perforce be on the Toledo, with all the rest of Naples, to see the stars of the social firmament drive past on their homeward way.

The network of crooked narrow streets, on either side of the Toledo, have poured their entire population into the long thoroughfare, itself none too wide—and the motley, noisy, many-colored, happy-go-lucky crowd, packed on church steps, lined up along the curbing, sitting or standing on chairs, that block the living stream edging its way along the sidewalk. Here are toothless old women, caring for brown bright-eyed babies, who are wrapped mummy-fashion in yards of linen bands; bareheaded girls in their gay-colored bodices and flowered kerchiefs; brawny, dark-skinned men, with flashing eyes; an occasional priest in long black robe and shovel hat, moving silently through the talking, laughing, gesticulating throng. And under this fire of human eyes the elite of Naples pass, with a nonchalance born of long custom.

Finding yourself miles from the hotel, with the di

Street scene in Naples

hour approaching, and progress along the crowded sidewalk being rendered still more complicated by the appearance of the milkman with his cow or herd of goats, you make the desperate resolve (usually fatal) of taking a short cut, with only a general idea of the direction as guide. Accordingly, you plunge into the first street that shows a tendency toward straightness.

The noise and clatter of tongues, left behind, sink first into a confused murmur, then gradually die away, and presently you are lost in a tangle of narrow lanes, denuded of all life, and as silent as the grave.

Turning this way and that, at random, trusting to instinct and the Fates, you are startled by the sound of an indescribably melancholy chant, which seems to be approaching from somewhere. Louder and louder it waxes, until around a corner there sweeps a funeral cortège, weird enough to figure in a nightmare. It is the secret society of the miseracordia, whose members (belonging to all social ranks) pledge themselves to bury the dead poor, and who, masked and dressed in long robes of black, perform this work of mercy as theatrically as possible. The long line of ghostly figures, carrying lighted tapers, and singing as they go, files slowly past with its light burden, a child's coffin, and disappears as it came, leaving an impression of mystery and gloom, which makes the silence oppressive.

At length you reach a church built on the edge of a hillside with a great open square in front of it, from which you look far over the city, and from which you are able to discover familiar landmarks, that point the homeward way.

And when each day is done, you carry its crowding, colorful impressions, out upon the roof terrace, in the still, fragrant night, and ponder them, under the stars.

ADELE M. DONOVAN.

Titian's Birthplace.

We interviewed the Padrone about going to Pieve di Cadore—a quaint little village, on the top of a hill, famous as Titian's birthplace, about two miles from Tai, by a very steep road. If it had been fine we should have walked there, but the road was transformed into a running stream, and it seemed wiser to take a carriage. A drive of fifteen minutes brought us to Pieve. The carriage stopped in the middle of the "Piazza Tiziano," under Titian's statue, and the driver asked what we wanted to do. It had begun to rain again hard, but we scrambled out from under the dirty, smelly hood, and armed with umbrellas started for Titian's house, telling the driver to wait for us at the Hotel al Progresso. The village is small. Some rather large stone houses, which are dignified with the name of "palazzi." Titian's house didn't say much to us. Two small, low, dark rooms. One can't imagine how the boy could have had any inspiration or visions of the splendid coloring in such surroundings—but one of the rooms, they told us, was his studio. However, he was taken to Venice, to study, when he was only 10 years old, so it was only his first childish years that were spent in Pieve. Some people live in the house—a barber, I think. They showed us all over the rooms and said a great many people came to see them—principally English. We went on to the church—the oldest in Cadore. There were several interesting paintings—one by Titian—a Madonna and Saints—and others by members of his family, the Vecellios. There are still Vecellios in the village—one sees the name quite often. The butcher, cobbler, and grocer are all Vecellios. There is, of course, too, an Albergo and a Café Tiziano. All the pictures had the gorgeous coloring of Titian and the Venetian school of that time. The museum is next to the church, with various interesting relics of Titian. Some sketches and some letters written to him by great personages—also many of his own. He always remained in touch with his native place, and came back to it very often—wanted to come home to die when he was [illegible] years old and the plague was raging in Venice. He tried to get away, but no one was allowed to leave the doomed city. He was seized with the dreadful malady and died practically alone, his servants having also succumbed to the plague. There must be a magnificent view from the terrace, but that we should only see from postal cards or descriptions.—[Scribner's.

All Can Hope.

"I never carry any but safety matches," said the orator in the red, white and blue vest. "It's a matter of conscience with me."

"Why so?" inquired the drum major.

"Because," said the orator, "when the world uses safety matches exclusively, phossy jaw will disappear. You know what phossy jaw is? It's the rotting away of the jawbone, as horrible an ill as leprosy, that is contracted by the workers—poor duffers—in factories where strike-anywhere matches are made. Phossy jaw comes from white phosphorous. White phosphorous is the base of strike-anywhere matches, but in safeties there's not a grain of it, and so in safety-match factories phossy jaw is unknown.

"It always seems to me," concluded the orator, "when I scratch a strike-anywhere match, that I am helping to give some poor girl or boy worker phossy jaw. But when I scratch a safety, then I feel like Flexner in his Rockefeller Institute or Metchnikoff in his laboratory—I am helping to rid the world of disease."

Mrs. Von Cerious was discovered at 3 a.m. sitting up in bed reading the encyclopedia.

"What in the world are you doing, Emma?" cried Mr. Von Cerious.

The Day We Celebrate.

"GOING FORTH ON FIFTH TO CELEBRATE?" ASKS HOTEL CLERK.

By a Special Contributor.

"I PRESUME," said the Hotel Clerk of the St. Reckless, "that you, being one of those infatuated parties with a lot of fingers and time on your hands to spare, will be going out on the Fifth to celebrate the Fourth."

"W'y not?" inquired the House Detective, defiantly.

"Certainly, why not?" said the Hotel Clerk. "Go forth with the safe and sane giant cracker, the conservative sky rocket and the meek, retiring Roman candle and expend your golden hours and eyelashes, giving the kids a happy holiday. Probably you've got more thumbs and ears and noses and things than you need, anyway. What's an ear, more or less, but a matter of personal taste? And what's a thumb good for except to mash it when you're driving nails, or to stick it in your mouth when you're turning the leaves of the family album? What's a nose but an excuse for influenza in the winter and an invitation to hay fever for a weak-end party in the summer? What's an eyebrow, to a man who appreciates his patriotic duty? You can nearly always grow another, and anyhow, won't you have one left? Too many of them might make your face look overbalanced.

"Sure, why not? Go as far as you like; the ambulance will bring you back, no doubt, and if you're lucky enough to be in the center of things when the lighted cigar butt falls into the barrel of pin wheels, it's more than likely there'll be quite a piece about you in the paper. I'd enjoy reading it."

"Ain't you got no patriotic feelin'?" asked the House Detective. "Ain't you proud because our forefathers licked the British?"

"I used to be," said the Hotel Clerk. "So were all our folks. We've always been one of the most patriotic families you'd find anywhere. I had a cousin who was the only genuine Daughter of the Revolution in the country. She was born while her mother was riding on a merry-go-round at the county fair.

"I was raised to believe that our ancestors did a great piece of work when they acted in such a way as to induce Lord Cornwallis to alter his plans about spending his summers in this country and catch the next boat back for the other side. I knew the Revolutionary patriots were a nervy crowd. They had to have nerve to wear the kind of clothes they did. I wouldn't dare to wear 'em myself except to a fancy-dress ball, and even then I'd want to take a few drinks first; but they actually had the courage to go out and wage war in 'em. It showed they were a hardy bunch and fearless in the extreme.

"I was always very strong for pasting the British lion a clout in the jaw, too. I wanted to go out every Fourth of July and turn his tail into a pretzel. 'T'll with this hands-across-the-sea business,' I'd say to myself, 'it's been my observation that every time our British cousins extended the hand across the sea, 'twas either spread open for a tip or clenched up to slip us a wallop when we weren't looking. 'Blood may be thicker than water,' I says, 'and if ever they monkey with us again, it'll also be a blamed more plentiful. Britons never will be slaves,' I says, 'but the families of many of them will be indebted to the burial parlors should they undertake anything sassy with your esteemed Uncle Samuel J. United States. In such a case,' I says, 'the Edward The Seventh Rex family will be found spelling their last name "W-r-e-c-k-s," I says. That's the way I talked, Larry, and I meant it.

"Every time a revolution to free Ireland was started at the annual outing and games of the Mayo Men's Association, I'd recall that the bloods of Brian Bond and Patrick Henry mingled in my veins, or might have done so if they felt like it, and I was there with the loud approving cheer. Often I kept on cheering long after the County Mayos had come home on the trolley car from Celtic Park and slept it off and forgot all about it until the next year. When Grover Cleveland made all that pother that time with old Lord What's His Name, the British Ambassador, about the Venezuelan boundary, I became intensely worked up. They could hardly restrain me from actual violence. Up until that time I didn't know Venezuela had any boundary and whether it was worth 11 cents or 11,000 a front foot, I didn't care a hang whether the Venezuelans kept a boundary of their own or had to borrow from the neighbors when they needed one. But the moment this here row came up, it was all I could do to keep from going out and strangling the only Englishman in our home town, with my bare hands. He was a small merchant tailor with weak lungs and side whiskers, and I've often thought I could have done it easy, and regretted that I didn't go ahead and try when I was in the humor for it.

"Then again when that muddle arose over the seal fisheries, I was ready to shoulder a musket. I didn't have a musket, but I was there with the shoulder all right. I thought what a noble animal the seal was and how he furnished seal rings to the wealthy and sealing wax to the middle classes and sealskin saques, made out of mink, to the poor but ambitious; and I was willing to protect this faithful and fruitful creature from British arrogance to the last ounce of wind in my lungs. I was so. Why, I seriously thought, at one time, of petitioning the State Legislature to change my birthday to the Fourth of July, and allow me to start in celebrating it on the morning of the 17th of March.

"But I've experienced a change of heart, Larry, I don't mind telling you. In the light of recent events, I'm surprised that the Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Children never got after us for licking the British that time. I know now 'twas nothing to be proud of, and I look to see future generations referring to it as The Crime of Seventy-Six. The war of 1812 will be mentioned as a second offense on our part, and history will condemn us for our needless cruelty. The way I feel now, I wouldn't strike an Englishman; not even if he was tied hand and foot. Instead of observing the Fourth of July with bands and fireworks and third alarms and having the Declaration of Independence read to us by a District Attorney running for reëlection, in a picnic grove, we ought to send a suitable delegation to decorate the graves of the fallen English dead with the national flower of the English race, which is the veal kidney."

"Wot makes you talk like that, after the way you wuz raised?" asked the House Detective.

"Because I've learned," said the Hotel Clerk, "that there's a way to lick a Britisher into the consistency of a Yorkshire dumping without loss of life, limb or much perspiration. You lick him before you start, and then you don't have to start because he's already licked. This is a system that works like a reversible cuff. It's mostly done by making motions and some loud talk and then jerking a couple of made-in-Germany Dreadnaughts or an extra army corps into sight the same as a conjurer taking white rabbits out of a hat. When another nation does that little bit of parlor magic, these times, and then looks around for the Britisher who composed the audience, there's only audience's umbrella, his portable bath tub and his traveling shawl lying on the ground where he dropped 'em. He's up at the top of the nearest tree, signalling for help in a loud tone of voice.

"I've learned how the stunt was done just by watching our friend, the Kaiser. He's the lad that turned the trick originally, and having found how easy it was the first time, he now responds to an encore every time he thinks he'd enjoy the sight of his esteemed nephew, Edward G. Rex, giving a spirited imitation of a dirigible balloon on its way up.

"I don't know any particular reason why the English should fear the Germans. They've been good neighbors and customers in the past, and freely patronized each other. The English in particular were very patronizing. It's a national trait of theirs when dealing with outsiders. The Germans went to England for woolen cloth and the patterns of their walking shoes, and the English relied upon the Germans to furnish them with their royal family and other necessities. You'd think that any country that you'd been looking to for a couple of hundred years, for your kings, wouldn't seem dangerous because it had enlarged its navy by the addition of a couple of dozen more floating grain elevators or added on a few thousand more soldiers, any of whom would a heap rather be back home at Bingen-on-the-Rhine smoking a pipe that looked like a queensware saxaphone and holding one of his domestic cheeses under his arm to ripen it, than marching around the country with his chest all shoved out, toting a heavy hardware rifle that might prove actually dangerous if loaded and discharged.

"Besides, the German as a marksman is not particularly dangerous, except to himself and friends. If he prefers to drink his beer outdoors with a green uniform on, he may belong to a German Target Club, and frequently does; but I never heard of any perfect score being made at a Schutzenfust except on the bung in the keg. That's a bull's eye every time. The Hessian, our ancient foe, excels in certain indoor sports, such as pinochle, bowling and suicide by gas; but he's no little Johnny Baker or Young Buffalo Bill when it comes to breaking glass balls with a Winchester repeater. There never was a Wurtemburger yet that wouldn't rather sing at you than shoot at you; his work is more necessarily fatal that way. The German is a fighter, but he'd rather not fight if he doesn't have to. He'd rather refer it to the Committee on Rules, and while waiting for them to report, sit down comfortably somewhere and have a little Kummel and sing 'Och du Lieber Augustin,' two or three hundred times. And I don't blame him, either. He's a good guy.

"But at the mere sight of the German Kaiser taking his fleet out of his pants pockets and trying it on his thumb to see if it was keeping its edge properly, the whole blooming British nation just gave one convulsive shriek and soared aloft. At last accounts it was 8000 feet up and still going. Recorded temperature, 103; tongue badly furred; eyes wild and rolling; patient nervous and highly excitable. The drum beat and the tweed suit of that proud race have been heard around the world for a century, but we're just now finding out the English make their fastest time when the pacemaker is behind, instead of in front—and carrying a club.

"It sheds a strong light, Larry, on a phase of the British character that would have been worth a great deal to us a hundred and thirty-odd years ago if we'd only known about it at the time. If our information had been then what it is now we could have dispensed with the Boston Tea Party where we struck a vital blow at the very roots of English society and English institutions by upsetting some tea; and also the Battle of Lexington and other expensive luxuries of the period.

"A cultivated German accent and a large sudden bluff would undoubtedly have done the trick and George Washington would have had a country to be the father of, eight or ten years earlier than he did. It was a shame to use our fists on them, Larry, and I don't mind coming right out and acknowledging it, even at this late day."

"D'ye think, like some people does, that England is an expirin' country?" asked the House Detective.

"Well, if she ever does expire, it'll prove that those who live by the bluff, die by the bluff," said the Hotel Clerk.

The sea was white with moonlight.

"But, Mr. Claverhouse," said the young girl, gently, "your proposal is so unexpected; you must give me time to consider it."

Clarence Claverhouse coughed behind his hand.

"Certainly, Miss Hoskins," he replied. "That—er—is what I have always—er—been in the habit of doing—ahem—in cases of this kind."

ST. IVES (Cornwall, England,) June 24.—On a hill just back of this ancient, quaintest and most picturesque of English towns is a huge rubbish heap that is said to be worth a fortune because of the radium in it. When that statement was first made and cabled to America, it was probably treated with the same sort of facetious skepticism that a similar yarn, coming from America, would receive here. But now that the existence of the most infinitely costly of all minerals is vouched for by that distinguished scientist, Sir William Ramsay, the unsightly rubbish heap has become an object of serious interest. To denounce its pretensions to hidden wealth as humbug would be tantamount to applying the same epithet to Sir William, which would be exceedingly libelous—over here, anyhow.

Sir William Ramsay is credited with knowing rather more about the mysterious, laws-of-nature-defying substance than any other man in England. What he says about radium goes. He was interviewed the other day about a story from America that a comparatively cheap substitute for radium had been discovered there which also wrought miracles of healing. He said there was nothing in it. And that settles it so far as the British public is concerned.

The big rubbish heap is the accumulated refuse of the Trenworth Copper Mine that was shut down in 1856. For over half a century it has existed, an ugly scar on the face of a lovely landscape which has yielded slowly to Nature's healing handiwork. When the mine was worked, great quantities of pitch blende, from which alone radium is obtained, were found among the copper ores. But science then had not even dreamed of the existence of radium and its wonderful properties. The pitch blende was found to depreciate greatly the value of the copper ores with which it was mixed. The miners were, therefore, ordered to chuck it aside whenever they came across it. This they did, never suspecting the value of what they were throwing away, with the result that when the mine was abandoned, great quantities of pitch blende were mingled with the other refuse at the pit-head dumps.

From this pitch blende Sir William Ramsay has extracted radium by a process of his own which is said to be far more expeditious than that commonly employed. He declares the stuff to be "fully equal, in their productiveness of radio active materials and uranium compounds, to any pitch blende which ever came under my notice from any part of the world." On the basis of the analysis he has made of the specimens submitted to him every ton of it, he says, "might be expected to yield a quarter gramme of radium." A quarter gramme isn't much—no more than a little pinch of salt—but at present prices it is worth $12,500.

From the rubbish heap about forty tons of pitch blende have been obtained thus far, and barely half of it has yet been overhauled. Before the mine was shut down, $570,000 worth of copper was taken from it. Some of the sanguine capitalists who have got hold of it think it quite possible that the rubbish heap alone may yield that much worth of radium. What they may obtain from the mine itself is problematical. Sir William Ramsay says that a yield of two-thirds of an ounce—rather more, I believe, than now exists in the whole world and worth at present prices more than $500,000—may be looked for annually in the near future.

On what he bases that expectation I don't know. The mine is only 200 fathoms deep, and up to within about 100 feet of the top it is filled with water. And that water cannot be pumped out and the mine explored until the new reservoir for St. Ives, now well under way, is finished. The water in the mine is radio active. When the mine is pumped out, it is said that the water will be bottled and sold, and doubtless it will be discovered then that it possesses wonderful medicinal virtues of some sort, though for many years the St. Ives folks have been drinking it without discovering that it had any extraordinary properties. Perhaps that may be attributed to the fact that their drinking water passed through two other abandoned mines on behalf of which no claims to radio activity have yet been advanced. That there is much pitch blende still in the mine itself is certain. Above the water level a virgin lode of it has been struck and considerable quantities of it have been brought to the surface.

Those who are exploiting the old mine have other projects in view besides the production of radium. They talk of building a big hotel and starting hydros and radium baths and similar establishments such as have blossomed forth at Erzgebirge in Bohemia whence is obtained the pitch blende on which the world is principally dependent for its present supply of radium. In short, they expect to "make" St. Ives—make it a fashionable resort. And then its unique charms will be lost.

Happily there was little evidence of the materialization of these various money-making schemes when I climbed the rubbish-crowned hill at the back of the town. Some half-dozen little raw, corrugated-iron structures; a score of laborers, paid something like 75 cents a day, searching the dumps for the stuff that yields radium worth $750,000 an ounce, were all the indications above ground of the realizations of the dreams of wealth begotten by the discovery of radium. Close at hand a couple of donkeys were browsing contentedly. Rosy-cheeked children were playing before some old stone cottages. From the base of the hill stretched the quaint old town; beyond that lay the Atlantic, as blue as the Mediterranean; overhead an azure sky, behind, gorse-clad moors, and everywhere an air as invigorating as new wine. Any spot less fitted for the cult of the Golden Calf than that hill it would be difficult to imagine.

Of course, it is the discovery of radium that makes St. Ives of news interest to America. Therefore, I have had to give first place to the story of the rubbish heap. But this westernmost borough of England has riches far surpassing those of the old mine to offer the Trans-Atlantic wayfarer—a banquet of rare beauty of Nature's own providing; quaint scenes of man's making, so mellowed and colored by time that artists rave over them, and a climate that both in summer and winter has rare tonic properties. There are few places in this old land that provide in more generous measure that complete change of life and environment craved by Americans who have grown tired of the strenuous life.

There is nothing remotely strenuous about St. Ives—old St. Ives it should perhaps be called to distinguish it from the new St. Ives that in recent years has grown up on the hilly slope back of the ancient village for the accommodation of summer visitors. Old St. Ives is still much as it was three or four hundred years ago. Its ancient builders knew nothing about art and as little about town planning. Nothing was probably further from their thoughts than producing picturesque effects. Their purpose seems to have been to jumble their dwellings as close together as possible, leaving their narrow streets and still narrower cobble-paved alleys to twist and turn in any direction so long as they never meandered more than a few yards in a straight line. Part of the old town is well called "the Warren." It is as devoid of anything approaching system as the burrows of rabbits.

Having built their town in this higgledy-piggledy fashion, the St. Ives folk settled down to fishing, shipbuilding, smuggling, privateering and such more or less reputable industries as the time afforded. And for a long time the rest of England knew nought of St. Ives.

But they had builded their houses of stone which endured, and time added wondrous touches of color to them. And one day there came along an and he said: "Eureka!" or something thereto, and started painting for all he Then he told an artist friend of the had found, and that friend told another more artists came. And then, to its St. Ives discovered that it was beautiful—or considered beautiful by these artist chaps, there is about their old houses, or their or themselves that painters should rave Ives fisher folk cannot understand.

They had many vacant lofts, though, where been wont to stow away spars, sails and in days when their own industries were more ous and these they let to the artists as are now over three score studios in the old seldom is one of them vacant for any length From this it will be seen that the St. Ives is a flourishing one. At the present time, several American artists. Among them may tioned Paul Dougharty of New York, Lowell Boston, F. H. Shill of Philadelphia, J. S. Bristol York, A. G. Pazolt, G. G. Symons, J. N. Barlow, mond of Boston, Miss Cockroft and Mrs. of New York.

The artists have their own club and or saloon as it would be called in "Sloop" it is named. It is a quaint old on the beach, and well worth a visit. You can drinks" there if troubled by an uneasy respect to alcoholic beverages. The little,

Artists are everywhere sworn foes to stiff ality. Their presence in such numbers lends mian atmosphere to life in St. Ives which charms. It is a place where you can take life pretty much what you please and dress as Last summer, I saw two women artists in St. art students more probably—who were shod and very obviously were no stockings. men's wives who were commenting on them to be greatly scandalized—not so much by the legs as by the proof they afforded of the parsimonious economy with respect to hosiery.

But it is the fisher folk who impart the esque charm to the human element in St. Ives. long sea boots, sou'westers and guernseys, monize well with the Rembrandtesque setting old town. And so do their boats with their sails. They are a hardy, simple folk whose outlook on life has been little affected by ress—or indulgence in radio active waters.

Catching fish is their sole occupation. is no fish to be caught, as is often the case, nothing—save contribute to the take-life-easy the place which is so grateful to jaded because they say there is nothing else they can as the fish have been scarce of late years, had a hard time of it.

Catching fish is also the chief occupation of gulls which abound here. But when their poor, the gulls often come ashore, and may large numbers following the plow and the crows for the worms turned up. The lost on the fishermen, or on the powers that might help them to help themselves. There land around St. Ives that might be made small holdings, and with an acre or two of fisherman and his family would not find it tide over bad seasons.

The fishing industry, as conducted here, Boats with tanned sails look fine in pictures, cannot compete with craft, however ugly, steam or motor engines. And American the primitive and picturesque should, here before the inevitable change takes place old order giveth way to the new.

There is much to be seen in this part of better worth seeing than the old town itself. Cornwall, is unique among English counties. Fertile fields and valleys it has, but it is in the main a rugged region, a land of granite hills and wind-swept moors. And it is in the little district between St. Ives and the Land's End that its beauties are most lavishly displayed.

"Nowhere else in the 'delectable duchy,'" writes Folliott Stokes, the man who knows Cornwall best and loves her most, "will you find a grander coast line, a wilder, more picturesque moorland, or such a wealth of prehistoric villages, cromlechs and stone circles. This is the sanctum sanctorum of the Cornish Celt. Here you will find him still clinging to his granite hills, still listening to the song of the sea and the moan of the moorland wind. The same dreaming, mystic creature as his forefathers, who reared those mighty cromlechs whose massive outlines still so impressively cut the skyline of the hills, and besides which our oldest cathedrals are but as yesterday."

"Grand and interesting as this coast is," he writes in another passage, "the moorland behind it is in some ways more impressive. The ocean winds have given it an ideal, health-producing climate, and the 'soft south' borne on the bosom of the great gulf stream, has clothed its rocks and tors with a tapestry of many colors, and given it a wealth of natural flowers not to be seen anywhere else in England. Here, if anywhere, the jaded city dweller will find that health is a greater boon than wealth, and that happiness—that will-o'-the-wisp—is nearer to him on these rolling hills than in the courts and pleasure palaces of the metropolis."

The American is assured of a warm welcome from Cornish folk everywhere. America is for them the land of promise. Since the decay of their own mining industry they have gone there in large numbers. Hardly a family is to be met anywhere that has not a relative in America. But the charm of their own wild land calls them back when they have made their little piles—and often before. Nowhere else in England are to be met so many people who have been to America, and worked there. And that adds something to the unique delights that Cornwall possesses for the American sojourner.

MAUDE AND HER GARDEN.

"Come into the garden, Maude," sang he,
For he was much given to poetree;
And then Maude came, and since that time
He speaks in prose and forsakes all rhyme—
For Maude looked around that garden fair
And kept him working ten hours there.
She made him pull forty pecks of weeds,
She made him plant all her cabbage seeds.
She made him hoe
Row after row
Of 'tater hills—two dozen or so.

She made him hitch up the garden hose
And water an acre of sweet-pea blows.
She made him take
Her brand-new rake
And scrape till his spine bade fair to break.
Despite his moans
And his awful groans,
She made him gather five barrels of stones,
And squirt the patent old spouting-machine
That kills off the bugs with Paris Green.
She made him fix
Seven dozen sticks
With setting to keep out the neighbor's chicks,
And mend the leak in the fountain pipe,
And taste a tomato that wasn't ripe.

She made him push the lawn roller about
Till his face freckled up like a speckled trout.
She made him prune
Half the afternoon
Till he cussed the Poet that wrote that rune.
She made him dig
Like a hungry pig
A hole so deep, so wide and big,
That an elephant might have been planted there,
While she bossed the job from a swinging chair.
She made him tinker the garden wall,
And snip the dead wood from a hemlock tall.

She made him mow all the nice lush lawn,
And lay out the lines for ten rows of corn.
She made him paint all the latticework,
And fill up the holes where the woodchucks lurk,
And finished by using his brand-new clo'es
To hang on a pole for to scare off crows.
That is the why that I can't rehearse
The words that he speaks when he hears that verse!

Gardens Bordering Bosphorus.

The house is too small to have a garden, walled as a garden should be, and doing more for the outsider by [illegible] suggestions of withdrawal than by any complete revelation of its charms. Few of these pleasances do not enjoy some view of the Bosphorus. I know one such, containing a Byzantine capital that makes the cedar of Lebanon above it throw as secular a shade as you please, so cunningly laid out at length on a hillside that the Bosphorus is a mere ornamental water of a lower terrace. This grand canal of Constantinople enters bodily into certain thrice enviable [illegible] on the water's edge. Their windows overhang the stream, or are separated from it merely by a narrow quay. And each contains its own marble basin for [illegible] communicating with the open by a water gate or a canal or tunnel through the quay.—[Scribner's.

Mr. Smith Becomes Sentimentally Frivolous.

By a Special Contributor.

THAT afternoon I was surprised for the first time of the approaching marriage of a young lady for whom I had for several years felt a distinct attraction. I confess the intelligence took me quite unawares. It was, indeed, almost like a bolt out of a clear sky. Why will girls be so precipitate in this matter of irrevocably settling their affections? One feels this withdrawal of feminine support acutely. How can they ever put those earlier romances so completely and methodically out of their heads? You cannot encompass it. You find it utterly impossible!

As the shadows lengthened, this not unpleasing melancholy into which I had been cast must have passed into a kind of sentimental reverie. Several of the ladies, decked out in white stuffs, were seated on the veranda that evening. Observing the picture, as I ascended the steps, I capitulated to a powerful inclination to join them. The whole circumstances of the day, as I said before, having disposed me to a poetic frame of mind, and the following song coming into my head, I repeated it aloud:

" 'If love were what the rose is,
And I were like the leaf,
Our lives would grow together
In sad or singing weather,
Brown fields or flowerful closes,
Green pleasure or gray grief;
If love were what the rose is,
And I were like the leaf.' "

"Well, was there ever anything quite so absurd!" exclaimed the school teacher. "I should think you would be ashamed to mention it. I really would."

I continued:

" 'If I were what the words are,
And love were like the tune,
With double sound and single
Delight our lips would mingle,
With kisses glad as birds are
That get sweet rain at noon;
If I were what the words are,
And love were like the tune.' "

"How utterly ridiculous!" said the stenographer.

"Perhaps it's the way I deliver it?" I suggested.

"That has a good deal to do with it, unquestionably," assented my critic, "but by all that's preposterous, where did you get it?" But I was not ready to answer.

" 'If you were life, my darling,
And I, your love, were death,
We'd shine——' "

"Right there, precisely there," indignantly interrupted the stenographer, "before you go a syllable further, I demand to know which of us that remark is addressed to!"

"It's not generous to ask me to particularize in public," I protested.

The school teacher joined heartily in the general condemnation which ensued. She said: "To see a great, strong man get up and perpetuate that—that—utter imbecility—that perfect mush—that poultice!—why, you don't know how it looks. I should think you'd blush. If you can't blush, I should think you'd falter. You can falter, can't you?"

"One would fancy he'd wish to hide his head," said a third bearer.

"This united opposition is outrageous," I declared. "It amounts to a conspiracy, a felonious conspiracy in restraint of art. Just because I'm a practical man, you think me unfit for poetry. Here, if what follows doesn't simply resolve you all into mere exclamation points of exhausted admiration, I'll close the book——"

"You mean you'll close your head," corrected the stenographer.

" 'If you were April's lady,
And I were lord in May,
We'd throw with leaves for hours,
And draw for days——' "

"Can it be? No, I refuse to entertain the conviction—it cannot be possible you've been drinking?" said somebody. To a demand so dangerous and unanimous I succumbed.

"Are you aware, ladies," I inquired with patient resignation, "what you have done in refusing to listen to this little object of art—are you aware whom you have condemned?"

"Don't tell us. We don't want to hear it. We don't want to know. It's too awful!" they answered almost together.

This simply shows how vain it is for any one who has acquired the character of a "practical man" to have recourse to the poets even in moments of the greatest Sturm and Drang. Could I have been "A most intense young man,

A soulful-eyed young man,
An ultra-poetical, super-esthetical,
Out-of-the-way young man.

"A Japanese young man—
A blue-and-white young man—
Francesca di Rimini, miminy, piminy,
Je-ne-sais-quoi young man"— these lines would have been attended to with rapture and perception. But if the suspicion has gained ground that one more nearly realizes

"A Sewell and Cross young man—
A Howell and James young man—
A pushing young particle—what's the next article—
Waterloo House young man"— successfully living it down is impossible.

Speaking of Gilbert, reminds me that I have made a considerable effort in my time in a "humble and pottering way" to introduce him to a more enthusiastic attention of my countrymen. I suppose I should say, the middle and lower-middle classes of my compatriots. Doubtless our upper classes were always exquisitely sensitive to the issue, but among the former there is sometimes almost a benumbing absence of sympathy. I have addressed small and select middle-class audiences of five or six (and you know how select a middle-class audience can be when it's on its good behavior) upon the peculiarly metropolitan, Belgrave Square touch of this Rabelais of the lower box. I have directed attention to a conviction that he is the embodiment of the sophisticated spirit of "the city," I mean, of course, the city as distinguished from the country, and not the Londoner's narrower application of these words. I have maintained that, utterly irresponsible and delightful as his verse is, his prose dialogue is perhaps even more admirable. As examples of well-bred, conversational English of the period, where is its superior? The artist is as surely present as he is in "Culture and Anarchy." I have said all this and more. I have, indeed, oftener than once maintained that whoever is capable of looking into Arnold's masterpiece with intelligence and sympathy, will delight in our drawing-room Aristophanes, and, per contra, whoever is in despair at the felicities of the author of the "Bab Ballads" and "Engaged," will cherish with peculiar enthusiasm the labors of the English Sainte-Beuve.

I have read "Engaged" on summer afternoons to young ladies. My transports have not always been infectious. I regret to say that my hearer has, upon occasions, enjoyed an immunity which was colossal. But it makes an excellent touchstone. If your auditory is insensible, they were born serious and will die dull.

The other evening, the stenographer had an alarming report to make. She revealed the fact that she believed she had been "followed by a man." Ever since I have taken an interest in the experiences of young ladies, and I have done so for a long while, I have been astonished at the malignancy of this particular persecution. The only supportable side to the matter is, that perhaps very few men are conscious of having caused such cruel agitation.

It is very reasonable for almost any young woman to suppose that any man, in fact, most men, or, not to be too exclusive, all men, would be tempted to follow her. I say this is reasonable for her to suppose. Her personal pretensions, contrary to popular opinion, have nothing to do with the matter. I can prove this by the fact that many who are harassed the most, have no personal pretensions whatever. The qualities of mind and heart shine out through the countenance, a quick and eager sympathy for what is fine is apt to betray itself in a noble carriage, a garnished understanding in an elegance of expression dropped to the street-car conductor. No matter how ticklishly elusive it may be, all one can be sure of is, that when she is followed, she is the possessor of some characteristic which is irresistible. That is, of course, if the gentleman in quest is consciously following. Doubtless there have been instances of somnambulism wherein the circumstantial evidence appeared overwhelming. These do not apply.

But, occasionally, I believe, a not unnatural apprehension upon the part of the lady is responsible for her fears. Whenever I find I am preceded by a lady for more than a square, I do not judge it too much of an exertion to turn off into the first intersecting thoroughfare. I am convinced that many others follow the same plan, otherwise the lives of numbers of the softer sex would be rendered unendurable.

I have more than once reflected upon the sense of distress and chagrin which must overwhelm a man of conscience and honorable conduct when he discovers that he has been following a lady, the privilege of whose acquaintance he cannot pretend to. His first impulse, of course, is to apologize at once and profusely. But an apology devoid of the forms of personal address is, one might fancy, fraught with insurmountable difficulty. At best, it would be but an empty thing. Not only his present serenity of mind is destroyed, but his good name is at stake. The lady concerned will doubtless mention the occurrence immediately upon attaining the bosom of her friends. Ladies who are annoyed in this cowardly fashion, almost never fail to mention it directly.

Think of the plight of a gentleman, perhaps of extraction, at any rate of the correctest principles, about to be accused of an offense against which his whole soul revolts—guiltless—and yet restrained by the rules of propriety from averting impending disgrace! Of course, I do not blame the ladies for complaining. All I say is, what a pity so much harm should result on both sides merely from a lamentable issue of circumstances in which malice or intention of wrong were absolutely nil.

Match Facts.

John Walker, an English chemist, was experimenting in 1827 with an inflammable mixture for use on shipboard.

One day Mr. Walker happened to rub a stick dipped in this mixture across a table. There was a report, the stick took fire, and, because John Walker was no fool, the match was born.

John Walker, the match's inventor, put his wonderful invention on the market in April, 1827. The Walker match was as big as a lead pencil, and it cost a shilling a box. Because it could only be lighted by drawing it through a piece of sand paper folded in two, the Holden match supplanted it in 1833. The Holden was a lucifer; it ignited more easily than the Walker; so it put the Walker out of business.

Sweden is today the home of the match industry. Sweden exports annually about 2,000,000,000 boxes of incomparable matches.

But there is no statue to John Walker.

Telephoning to Mars.

ETHERIC OSCILLATION ONLY POSSIBLE METHOD.

By Prof. Wilbur Burchman of Leipzig.

[Prof. Burchman, one of Germany's greatest savants and educators, predicts that we will be able to communicate with the great red planet by telephone in the next century by speech in universal tongue. Our only hope of an interplanetary message is by means of etheric oscillations, he contends, and in this article offers proof of that contention and shows the fallacy of recent scientific suggestions which have been offered by noted men as a method of communicating with Mars.]

IF expensive efforts are to be made this coming year to communicate with Mars, it is folly to attempt signaling by any other method than etheric oscillation, for reasons which I shall show, and if an etheric wave can be propelled to the red planet, then there is no reason why it and its kind should not be made to hear the human voice in the first interplanetary message.

If communication is ever established I am willing to stake my scientific reputation that it will be by the means of some one speaking a universal tongue through a wireless telephone which utterance shall be wafted through space in an appalling etheric shout. If this is not accomplished in the present propinquitous approach, it will be in the next fifty years, I am morally certain.

Many things must be taken for granted until they can be proved: first, that Mars is inhabited; second, that the Martians are constituted with a greater sense of perception than we possess, that they have eyes to see, ears to hear, etc.; third, that they are sufficiently advanced to have knowledge of astronomy, to understand the physical laws which we have discovered ourselves in the present generation only; fourth, that they are more so than we are; fifth, that they, too, will be on the alert during the period of our near approach. Arbitrarily taking the first two for granted, it is most reasonable that they excel us in every way, having a higher radio activity than we. They may have been trying to signal us 1000 years ago, or even more. Admitting that they are as ready to talk to us, or more so, than we are to talk to them, let us consider the obstacles to be overcome.

The mean distance of separation of Earth and Mars is 45,000,000 miles. It is obvious that no matter if they have ten senses of perception, they can reply to but two of ours—sight and sound. As the two planets swing around the sun, one is overtaking the other, and when the two are even or in line with the sun, the maximum reduction of distance will be 15,000,000 miles. Take two common pin heads and lay them twenty feet apart, and thirty feet farther on lay a pumpkin. That will be the approximate size and distances of the Earth, Mars and the Sun.

The planets reflect the rays of the sun precisely as the moon reflects them to the earth, and any system of artificial reflection must enter into competition with the naturally reflected sun's rays. If it were possible to reflect in competition with the sun's direct rays, the reflections would be totally lost. So it is possible to reflect from the lighted side of one planet to the darkened side of the other, and since one is perpetually on the inner track and the darkened side of the other is always to the outer track, these reflections can pass but one way at best. There can be no interplanetary response. Furthermore, the Earth and Mars are each revolving around the Sun, each is revolving on its axis and the north pole of the Earth is oscillating like that of a top. Any reflector on the earth to hit Mars, so small and so distant, must be subjected to these three motions and must be adjustable, not simply so, but perfectly so, and where is the engineer who will undertake for ten millions, yes, for a billion, to build Prof. Pickering of Harvard an adjustable mirror with an area of a square mile? Coming back to the pin-head proportion, such a mirror would be so small on the face of the pin head that a strong microscope would be needed to discover it. The light-reflection theory is thus seen to be absurd, first, because flashes could be sent but one way; second, because competition of natural reflection is too strong and, third, because a mirror big enough to reflect a noticeable flash would be too big to be adjustable to the marksmanship required.

The other appeals to the sight of the Martians offer but two suggestions. First, Dr. Larkin says that the laying of a gigantic square or design of black cloth on the white alkali plains of the American desert could convey to Mars the information that the earth men were trying to talk to the Martians. It might, but that would be all. Leauxcieus suggests that from the center of the Sahara above which the atmosphere is absolutely clear that a set of great smoke machines emit spurts of dense vapor in the Morse code. If the Martians have made a study of the topography of the earth, and saw this smoke, would they think it anything but the product of a new and eccentric volcano? Also what astronomer can truthfully say he has seen non-nebulous clouds in the atmosphere of any other place. The use of light is the best appeal to the sight of the Martians, and that having been dismissed as absurd, the whole question of sight appeal must be dismissed, leaving the appeal to hearing.

Before proceeding on this task, consider the suggestion of Prof. David H. Tood of Amherst, that he and Leo Stevens ascend ten miles in a balloon and attempt to signal Mars. No balloonist has ever claimed an ascent of more than six and a half miles, the claim put forward by Glaishier, an Englishman. Some may have gone higher, but the rarefied air and the cold killed them, and they were found dead in the baskets when the hydrogen bag came down eventually. Also how does Prof. Todd expect to transport by balloon, instruments to send or receive messages? The Princess Asturni suggests spiritualism, Don Miguel proposes clairvoyancy and Capt. Oliver says that naval maneuvers in calm waters with solid blocks of ships might be seen, but these can be reckoned with logically on their very face.

Now for the appeal to hearing. Whether light or sound be used, the medium between the planets is the dense unelastic body of ether which pervades the universe in unbroken continuity. To be exact, any wave that oscillates it moves at the rate of 186,000 miles per second.

In the last year, in fact, in the last three months, the radio wireless telephone has been perfected to a startling degree. From transmitting the voice over such distances as five miles, DeForest's latest invention is successful at 600 miles. Moreover, this achievement has been wrought not only once and under one set of conditions, but often enough and with such certainty of result that a complete system of wireless telephones is now in operation on the Great Lakes, where long-range talking is a daily practice.

Miss Anna M. Devine inaugurated this system May 13, 1909, when she sent the first spoken word without wires from Chicago to Milwaukee. Since then, other instances have accumulated daily at such a rate that they have ceased to excite comment.

These are the best reasons for assuming that this range will be increased almost indefinitely. Dr. DeForest, declared recently that it was only a question of time, and a short time, at that, when the voice will be sent across the Atlantic. Greater and greater ranges will succeed, for it has been found that in long distance wireless telephony, atmospheric and other disturbances do not produce as much confusion as in wireless telegraphy. What may seem stranger still, there is not that distortion of sounds with increase of distance, as is the case in sending the voice over wires. Thus, the voice is heard as clearly at 1000 miles as at one mile.

DeForest must realize that with a grand sender through pure ether, the wave could be propelled millions of miles. There would be only a few miles of earth atmosphere and a few miles of Mars's atmosphere and between the millions of miles of ether which transmits the sunlight without the loss of a single ray, which transmits the radio energy without the loss of a fraction of its activity.

The ordinary size of wireless telephone could be used to receive the speaker's voice, but the sender must be on a commensurately grand scale, at least proportionate to the distance, and Dr. DeForest can easily estimate how large it must be, certainly far smaller than a mirror with a superficial area of a mile, and costing only a small part of the ten millions for which Prof. Pickering asks.

Turning to the realms of the fanciful, let us imagine a meridian on Mars with various groups of her great scientists gathered around telescopes, and whatever other instruments they may have. If they do as we shall do, they will have instruments to measure, scopes, colors, refractions, radical waves and other things. There is every reason to suppose that they will be quite as alert as we during the period of our friendly call in the heavens.

Suddenly the etherometer begins a systematic registering of most unusual oscillations. There is great interest, and many gather around. They find themselves unable to transmit it to color or any other expression of visible radio activity and some one suggests the audion. It is connected and the strange sound of an earth man's voice is heard speaking in Esperanto. They are dumbfounded, but it does not take long for their prepared scientific minds to realize what is happening. The sounds are recorded if they have had an Edison, they are translated in two weeks if they have had a Paraduc, and if they have evolved an etheric oscillation system of their own, they are prepared to reply. Once they reply—this is the boldest thought a man of science ever penned—what reason is there to doubt that communication between the earth and Mars would be easy and uninterrupted. The imagination is staggered by what we might learn from them in a month that would advance us in progress 200 years perhaps. However, if they should chance to be behind us in enlightenment, we should hear nothing at all in reply.

Reviewing the entire proposal, one is struck by certain things. The first that to attempt to communicate with Mars is merely a blind stab at the best. We have as much reason to suppose the planet uninhabited as we have to think of it as peopled, we as logically picture the life to be of some queer animal, as to think of the Martians as being at all like ourselves, and the only thing to be gained is the glory of achievement of the earth scientists and the benefit to the entire earth race if communication should be established and we should be able to obtain vast funds of Martian knowledge for the mere asking.

And for something else speculatingly daring—if we begin to talk to Mars may we not hope to talk to the other planets with more powerful instruments?

So far as Martian conditions are concerned, everything is pure guesswork. Prof. Larkin calls the Martian canals natural channels, Mars may be desolate, but as to the earth, I for one am certain that it is entirely practicable at a greater or less expenditure of mind, money and time to construct a radio wireless telephone which will hurl the human voice across the vast ethereal solitudes to Mars, and if after fifty years no answer is obtained, then we may feel sure that one question is answered at least. If we get a reply, a new era of knowledge will begin among mankind.

A love-smitten youth who was studying the approved methods of proposal asked one of his bachelor friends if he thought that a young man should propose to a girl on his knees.

"If he doesn't," replied his friend, "the girl should get off."—[Everybody's.

No advertiser neglects the day; even the florist gests that now is the time to order flowers for "Fourth," and the confectioner puts out boxes of c made especially for celebrations like this one of pendence Day, and so on and on ad infinitum.

The various business firms in Manila respond ally in a call for a donation of prizes which are offered with a view to encouraging the athletic in the islands and to keep up the "good old Ame idea of the Fourth of July."

The Paco Baseball Park is usually chosen for the of the events in the contest, and entries are receive to the hour before the sport begins.

The evening of the 3rd is usually the official ning of the programme. Some one of the clubs, ally the Quill, gives an elaborate banquet at the Metropole, whose Saturday nights are famous the around. There will be speeches by members of club, the governor-general of the islands, and prominent men. Each one will fire his cracker way that will bring smiles or tears to his hearers somehow to a real patriot there is no Fourth like one spent "at home."

An Independence Day dance will be given at the lumbia Club, where a general celebration will be dence before the night is over, and the morning with the same enthusiasm it is wont on this day Fourth, and before 6:30 a.m. donations of candy, etc., from the people of Manila are being receive the central tent on Calle Bagumbayan near the of the gardens.

A chorus of 2000 children from the public scho Manila, under the direction of the supervisor of assemble at 8 o'clock, and after their singing of otic songs they march to the twenty booths under direction of their teacheds to receive the gifts, the tribution of which has been signalled by two long tles from the government ice plant. At the same ment the bands begin to play, and the other featur the programme begin, and continue until 11:30 o' when the entertainment for the children closes various amusements are music by three military a circus by American soldiers; a Chinese theater, Indian prestidigitators.

The children are the first thought in the celeb and the committee in charge of their part of the val sees to it that the good people of Manila are ceedingly generous, for there are always sweets for them all. The donations are put up in small ages and given out to the children just as they ceived. Members of the general committee are tioned at the booths to prevent grown people in ing with any one of the 10,000 school children wh being led into an understanding of the feeling A cans have regarding this day.

When noon comes, a salute to the Union is f forty-six guns at Fort Santiago and by the ships bay. And from that hour until the field sports

Paco Baseball Grounds begin, there is no moment wherein the customary siesta can be indulged in. At 2:30, the events begin after the band plays the "Star Spangled Banner." The order is usually as follows:

100-yard dash. Open.
220-yard dash. Open.
120-yard hurdles. Two feet 6 inches. Open.
100-yard hurdles. Filipinos.
Base running. Open.
Base running. Filipinos.
High jump. Running.
Broad jump. Running.
Pole vault. Open.
Pole vault. Filipinos
Shot put.
Basket-ball game.
Athletic specialties.

American boys enter into these sports with zest, and often lay before the astonished eyes of their parents upon their return home from Paco, purses amounting to 30 pesos or more.

When the evening comes and the day has cooled, carriages drawn by the spirited little Filipino pony or the lithe-limbed Australian horse, are seen going in the direction of the Luneta, a part of Manila which has established the custom of daily drives, for the purpose of not only enjoying a drive, but of meeting one's friends. A fireworks display, however, is the reason for the drive this night.

The signal corps has detailed its men to take charge of the fireworks, and many are the frames that are set up for the purpose of the Fourth of July illumination. The fireworks are represented by balloons, peacock plume effects in rockets and bombs, flash and thunderbolt effects in rockets and bombs, discharge of eagle screams producing the screech of the national bird, the national colors in mid-air, "The Day We Celebrate," revolving fire wheels duplicated from the inaugural festivities, the "Manila bouquet" formed in mid-air by flight of 300 large colored rockets, potpourri; "Good Night" and "Feu de Joie," being the last one of the really fine display, is indeed a bonfire of great brilliancy.

Long after the fireworks are no more, the citizens drive and walk about the Luneta, which is always wonderfully decorated on this night of nights, by hundreds of red, white and blue arc lamps and incandescents. The city itself is a work of art when the Americans finish with it on the night before, but its real beauty is not appreciated until—shall we say?—"the night after."

While the celebration in Manila is as typical as that of any city in the islands, there is the celebration on the transports which tour the islands, showing how patriotic Americans remember their country even under almost impossible conditions. Passengers become practical jokers who were never before accused of having a humorous streak in their make-up.

Unsuspecting "bridge" players are terrified by a young Vesuvius coming into life under the table around which they are sitting; those attempting a siesta are cut short in their dreams by the sudden explosion of a bunch of little "red devils." Just underneath their cots, and a sure proof of camaraderie is shown in the impish delight every one takes in catching his table companion unawares. It is a toy celebration, but every one on board enjoys it.

Across the bay from Manila is Cavite. It is less Americanized, but the spirit has been carried to the people just the same, and a programme of equal length with that in Manila is carried out. The parade in the morning was composed of the following divisions: The grand marshal and his aides leading the way were followed by the police, Navy Yard Band, United States marines, ordnance, band, Philippine scouts, fire department, band, constabulary, private schools, public schools, high school cadets, civil orders, navy-yard employes, citizens and "Horribles."

In the events which took place in the afternoon the American flag was offered several times as a prize in "tug of war." In the regatta there were dinghy and banca races in which both men and women took part. There were boxing contests of four rounds open to Americans, and others open to Filipinos. There was a baseball game which for originality of expression certainly showed a delightful mixing of the languages and similar interpretations when the Spanish language had to mean just what our American does; for instance, the bat is a bat, but the ball is either a bola or pelota; the box, home plate, and umpire retain their names, but the batsman immediately becomes jugador al bat. A foul strike is spoken of in this way: "Un foul strike es out al bateador." A stolen base is una base robada. A wild pitch is a bola desviada, and the spit ball una bola ensalivada; a daisy cutter is una corta-margaritas; a safe hit is a "hit seguro;" a pick-up is a cogida; a clean steal, a "robo limpio." It is a language within itself, and reminds one of the Americans who find it much easier to mix the little Spanish they know with their English in attempting to get the Filipino servant to understand what he really means.

The Americans who went into the Philippines in the early days were compelled to learn the language spoken by the people, but under our educational system the natives are being compelled to learn our language, so the Americans fall back in the usually lazy linguistic attitude typical of the thorough American.

The story is told of the American who in a few lessons claimed that he had mastered the Spanish language. On being questioned concerning it, he said that three words only were necessary to the ordinary vocabulary: Limpia, dolce and mañana. His explanation of his choice was as follows: "If I say limpia and point to the article I want, my muchacho will know I want my linen. When I meet a señorita, the word dolce is as good as any in making love. As for mañana, in a country like this it is stupid to do anything you do not really have to, and even if you do, just put it off until mañana; every one will understand.

At Camp No. 5 on the Philippine Railway Construction, the men insisted that their schedule of events should contain a greasy-pig race, the biggest knocker, revolver contest, blind man's contest, and a rice-eating match. A grand ball followed the afternoon of sport, and it is safe to conjecture that there were dozens of dainty señoritas helping to make it a great success. It might also be safe to say that the baile was held in a nipa house with split bamboo floors, which as a dancing floor to the Filipino is the piece de resistance.

Enthusiastically as the people enter into this celebration, there are a few who are antagonistic to anything American who write editorial after editorial on the day. One newspaper came out not long ago with this sort of an article: "The people are today so engrossed in the coming elections that they do not seem to have time to pay any attention to the coming Fourth-of-July celebration. The belief of immediate independence, so insidiously inculcated into the mind of the masses by our demagogues, seems to be in a degree responsible for that neglect. Perhaps the people would rather celebrate the day of independence than the 'Glorious Fourth.'"

By this it will be seen that there is not all harmony in the islands when our greatest of days comes round. Instead, it is a reminder to those mean spirited in the islands that their day of independence is not as near as they would like it to be. Our great spirit, when once insinuated into the minds of the Filipinos, is liable to take root and turn out a people capable of governing themselves. Their patriotism is almost as new as China's, for it will be remembered that it is not many years since China learned that flags were for other use than decorative purposes.

Wherever one goes one finds Americans these days, and where Americans and the Fourth of July meet there is always something doing.

Stories of the Fourth.

SOME EARLY CELEBRATIONS OF INDEPENDENCE DAY.

By a Special Contributor.

LIKE a jolly little firecracker going off in the solemn midst of a Fourth of July oration crackles a mirthful tradition anent the signing of the Declaration of Independence.

During the breathless gathering about the table where lay the epoch-making document awaiting the signatures that meant the life or death of a new nation, it happened that Charles Carroll of Maryland jostled elbows with Carter Bruxton of Virginia, the former a thin, angular gentleman of skimpy pattern; the latter built on broad lines, luxuriantly padded, tipping the scale at 170 pounds.

"Well, Mr. Carroll," Bruxton chubbily grinned, "the British say they will hang us as rebels if they catch us. If they do, I will have greatly the advantage, for as I am heavy, my neck will be broken at once, while I fear you will dangle in the air and hang on for some time."

It is the cherished pride of Virginia that the declaration was drawn up by a native son, the boast of Pennsylvania that it was signed in her Philadelphia, but a little neighbor across the way, New Jersey forsooth, calls attention to her finger in the pie of honorable mention by claiming that in the day of exciting debate over the passage of the declaration it was one of her representatives who "by a laconic speech, signalized for its energy, its disinterestedness and its burning patriotism, turned the scale which was at the moment equipoise."

"There is," said this venerable Witherspoon, when he perceived the house wavering, "there is a tide in the affairs of men—a nick of time. We perceive it now before us. To hesitate is to consent to slavery. That noble instrument upon your table, which insures immortality to its author, should be subscribed this very morning by every pen in this house. He who will not respond to its accents and strain every nerve to carry into effect its provisions is unworthy the name of freeman. For my own part, of property I have some—of reputation more. That reputation is staked on the issue of this contest—that property is pledged. And, although these gray hairs must soon descend into the sepulcher, I had infinitely rather they would descend thither by the hands of the executioner, than desert, at this crisis, the sacred cause of my country."

The present-day big little boy of 6—the present-day little big boy of 60—in the blissful midst of the bang-banging hullabaloo of a glorious Fourth has no idea of the narrow escape the Fourth-of-July firecracker had from death and annihilation.

The Rev. Jacob Duchè is the profane meddler who would have stamped out the spluttering joy from the life of the small boy forever. Duchè, a native of Philadelphia, began the Revolutionary period so patriotically that when chaplain of Congress at the outbreak of war he gave up his entire salary for families of patriots fallen in battle. But by 1777 he had undergone so mysterious a change of heart that he wrote Washington a letter in which he pictured the patriotic cause in the most dire fashion possible and then plunged into the following entreaty:

"Your penetrating eye needs not more explicit language to discern my meaning. With that prudence and delicacy, therefore, of which I know you are possessed represent to Congress the indispensable necessity of rescinding the hasty and ill-advised Declaration of Independency. Recommend, and you have an undoubted right to recommend, an immediate cessation of hostilities. Let the controversy be taken up where the declaration left it and where Lord Howe expected to have found it. Let men of clear and impartial character, in and out of Congress, gentlemen, liberal in their sentiments, heretofore independent in their fortunes, and some such are surely to be found in America, be appointed to confer with His Majesty's commissioners. . . . O! Sir, let no false ideas of worldly honor deter you from engaging in so glorious a task. Whatever censures may be thrown out by men and illiberal minds, your character will rise in the estimation of the virtuous and noble. It will appear with luster in the annals of history and form a glorious contrast to that of those who have sought to obtain conquest and gratify their own ambition by the destruction of their species and the ruin of their country."

Paul Lister Ford gives us tense snatches of description of some of the earliest celebrations of our Independence day.

The first Fourth was on the 8th. Countless times since has the day been honored by the reading aloud of the declaration, but never has the event had the dramatic thrill of that flashing moment in the courtyard of Independence Hall when it was read aloud to outsiders for the first time, and never again could bon fires, rockets and the ringing of bells mean all that they did that night in the historic city of Penn in the year 1776.

New York celebrated the following day, and thereon hangs a tale—no less an incident than the beheading of a king.

On Bowling Green stood a magnificent equestrian statue of His Majesty George the Third, torn down and unofficially executed in a half-mischievous, half-patriotic, Fourth of July spirit. But the delicious end was not yet. George was of a leaden nature—we refer merely to the equestrian statue, of course!—and later his broken fragments were moulded into bullets to fight the British.

It was not until 1782 that Congress celebrated the Fourth for the first time, having decided to adjourn over that day and dine together—which the members impressively did at the fashionable hour of 3 o'clock, a unique feature of the entertainment being the music rendered by a band of Hessians taken at Trenton, while between the drinking of every toast patriotic volleys were fired off by soldiers drawn up outside the door of the city tavern where the country's lawmakers had congregated.

That same night, the city was illuminated by lighted candles placed in every window—with the exception of a few dark houses still loyal to a lost cause.

As an example of some of the possibilities of the impassioned oratory of early-day Fourths we quote a few of the vivid words of a New Jersey divine in a "memorable" address of the year 1823.

"For more than seven years, the savage foeman and the fiend Hessian exhausted their murderous propensities. The old man, trembling beneath a weight of years—the infant smiling at the glittering bayonet pointed at its bosom and the tender female, swooning amidst her fears, were alike disregarded. Then, beneath a burning sun or through almost impenetrable snows, the father was torn from his shrieking family—and traitors and hirelings applied the torch which drew from the peaceful cottage its inmates whose flight was facilitated by the flames and by the crash."

A snapping play upon words was the toast that sparkled most to the fancy of early Fourth of July banquets, and few could have outdone the following piquant flashes.

"1. America!—'trail arms.' 2. Great Britain!—'ground firelock.' 3. France—'as you were.' 4. Spain—'wheel to the right.' 5. Freemen—'display column.' 6. Tyrants—'take distance.' 7. South America—'close to the front, forward march, halt.' 8. Nations of the globe—'order firelock, stack arms, rest.'"

The most unique of the early celebrations was the "new and solemn style" in which the Fourth was celebrated at Castleton, Virginia, in the year 1820. On the 6th of July, 1777, Capt. Nathan Williams had been killed and scalped while fighting the British and Indians. His body left on the ground had been buried, wrapped in an Indian blanket. After forty-three years, it was the happy inspiration of his surviving companions to disinter the remains and honor him—and Independence Day—with the pomp of a public funeral.

That same year, out in the backwoods of Kentucky, the nation's health was drunk at a Fourth of July "banquet," the head of the table occupied by Nathan Young, 108 years old, a soldier who had begun his military career in Braddock's defeat and continued it throughout the War of the Revolution.

It is one of the most "dramatic coincidences" of our national history that the semi-centennial of the Declaration of Independence marks the death of both John Adams and James Jefferson, almost at the same hour of the day.

Already ill, on the 30th of June, Adams chose for the Fourth of July toast to be given in his name: "Independence forever!" When the morning of that day came, his wandering mind gropingly clutched at the sound of ringing bells and booming cannon in a bewildered inquiry as to their meaning. On being told, for a flashing instant the light of reason illumined the death-shadowed face, and he whispered: "Independence forever!"

The night of the 3rd, Jefferson, sinking fast, sleepily asked: "Is this the Fourth?" His last words for a few hours later when bells and cannon answered "Yes," he had drifted too far away from the moorings of time and nations to hear—although he lingered yet a little while longer as if, even in unconsciousness, he was loath to go until he had celebrated one more birthday of his country's independence.

Going Fishing.

THE HAPPY DAY OF MARY EMALINE AND GRANDPA.

By a Special Contributor.

MARY EMALINE'S grandfather stood before the tiny cracked-looking glass, which hung above a small shelf in the kitchen. He stooped slightly forward and watched each motion, while he lathered his face with care. Then he took his razor from the little pasteboard wall pocket hanging beneath the shelf.

At this instant, Mary Emaline appeared in the doorway, quite out of breath from running.

"Oh, Gran'pa," she exclaimed, "what you shavin' fer? You said you'd take me fishin' this mornin'."

"So I will, honey, so I will," said he, turning his head slowly and giving her a look in the pause before he opened his razor.

"Well, then, what you shavin' fer? Folks don't have to shave to go fishin'."

"Well now, honey," he replied with a twinkle in his eyes, "I was thinkin' mebbe the fish'd bite better."

"Now, Gran'pa, you're jest foolin'," said she disgustedly, and stamped her small foot with vigor.

"See here, honey," said the old man in a different tone of voice, "you set right down there on the door step an' be quiet as a mouse till Gran'dad gets through, then we'll go."

Mary Emaline bestowed upon him a long, discriminating look.

"You look jest hor'ble now, Gran'pa," said she, "all over foam, jest like egg beat up."

She had no more than seated herself carefully upon the doorstep when her grandfather exclaimed testily:

"My, my, who's been a-meddlin' with my razor?"

"Me, Gran'pa," said the child with great complacency.

"You! What you been doin' with it?"

"I jest sharpened it for you, Gran'pa."

"My, my," said he, quite at a loss for words.

"Ain't it nice an' sharp, Gran'pa?"

"Oh, Mary Emaline, you've jest spiled the only razor your poor old gran'dad's got," and he looked at it sorrowfully. Suddenly he asked with rising suspicion: "What'd you sharpen it on?"

"I sharpened it out in the yard on that thing that turns round."

"The grindstone! My, my, whatever be I goin' t' do now?"

The child began to look worried.

"Why, Gran'pa, it's jest awful sharp. It'll cut wood—fer I tried it."

Completely out of patience at last, the old man turned upon her, speaking sharply:

"Mary Emaline, you've jest got t' quit meddlin'. You're the most mischeevious child ever I see. Huccome I goin' t' shave with a razor like a saw?"

"Oh, Gran'pa!"

"Like's not it'll take off the end of my nose, er mebbe a slice of my chin."

"Oh, Gran'pa, don't shave, please don't," she implored, as she sprang up and grabbed his coat tails.

"Then when my beauty's spi'led, ye'll hev t' look at me an' 'member 'twas all your fault."

The child's eyes slowly filled with tears, seeing which the old man said, relenting: "There, there, gran'dad won't take off a slice of his chin, ner yet the end of his nose; but ye mustn't ever tech his razor again. Now set down an' be still."

She resumed her seat, but every few minutes turned and looked with anxious eyes to see if her grandfather had become disfigured. Whenever he, holding his nose between thumb and forefinger, and drawing his mouth to one side, made atrocious grimaces at his image in the glass, she, in deepest sympathy, scowled and did likewise. And it was with a sigh of relief she at last saw him shut his razor and return it to the wall pocket.

"Oh, Gran'pa, are you goin' fishin' now?"

"Yes, honey, I guess the fish'll bite now. Don't you think so?"

"But that isn't why you shaved this mornin'; it's 'cause you're goin' to prayer meetin' tonight. Ain't that the reason, Gran'pa?"

"Can't fool you, can they, honey?" he said with a chuckle. Then he went into the woodshed and took his fishing pole down from its nails high up on the wall where he kept it out of Mary Emaline's reach.

"Here's your can fer worms, Gran'pa," said she, bustling about to help him. Then she danced along ahead as he, fishing pole over his shoulder, walked down the front path and across the road, entering the barnyard, where he began to dig for bait.

"You stay out there, honey. Like's not a cow'll hook ye."

So she waited impatiently, leaning upon the bars of the gate, soon calling out:

"Oh Gran'pa, haven't you got worms enough yet?"

"Jest 'bout enough, honey," and he looked into the can.

The morning was clear and sunny, and as the chums walked down the long lane between zig-zag rail fences, which led to the old man's favorite fishing ground, the brook that emptied into the tamarack swamp, he broke into quavering song. On such occasions his favorite was apt to be "When I can read my title clear to mansions in the sky," but since she had last heard it, Mary Emaline had had its meaning explained to her, so now when he reached "I'll bid farewell," she suddenly interrupted him.

"Gran'pa, I jest wish you wouldn't sing that song."

"Why not, honey?"

"'Cause I don't like it."

"Why don't you like it?" he insisted.

"'Cause I don't want you to go up in the sky. I want you to stay right here 'long side o' me, Gran'pa."

The old man laughed happily as he took her hand.

"Well, then, gran'dad'll sing ye 'Evalina' er the 'Orphan Boy' er 'Com sit thee down, my bonnie, bonnie lass.' Mebbee ye'd like them better."

But, after all, he sang no more, for at that instant a bluebird alighted upon the end of a fence rail near by, then disappeared within.

"Oh, Gran'pa, hold me up so's I can look in," cried Mary Emaline, darting forward.

The bluebird came suddenly out and flew away, seeing which the old man laid down his fishing pole and obediently lifted her up.

"There's jest piles an' piles of eggs in there," she cried excitedly.

"What color be they, honey?"

"Same color as the sash I gived gran'ma."

"Blue, then," said he. "That's what the mother bird flies up in the sky fer—t' get some of the blue color. But come along, now, honey, er we won't get any fish."

Down in the bottom lands where the brook ran merrily along past the tall tamaracks and nibbled playfully at the toes of the graceful hemlock trees, were a series of little pools, cool, dark and quiet, where many small fish of the kind called "pan fish" lay in wait for unfortunate insects which might fall in. Here was the fishing ground beloved alike by the old man and Mary Emaline. The air was clear and heavy with the odor of balsam and other evergreen trees. There was a sound of dripping and of slowly-running waters back there in the thicket a way, where some stones impeded the brook's progress, and where tiny ferns, deeply green, held up their parasols. Nearer the brook the ground was muddy and trampled, showing footsteps of cattle.

"Look out now, honey, where ye step," warned the old man.

"Yes, Gran'pa, I'll look out," she replied, trudging sturdily behind him.

A little later she found herself seated upon a big log, anxiously watching her green-and-red float. The water in the pool beneath her was about a foot and a half deep and so clear she could easily watch the motions of intended victims of her hook.

"Oh, Gran'pa," she cried, "there's a fish comin'; he's smellin' the worm; he's—oh Gran'pa, he's eated it off the hook!"

She turned a woebegone face upon him and added: "I fink that's jest the meanest fish that ever was."

"Never mind, honey," he answered, rebaiting her hook. "If at first ye don't succeed, try, try again. There now, here 'tis; spit on it, honey."

"What fer, Gran'pa?"

"So's ye'll hev luck."

Mary Emaline complied with avidity, once, twice, and might have continued indefinitely had not the old man said with a chuckle:

"There, there, that's enough."

Then he threw it into the water with great care, admonishing her: "Now keep real quiet, an' when you're sure a fish's got a holt of the hook you jest jerk it quick's ever you can right up in the air."

Mary Emaline fastened her eyes upon her float and waited patiently. Soon it began to tremble, and she fairly held her breath as she leaned forward and peered eagerly down into the pool. The float began to bob, then suddenly went down under the water. Remembering her grandfather's instructions, the little girl said not a word, but gave her fish pole a quick, strong jerk, which landed the fish high and dry in the balsam tree behind her, and herself in the pool beneath.

"My, my," cried her grandfather as he made haste to pull the dripping child from the water. "Mary Emaline, what d'ye mean skeerin' the fish like that?"

"I didn't do it on purpose, Gran'pa," she excused herself as she scrambled quickly to her feet, still holding tightly to her fishing pole. Then her eyes falling upon her catch: "But I got him, Gran'pa; I got the fish."

"I should say you did, honey. But how be I goin' t' get him down?"

With the greatest faith in his capabilities she replied:

"Oh, you can get him down, Gran'pa; course you can. Why, you can climb up in the tree after him."

The old man, high amused, laughed aloud.

"Yer gran'dad's not as spry as he was once upon a time," he reminded her. "But now we'll see what we kin do."

Then he began to work at the line with the greatest amount of patience, his efforts at last being rewarded with success, for a lively little sunfish lay upon the ground at Mary Emaline's feet.

"Oh, Gran'pa," she cried, "ain't he jest awful pretty?"

"Yes, honey, but he's sech a leetle feller you'd better throw him back in the water. Hadn't you?"

Mary Emaline looked deeply indignant.

"Why, Gran'pa Hood, I'm s'prised at you fer sayin' sech a thing! I jest guess I won't frow him back after I got most drownded ketchin' him."

"My, my, I'd clean forgot you're all over wet. I guess we'd better go on home."

"No, I ain't all over wet, Gran'pa. My head end ain't wet. Can't I hang my shoes an' stockings up to dry an' go in paddlin'?"

"I don't know, honey; like's not your ma wouldn't want ye to go in paddlin'." And the old man looked very dubious.

"Well, she didn't hev time to wash my feet last night, an' I went barefoot yesterday. My feet's awful dirty, Gran'pa, jest awful." She looked earnestly up into his face and added: "'Sides, they're all over wet now, anyway."

So, as usual, she accomplished her desire, and soon was wading in the shallow water a short distance below the pool in which her grandfather fished. She pushed her toes into the shifting sands and watched as the clear water bubbled and boiled over them. Then some bold and investigating minnows made quick little them, always keeping their heads upstream.

"They fink my toes are worms, Gran'pa," said Emaline, laughing delightedly.

The old man had caught but three fish, and was ing his hook for another when Mary Emaline scream in a blood-curdling fashion.

"Dear me," cried her grandfather," what's the now?"

"Oh, Gran'pa, there's sompin' awful eatin' my an' he won't let go!"

As she continued her outcry, the old man hasten her aid.

"Walk out here to grandad, an' let him see wha ter's got ye."

The child walked out of the water, using one the heel of the other. Every time she looked her foot she cried afresh. Her grandfather leaned and examined it.

"My, my!" he exclaimed, "ef one of them pesky suckers hain't got a-holt your big toe."

"Oh, Gran'pa, will he eat it up?"

"Course not. Here, let gran'dad get a-holt There now, ye old varmint," to the blood sucker, put his heavy boot heel upon it, 'sarves ye right, erin' gran'dad's leetle gal." Turning to the ch asked: "Guess ye won't go paddlin' any more will ye?"

Mary Emaline was game. She hesitated and with longing eyes at the water, then:

"I guess I'll fish a while first, Gran'pa," she said before she realized it, it was time to return home.

When her grandmother saw the bedraggled child shoes and stockings in one hand, a tiny fish held above her head in the other, and a broad grin of upon her face, the old lady exclaimed:

"Massy me, how under the canopy'd she come in sech a mess?"

"Well, mother," said the old man with a ch "sometimes when folks go a-fishin' they get themselves. That's how it was with Mary Emaline

A Summer Hint.

The board walk at Atlantic City was crowded pretty women in gay summer dresses. A beauty tor, just returned from abroad, remarked how these women were to expose their bronzed faces did, to the scorching light of the sun. He poin how their countenances were distorted into ugly aces and frowns. He said:

"Our American women would be wise to adop the Parisienne, the parasol habit. At the awter sorts in France I noticed that all the women parasols of pongee lined with green silk. A Question of Courage.

How Robert Standford Proved Himself a Hero.

By a Special Contributor.

I.

"IT'S the same fellow," said Allan Bostwick, from his seat on the rail. His voice rose above the chatter of the tea-drinking group on the veranda. "By Jove! He got the consular job, eh? How do you suppose he managed it, Miss Casewell?"

Helen Casewell leaned from the hammock and pulled a cluster of jasmine flowers from the vine that curtained the veranda.

"Can't a man be a consul and a coward, too?" she propounded.

"Helen!" reproved her mother.

"I'm in pursuit of information," calmly proceeded Miss Casewell. "You will notice that it was not I who questioned the Consul's courage. Mr. Standford, I presume, writes the consular reports in a neat hand; a woman could do no more."

"Hel-en!" Mrs. Casewell repeated.

The booming voice of Grant Grahame, Mrs. Casewell's bachelor brother, owner of the Hacienda Buena Vista and host of this Fourth-of-July gathering of Americans in an alien country, stemmed for a moment the conversational torrent. He was very positive in his opinions, and delivered them much in the manner in which an anarchist would explode a bomb.

"Bob Standford a coward? What a fool thing to say! He went into the army to please his father, and he resigned from his regiment because he was squeamish about firearms. Couldn't overcome it, somehow; must have been born into him. But what's a trait like that to do with cowardice? You might as well hold him responsible for the color of his eyes and hair."

Pretty, soft-voiced Gracia Kent, the orphaned niece, to the guardianship of whose minor years Grahame had been recently appointed, interposed in the interests of harmony. Grahame listened to her—he would always listen to Gracia—and with a final growl subsided.

"Isn't there such a thing as physical cowardice?" Casewell argued. He was always arguing; it was a matter of principle with him. "Now, here's a case—I think you'll agree with me, Mr. Bostwick—of bravery."

He took from a rack a San Francisco paper, brought by carrier from Frontera. The paper was ten days old, but news from the United States was still news ten days from date.

"It's the account of the foundering of the Santa Rosa on the Pacific Coast," he explained. "Listen to this: 'Just before the steamer sank, the captain took his place on the bridge. "Good-bye," he called. "It's my last watch." As the vessel went down, he sounded on the steamer's siren a requiem and a farewell.'"

Gracia leaned forward. Her eyes under shadowing lashes shone like blue stars.

"That man was a hero!" she breathed. "He couldn't have known the meaning of the word fear. Cowardice in a man is the one thing I couldn't forgive. I would—"

"—not embrace," Helen supplemented, her black eyes flashing wicked enjoyment of Gracia's evident embarrassment.

"The captain was faithful to duty, true to his trust," Casewell pompously concluded. "He would not desert his post while one of the passengers or the ship's crew remained in peril. Yet I contend that he may have been a physical coward—that he may, for instance, have had a fear of—er—snakes."

"Stuff!" boomed Grant Grahame. "Physical cowardice is no cowardice at all."

Gracia got up, and bending over her uncle, hung the jasmine blossoms upon his ears, where they swung coquettishly.

"You're a dear old thing," she irrelevantly remarked, and dropping a kiss on his bald head, went back to the hammock.

"There is no greater heroism than faithfulness to duty," said Mrs. Casewell, in her quiet corner. "The men who do their duty where the world can't see—they are the heroes. It's easy to be heroic when the bands are playing and the flags are flying."

"Speaking of flags—it's time we were dressing for the ten-mile ride," said Helen, cryptically.

"It's too bad you didn't get down from the City of Mexico for the flag-raising at the consulate," Gracia was saying to Bostwick, who had left his perch on the railing for a seat beside the young girl. "The American ladies of Frontera and vicinity made the flag, and we're very proud of it."

"I didn't come here to celebrate the Fourth," Bostwick returned. His bold eyes devoured Gracia's pink-and-white prettiness. "I came to see you, Gracia. How many waltzes will you give me at the consular ball tonight?"

Mrs. Casewell interrupted before Gracia could reply. "As Helen says, it's time we were dressing for our ride. Come, Gracia, dear."

Arm in arm the two, with Helen, went into the house. An embarrassed silence fell between the three men. Each waited for the other to speak. Finally Bostwick haltingly began:

"I assure you, Mr. Grahame, I—er—had no idea Bob Standford was a particular friend of yours. I don't want you to think that my remarks—er—had any personal bias. The reason for his leaving the Seventh is no concern of mine——"

He stopped. Robert Stanford had ridden across the courtyard, and was dismounting before the door. Greetings were constrained. Grahame, furtively scanning the young man's sensitive face, was wondering how much Standford had heard. To cover the awkwardness of the situation, he plunged into generalities.

"How's this for hot weather? I can't breathe any lower than my collar button. Used to think Fourth-of-July weather was pretty middling warm back in God's country; but pshaw! It wasn't. It beats all how the rains hold off! I wanted Mary and Helen to see Mexico at its best; and that's when the sky has been rain-scoured and the ground rain-washed. Then is when you see blue that is blue; and the rainbow of colors that the flowers make—— What's that, Casewell? They're bringing the horses? Did I say 5 o'clock? I did! Well, then! All aboard, everybody. Here are the ladies."

He moved ponderously down the step, stopping to give his whinnying nag a lump of sugar before assisting Helen to mount. Gracia, with Standford's help, was already in the saddle.

"I was too late for the cup of tea you promised me," he said, diffidently, though, as he looked up at Gracia, his heart was in his eyes.

"Ten miles for a cup of tea—five coming, five going!" chuckled Grahame, overhearing. "That's a longish short cut, Standford."

As Gracia bent to take the whip from the muchacho who was holding her horse, the low-hanging boughs of a crimson-flowered oleander beside the path were parted by two small brown hands. A face of tropical beauty looked up at her.

"Oh!" cried Gracia, softly. "What a pretty child! Uncle Grant, who is she? I haven't met her before. Will she come out and speak to me?"

Grahame turned in his saddle.

"That? Oh, that's Luz."

Luz looked shyly into the smiling face of the young lady, and twisted off a bunch of oleander, which she gravely presented.

"Miss Kent, this is Mrs. Lopez," said Grahame, formally, but with a twinkle in his eyes.

"That baby!" Gracia exclaimed.

"Her esposo is employed here at Buena Vista. Want to speak to me, Luz?"

She nodded her sleek black head, rubbing one bare foot against the other in an agony of embarrassment.

"Mañana, little one—no time now," Grahame told her; and wheeling his horse, he rode on, Helen beside him.

"I am glad you put her off," Helen remarked. "I haven't seen such a promising subject for my camera since I crossed the Rio Grande. Can she speak English?"

"Not a word."

"Do you think she would let me photograph her?"

"Very likely. She'll be a nice plaything for you and Gracia, eh?"

"The Mexican girl seemed dreadfully disappointed," said Gracia to Standford, throwing a backward glance at the little figure in the shapeless blue cotton gown. A wistful look in the soft eyes, a plaintive trembling of the pretty mouth, haunted her. Such hair! Two thick braids almost down to her heels."

"A remarkably pretty girl," Standford conceded. "I should judge her to be about 16 years old. In two years she will have acquired a waddle and an extra chin."

"You might have spared her the waddle," said Gracia, reprovingly.

Although the sun swung low, the heated earth had not perceptibly cooled. The white dust of the road, disturbed by the pounding hoofs, rose and hung cloud-like above and about the riders. Not a leaf rustled; the air was mute.

Gracia rode with down-bent head. The oleander branch lay across her lap. Level shafts of sunlight cleft the canopy of foliage and brightened the clouds of dust into golden mist. They found the threads of gold in Gracia's brown hair. In the enveloping folds of white chiffon, her face was like a flower. Standford wished that she would turn toward him. He wanted to look into her eyes.

"May I have one of these to remember the day—and you?" he asked, pointing to the oleanders.

"I think not," Gracia, with undue gravity, replied. "You shouldn't need a reminder."

The touch of—as it seemed to him—coquetry sat oddly on Gracia. Silence fell between them, for Standford having so much to say, could find no words.

Teased by the remembrance of Botswick's accusations, Gracia was trying to analyze her feelings toward Standford. The result was not pleasing to her pride. From the first she had admired the young Consul, whose deferential, almost humble, manner was in sharp contrast to the bold assurance of Bostwick. Now—she feared that admiration had grown to liking!

"I—I'm such a clumsy fellow, Gracia," Standford ventured, at length, "but—er—sometimes a man feels the most when he says the least. There's something I want to tell you——"

She made a quick gesture of dissent.

"Don't!" she said, in a low, pained tone.

Standford looked at Gracia. A moment of dazed incredulity, a second look, and his winged love lay in the dust of humiliation.

"Shall we join the others" he said, quietly.

II.

In the "Land of Afternoon" night quickly follows the decline of day. There is no lingering twilight, no gradual unfolding of the curtain of darkness. The moon hangs out her silver lamp, and under the magic rays the most commonplace objects take on a touch of beauty.

The consulate dance began early. A score of young people, the overflow of the heated sala, had sought the palm-lined corredor and open patio, finding it cooler without. The atmosphere was close, oppressive. Odors known only to the tropics—perfumes, countless, nameless, the dank smell of decaying things that yesterday had been leaf and blossom, the heavy fragrance of groves already whitening for the golden harvest—burdened the air.

In the purple Mexican sky the moon burned brightly. The paved space about the patio fountain was as light as day; and Japanese lanterns, swinging in graceful curves from palm to palm, illumined the shadowed corredor. On a flagpole in the center of the court the Stars and Stripes flapped lazily in the soft breeze.

Standford had played the part of host with his usual graceful courtesy. Now that the dance was well under way, his absence from the sala would not be noticed.

Still in a daze from the rebuff he had received, his pride wounded, his love hurt to death, he wandered into the corredor and seated himself on a bench in a quiet corner. He wished to be alone, to think over the events of the past hours. To his great annoyance, he found that some one had preceded him. At a little distance, and screened from casual observation by an orange tree in a painted tub, was another bench. The light of a lantern, swaying from an overhanging bough, discovered the occupants of the bench to be Helen Casewell and the vice-consul, Owen Fuller.

"We must go in," said Helen. "Remember, you are not a guest, but the——"

"I remember only that I am with you," Fuller interrupted.

"Don't be foolish! Besides, it's damp out here. I shall catch my death. My hands are as cold as ice."

"Lay 'em on my heart—they'll be warm enough," Fuller muttered, recklessly.

"Look here!" Helen demanded. "If you wish to displease me seriously——"

"I look," Fuller went on. "I look into her eyes. What do I see there? I see my own image. But when I look into my heart, it is her image that I see."

Helen frowned her displeasure.

"Owen, what is the matter with you?"

"It's the salad we had for dinner," Fuller groaned.

Helen jumped up, but Fuller caught her hand and held it fast.

"Don't go!" he pleaded. "I'll be good—really, I will. Behold your Greek slave in sackcloth and ashes, with his foot on his own neck. Will it interest you to know that you are a dream in that pink——"

"Blue, baby blue."

"——blue gown? Sit down, anyway, and listen to the music. It's something of Sousa's they are playing, isn't it?"

"Sousa's!" Helen repeated, witheringly; but she sat down. "It's Schubert's Serenade."

"Wasn't that what I said? Well, no matter. What I wanted to ask you was this: What has happened to blight the bud of romance that was unfolding for our friend the Consul, and that pretty little Californian? Why do I want to know? Because, dear girl, when a man is happy"—he raised her hand and fondly kissed it—"he'd like to see others happy."

"You're aware that Mr. Bostwick is in love with Gracia? Well, he was in the same regiment with Bob Standford."

"You mean——?"

Helen nodded. "She's heard the story."

"Standford doesn't strike me as a quitter," Fuller thoughtfully pursued. "Perhaps——"

"Our favorite waltz!" cried Helen, jumping to her feet. "Come on, Owen."

In the sala the musicians were playing a melody that breathed passion and pain. Robert Standford got up from the bench and walked into the patio. He was near—yet so far—from the gay life within! He had been one of them yesterday, but now——

Against the lowered window shades the figures of the dancers were silhouetted as they whirled past. Standford stopped, with the half-formed intention of looking in to see if Gracia was dancing again with Bostwick; then went on to the great outer door, which the porter had left ajar.

If he could only, in some way, redeem himself! Gracia had liked him—at first. What could he do for her to show her that she could trust him? He leaned his hot forehead against the grating, and strove to think clearly.

The hour was late. Soon the darkness of the tropic night would lift to show the red lilies of dawn blooming on the horizon. The voices of the guests who were promenading in the corredor after the dance, roused him.

Into the circle of light cast by the lantern, swinging in the archway of the outer door, there crept a man, his face as gray and ghastly as the face of the dying. The shadow of a great fear rested upon it; and his roving eyes seemed to behold things unseen of other men. It was the major-domo of the Hacienda Buena Vista—Grant Grahame's man.

"Who wants me? What brings you here, Pedro?" Grahame made answer, coming forward.

The Mexican laid a trembling hand on Grahame's arm.

"It is viruela negra, Señor," he chattered.

Grahame was for the moment stricken dumb. The guests crowded about them. Gracia, in the foreground, stood quite near to Standford; but he had no eyes for her now.

"Not—not at Buena Vista!" Grahame stammered.

"Si, Señor. The Black Death, it is at Buena Vista."

The cold sweat gathered on Graham's brow. He mopped his face with his handkerchief and glanced helplessly about.

"You know what to do." It was the Consul who spoke. "You must send to Orizaba for doctors. Call out the rurales—there must be a cordon around the place so that the poor wretches can't escape. Who told Hawaii's Food Festivals.

FEASTS BROUGHT DOWN FROM THE PAST TO THE PRESENT.

By a Special Contributor.

THE luau, or native feast of the Hawaiians, is one of the most interesting features left the new Hawaii as a relic of a past régime, and to tourists who visit the islands for the first time, one of the most novel.

When any large delegation of people such as a Congressional party, the Southern California Editorial Association, or the Chamber of Commerce, visit Honolulu or Hilo, a big luau is usually arranged in its honor, and the members of the party are given an opportunity to partake of the many queer dishes so sacred to the kanaka palate. Some are good and some are not, but all are interesting, and until one has at least tasted of them he has not lived up to his Hawaiian opportunities.

The luau is given sometimes in a garden beneath the shade of spreading banyan or algeroba trees, or upon the broad lanai of some house or public building, or within the building itself. One of the largest I ever attended, and to me the most interesting because it was my first and held all that charm of novelty and a new experience which the subsequent ones could not have, was given in the big armory at Hilo. Hilo is the largest town on the big island of Hawaii, the port at which one lands when en route from Honolulu on the Island of Oahu to the volcano of Kilauea on Hawaii.

At the original native luau the guests always sat upon the ground and the viands were spread upon native mats or big leaves laid on the ground, but out of consideration for the American feelings and sensibilities of the guests, most of the luaus nowadays are served at rough board tables, and the guests are allowed the luxury of chairs. Knives, forks and spoons, however, are tabu, and one is expected to eat with his fingers in true native fashion.

At the memorable Hilo luau I attended, long tables, seating several hundred, were spread the entire length of the armory hall, and in lieu of table cloths, the mammoth leaves of the ti plant and banana were used as covering. Broad-leafed ferns were also laid across the tables, down the center of which were arranged mounds of native fruits—alligator or avacado pears, papaia, mangoes, bananas, pineapples, red, glossy-skinned mountain apples—ohias as they are called—sour sops, the fruit that looks so much alive you feel as if you had to kill it to eat it; island grapes, water lemons (or the fruit of the passion flower,) oranges and cocoanuts.

At each place was a calabash, or poi bowl, made from the polished shell of the cocoanut, and this receptacle held poi, the chief native food. This poi is made from the root of the taro plant, which is first boiled, then pounded fine and moistened with water, and is then allowed to ferment. The ordinary poi is of a bluish-white color, but there is a more rare kind known as royal poi which is terra cotta colored, the taro from which it is made being more difficult to obtain. Formerly it was tabu to all save those having royal blood in their veins, but now any one who can obtain it is privileged to eat it. Here again a compromise was effected between native custom and American prejudice, for the real Hawaiian way is to serve the poi in one great calabash of koa or kou wood, each dipping his fingers into the bowl. There is one-fingered poi, two-fingered poi, and three-fingered poi, and it takes but little practice to become proficient in the art of poi eating. One dips his finger in the soft, pasty concoction, gives it a twist, and with a dexterous turn of his wrist lifts it quickly to his mouth. If he is so unfortunate as to spill any en route, he has not learned the art, for the well-trained poi eater never loses a drop of his precious food in transit any more than does the soda-water-fountain drink mixer when he is performing his wonderful feats. It is indeed a ludicrous sight to behold dignified lawyers and judges on the bench; M.D.'s and LL.D's, D.D.'s, and Ph.D.'s; society leaders and college professors, putting their fingers into the sticky poi and eating it with rueful countenances. The love of poi, like that of olives, is an acquired taste, and some never acquire it.

But there were many things on the menu for which one did not have to acquire a relish. There was delicious mullet, one of the best native fishes, baked in ti leaves; there was rich-flavored suckling pig roasted in the ground; bread fruit baked in imu and tasting like a rich baked sweet potato with a pungent flavor and odor added for good measure; there was a ragout of chicken and cocoanut fit for the gods themselves, and a delicious cocoanut pudding cut in slices and served cold like cold plum pudding. There were crabs à la Hawaii, dried raw fish, squid with cocoanut, baked sweet potato made after a native recipe, taro-top greens cooked with bits of pork and called "luau;" there was sugarcane split fine, heads of fish served in ti leaves, a kind of leaf which gives a flavor something like that of the bay leaf when cooked with meat. There were ground kukui nuts served with salt crystals as a relish. At each place was a young cocoanut filled with its own fresh milk, and when one had drunk the transparent milk which is sweet and contains a slight tang like that in carbonated water, he enjoyed the experience of scooping out the fresh young cocoanut meat which is quite different from the hardened nut of commerce.

None of the food save the chicken and pig was served in dishes, but lay on leaves and was eaten with the fingers. The cocoanut pudding, which was the best thing served, was made, a native told me, of taro root boiled and pounded, and cocoanut cream, the whole moistened with the milk of the young cocoanut and then baked under ground in the luau pit with the pig, chicken and bread fruit.

According to the Hawaiian custom, over each chair was thrown a lei of the royal ilima blossoms of golden yellow, intertwined with a lei of maile, the glossy-leafed vine which is known as the Hawaiian smilax.

After all had taken their places, a number of buxom wahines (Hawaiian women) clad in holokus—long flowing robes of the genus Mother Hubbard—and wearing gay leis of carnations, ilima, plumeria, or daisies about their necks, passed about the tables with shallow basins of water in which the fragrant leaves of the maile had been dropped. Each person present, according to the native custom, dipped his hands in the basin and dried them upon the towel passed with this coöperative finger bowl. By the time we had partaken of this novel feast we wished that the finger bowl might be passed again, as there seemed more need for its use at the end of the feast than at the beginning!

That we might remember afterward all the strange concoctions of which we had eaten (or not eaten, according to our daring,) menu cards were provided, each bearing the Hawaiian names of the interesting viands and their English translations. At the top of each card were these hospitable verses:

"E hea i ke kanaka a homo maloko, E hanai ai a hewa ka waha," which, being translated, means:

"Call to the man to come in,
And eat till his mouth is estopt."

The menu was as follows:

nut flavor to the sauce, which is much liked by all who have tasted it.

A luau would not be complete without a hula, these native dances usually following the ancient luaus. In the early days the dancing girls wore grass skirts of abbreviated length, anklets of flowers, and leis of bright flowers about their necks, and caught in their coarse black hair which was allowed to hang unconfined over their bare shoulders. Now, however, the old-fashioned hula is not publicly given, and when the girls dance they do so properly clothed, usually wearing a short-skirted, low-necked costume of green and yellow with many leis strung about their necks.

The hula is a muscle dance, and is done to the weird intoning of an old man who beats time on a hollow gourd, or plays the tune upon the nose pipe, a slender, reed-like pipe of bamboo upon which some of the old Hawaiians can play marvelous tunes or imitate each steamer's whistle at will.

Another interesting food festival of the Hawaiians is the hookupu, or fruit-gift offering made to royalty or other distinguished personages. It is an ancient custom of old Hawaii that when the people wish to honor one highly, gifts of fruit, sugarcane and other things are brought by the people of all the islands and laid at the feet of the one to be honored. The rich bring of their plenty, the poor of their little—everybody brings something. One of these hokupus was arranged in honor of the Atlantic fleet on its visit last summer to Hawaii, and greatly delighted the officers and men of the fleet. Previous to this hookupu, the last one given was in honor of Admiral Brown when he brought the body of the late King Kalakaua from San Francisco several years ago.

For the fleet hookupu offerings were sent from the islands of Oahu, Hawaii, Maui and Kauai, and the scene presented at the dock was an interesting and novel one. A great barge was decorated with stalks of banana plant, cocoanut palms, with clusters of cocoanuts still attached. The floor of the barge was covered with green rushes and upon these were arranged great piles of rich brown cocoanuts, hundreds of bunches and "gangs" of bananas, piles of sugarcane, cut in convenient lengths to nibble, boxes of glowing pineapples fragrant and ripe, avacado pears, papaias and mangoes. The list included twenty-five tons of pineapples, one pine for each man in the fleet; 900 bunches of bananas, five tons of sugarcane; 5000 fresh cocoanuts, besides the oranges, lemons, and other fruits in lesser quantities. In addition to the tons of fruit sent out to the ships, several tons which had spoiled while waiting delivery at the docks, had to be thrown overboard, making the fishes feel no doubt as if they were receiving a hookupu as well.

Though the custom of the old-time hookupu has almost disappeared, the spirit of the hookupu remains and visitors who have come as strangers to the gates of the Sunshine Islands always leave with an "Aloha" in their hearts for the big-hearted, hospitable people who live in the land of the Aloha.

GRACE HORTENSE TOWER.

'TIS FAIREST OF EARTH'S EMBLEMS.

'Tis fairest of earth's emblems,
The flag we call our own,
The pride of every freeman,
The treasure of his home,—
Whose splendors ever glowing,
Columbia's hour of need,
To the songs of their fathers
A mighty host shall lead.

What joy to see it flying,
A wondrous vision fair,
Our hearts the faster beating,
Our cheers upon the air!
From mountain and from valley,
From every dale and dell,
Acclaim the sons of freedom,
The flag they love so well.

The glories of the heroes
Who sacred made each fold
Shall be again repeated,
Shall be again retold.
Though wild the roaring battle,
And fierce the foeman's cry,
Unlowered and unsullied
That standard still shall fly.

A Curious Tomb.

One of the most curious tombs in the United Kingdom is in County Wexford. In it is laid the body of one of that curious body—the Resurrectionists. One portion of the tomb is a furnished chamber, with a table and a few chairs. On the table will be found at any time a dainty meal of considerable dimensions, with a fowl, a ham, a leg of mutton, and the necessary drinkables. The departed Resurrectionist provides by his will that this meal shall be laid each fortnight, and "if the meal is untouched in the meantime, it shall be given to the poor and a fresh meal laid." So far the meal has been untouched, though eerie rumors spread round the district from time to time that in spirit form the gentleman has appeared and has enjoyed his meal. Curious stories are told of poor people to whom the ham or the leg of mutton has been given being awakened in the night by strange rappings on their doors and windows, and even by demands in a grim voice for a portion of the food which has been distributed. As a consequence, and probably for another sad reason, it has come to be the practice to consume the food immediately it is brought home. It is the only way to counteract the envy of the spirit, with whom, apparently, hunger is constantly present.—[Dundee Advertiser.

Cage-Birds in America.

WHAT KINDS WE IMPORT AND WHERE THEY COME FROM.

By a Special Contributor.

FEW displays more quickly attract a bunch of sidewalk saunterers than an exhibition of live stock behind the windows of a store. It may be fox terrier puppies, or chicks just out of the shell—"such cute little things"—or, more interesting still, a flock of foreign birds. But of the people who gaze admiringly at the feathered immigrants how many have any notion whence they come or by what means they are procured?

The natural migration of birds is unrestricted. Not being an air power, as yet, we cannot hinder the passage across our frontiers of continental migrants from the Arctic regions or Mexico, but the importation, the assisted immigration of birds, is subject to regulations as strict as those which govern human immigrants. It is not a concern of the customhouse, for birds are on the free list. But whether desired for public purposes or private trade, to add to the game fauna of a State or sell to the bird fancier, no species can now be imported without a permit from the Department of Agriculture.

This regulation is of recent origin. Formerly the public could send for any bird they fancied. Away back in the eighteen-fifties a craze developed for acclimatizing sparrows from England. Unfortunately, the house, not the hedge sparrow, was selected, and imported in batches of a thousand at a time into Atlantic Coast ports. As a result, this undesirable bird citizen is now firmly established in most towns and threatens to occupy Southern California building sites. Experience with the English sparrow proved the necessity for checking importations. The door is now closed against any kind of bird that is likely, if set free, to become a public nuisance.

That department of Secretary Wilson's bureau which is concerned with importations of live stock is called the Biological Survey. Birds are only a side issue in its multifarious duties. From the reports of its surveyors may be gathered many facts and figures that throw a light upon the needs and tastes of the American people as regards domesticated birds.

Nearly a third of a million feathered immigrants were brought over in the year ending with June, 1906. The totals showed an increase of 37 per cent. over the figures for the year 1902. These were prosperous times and, the people having plenty of spending money, the traffic in cage birds increased with that in other fancy articles. But it is only of recent years that it has attained to considerable proportions.

Cage birds come to our shores from all quarters of the globe. Africa sends plumage birds, but no singers; Australia cockatoos, love birds, diamond sparrows, and a finch of surpassing beauty. Tropical America is the chief source of supply of the green talking parrot. Of oriental birds the favorites with importers are Java sparrows, Japanese robins—one of the few songsters Japan can boast of—and minas, which are talking starlings from India. Among the European birds that are licensed to enter, the most important are gold finches, linnets, bull finches, song thrushes, skylarks, and those universal favorites, canaries.

The principal ports of entry are New York and Philadelphia. Comparatively few birds come in by way of Seattle and San Francisco, except parrots from Mexico, and these are forecastle passengers, the purchases of thrifty sailors which they sell again when they are paid off. But like all merchandise, cage birds follow well-worn and defined lines of traffic. American importers obtain their consignments in most cases from the wholesale dealers and breeders in London and Hamburg, which cities are the old-established headquarters of the trade in pet birds. The art of breeding and rearing strange birds in captivity has long been practised in Europe, whereas in this country it has not received much attention.

Cage birds in transit across the Atlantic are treated more like passengers than freight. The crates or cages in which canaries travel are moveable cabins. These are arranged with a careful regard to lighting and ventilation in long tiers one above the other. At regular intervals the tiers are taken down and rearranged in order that in rotation each feathered passenger may enjoy the fresh air of an outside berth. High-priced specially-trained singers may travel 'de luxe,' like opera stars, in a cabin by themselves. Not being subject to seasickness, the cage birds carried in a leviathan cargo vessel, like the Celtic, travel more comfortably than the human immigrants in a crowded steerage. It pays to keep such a valuable cargo as fancy birds in good health and bright feather. As an example of the wrong method, one might point to the herding close together in a dark and stuffy hold of the gray parrots in transit from West Africa to Liverpool. They are bought from the natives for a trifle, dumped aboard, and only the strongest survive. Even these are short-lived, according to Dr. Greene, an English physician and bird fancier, having contracted disease due to overcrowding. Hence the bird has depreciated as a pet, although it is one of the best whistlers and talkers. People are shy of paying a long price for a bird that may act like the gazelle in the old song, and die just when the family has got to know him well.

The habits of birds curiously influence the cost of their transportation and eventually their price to the buyer. The more cubic space they take up, the higher their freight, and some quarrelsome finches require lots of elbow room, being ready to peck the eyes out of a strange cabin mate. On the other hand, the docile love birds, like company; and many pairs of them will voyage together in a unity more than Christian within the bars of one huge crate.

The birds we import may be broadly classified into song birds, plumage birds, and mimics. It is a question of taste. Some people like a singer in the home, some a living picture, others an amusing pet like a talking parrot. Polly really stands in a class by itself, something more than a bird. With its air of subdued intelligence, it is quite as good a listener as a talker, and, like Falstaff, is not only witty itself, but a source of wit in others. What a number of funny stories, true or otherwise, center round the apt remarks of a domestic parrot. These traits make the parrot the only rival of the canary for the premiership in popularity. We import altogether some 200 different species of birds, mostly canaries. Five times as many of these songsters come in as of all the other birds together.

We receive them from Germany in batches of a thousand when trade is most lively, which happens at the Christmas season. For the tame canary is a European by naturalization. It would be as idle to order a singer from the Canary Islands, where they were discovered some 300 years ago, as to send to Turkey for a Thanksgiving bird. The canary has varied under domestication to a considerable extent, but not so much as the pigeon, celebrated by Darwin in his origin of species. Some odd forms, however, have developed, which the original wild canaries would hardly recognize as belonging to their family. There is a crested kind, known as the Norwich bird, and a great big fellow, called the Lancashire "coppy," quite a giant for a canary bird. But these are seldom seen on this side of the Atlantic. What the American trade calls for is a plain bird, without any eccentric shape or fancy feathers, pure yellow and a good singer.

Such birds are raised in great numbers at the little burg of St. Andreas, situated in the Harz Mountains of North Germany. It is a household industry, carried on by the peasants in their own homes. Some years back, a calculating German figured that it was worth $300,000 a year to the inhabitants of St. Andreasburg, which is as devoted to the canary as Petaluma to the American chicken. With years of experience behind them, the Harz Mountain breeders are experts in the art of rearing and training singers. Their training methods are simple enough. They rely upon the bird's natural tendency to imitation and rivalry. The sound of another bird singing is the stimulus that sets the youngster's vocal chords in action. But they are careful to give them the best of company and example, selecting as singing tutors the males with the most perfect song, which, out of compliment to a famous Italian tenor, are called Campaninis. Nightingales, too, are used for the purpose of evoking the latest musical talents of canaries. A bird with a powerful voice but no discretion in using it is not so desirable a home pet as one that has a song both rich and sweet. Birds so trained are called in the trade "rollers," and are worth at wholesale from $24 to $36 a dozen, or twice as much as the common singer.

Our green talking parrots come from the hot countries south of the frontier, where the woods are full of them. Most towns in tropical America have a large parrot population, and at sundown the streets in the poorer quarters resound with the cry of "loro," "loro," which is the untrained bird's natural call, and the Spanish word for parrot. The birds are usually taken as nestlings by native collectors. The best green talker is the Amazon, a kind widely distributed in Brazil and Guiana; it is known by its head color, which may be entirely yellow, or distinguished by a few red or blue feathers.

Aside from canaries and parrots, the remainder of our importations are mainly from the finch and sparrow families. For there are sparrows which the Agricultural Department licenses as unobjectionable. Of such is the Java sparrow, a bird of dark blue or sometimes white plumage, which is known in Asia as the paddy bird, from its frequenting the rice or paddy fields. Also the diamond sparrow, a small Australian bird of speckled plumage with a peculiar wailing cry. A considerable number of the handsome "cordon-bleus," or crimson-eared wax bills of Africa, are imported. The finch tribe furnishes us with a number of beautiful plumage birds. Some are quite well known. European gold finches, for example, of which we receive some 5000 annually; and the English bull finch, the piping "bully," which is sometimes trained to draw water and do other tricks. Less well-known are the zebra finches of Australia, which are remarkably spotted with purple, and the extremely beautiful Lady Gould finch from the same continent. No cage bird has brighter plumage, its feathers carry every color in the spectrum, but it is rather difficult to keep, and consequently expensive.

Seeing that we import a considerable number of exotic species that have been raised in captivity, one is inclined to ask the question: 'Cannot we breed some of these foreign species in this country?' According to the report of the Biological Survey, the breeding of such birds, while carried on to some extent, has not as yet attained to the dignity of being an infant industry. Mr. Oldys thinks that a need exists for supplying the market with birds bred in America. The traffic in native species, it seems, has ceased owing to adverse legislation. This has stimulated the importation of foreign kinds and would seem to encourage breeders to raise them here. Not all birds indeed will mate and lay in captivity. Canaries, of course, are as domestic as ordinary chickens. But of the other imported kinds only the Java sparrows, zebra finches, and love birds are said to breed readily in aviaries. But canaries are most in demand, and these birds are especially recommended to the attention of the American breeder. We have all sorts of live-stock ranches in California: frog ranches, chicken ranches. Why not a canary ranch? It would be a novelty.

Chet McRae.

A MAN WHO WAS SLOW TO ANGER AND GREAT TO FORGIVE.

By a Special Contributor.

"WELL, well!" remarked Jackson, laying down his paper and surveying me with a benignant smile.

"What's the row?" I asked, turning at his muttered ejaculation.

"Row? No row—only McRae. I always knew he'd win out," said the speaker with a broad grin.

"McRae?" I ventured. "Who in the great, wide world is McRae?"

"Henry Severin Harding," said Jackson emphatically, scrutinizing me with a look of austere severity, "do you mean to tell me! Is it possible that you don't know Chet McRae?" He stopped and took a deep breath, as if astounded at my ignorance.

"'Pon my word and honor," I solemnly swore, crossing myself. "Who is he?"

"Chet McRae?" resumed Jackson, idly playing with his lieutenant's epaulet. "Why, he's the greatest ever, the pride of our camp in the Philippines, the slow to anger and heaper of coals of fire. For a brave and meek saint I never saw the equal of Chet McRae. A fellow who'll stand what he did, and then come very near giving up his ticket for life's voyage for his persecutors, deserves a place in heaven—cushion seat—right up near the throne."

"Must have done something extra to deserve such extreme reward," I remarked, trying to draw him out.

"Done something extra! There isn't one man in a thousand—in a hundred thousand—who would do what he did out there amongst the swamps in the hottest part of the Philippines. A hero isn't the name to call him. Webster with all of his leather-bound dictionaries hasn't had enough experience in the use of adjectives to describe Chet McRae."

The eulogy of Jackson had awakened my curiosity. "Is there a story in connection with this meek, humble, brave saint whom even Webster can't describe?" I always enjoyed Jackson's tales of his Philippine campaigning—every one in camp did, for that matter.

"Not much of a story—just a little incident. Tell it if you want to listen."

I wanted to listen, and said so. A few of the boys gathered round the door of the tent as soon as it was announced to the loungers of the camp that Jackson had got wound up. After a preliminary of lighting his pipe and getting comfortably established, he began.

"You see, we had been out in the brush and swamp country for over a month, and no results. Aguinaldo had disappeared, it seemed, and was nowhere to be found, or a blamed native, either. So we concluded they had evaporated, and wanted to get back to civilization; but orders were orders, and we were to stay there until we had scrapped the Philipps.

"Being as we had nothing to do but sit around and wait for the yellow devils to attack us, because it was about as good to chase a will-o'-the-wisp as to chase them Philipps, we naturally tidied up the camp and started a round of society life—high society, mind you. Everybody had a part, and putting all together, we could get up as good a pink tea, served in tin cups, or full-dress ball, in undress uniforms, if they are allowable in high society—as Cornelius Astor Vanderbilt.

"The social lion of the camp was Baird, and he was quite a go among the boys; although somehow or other I could never fancy him. However, he had the society business down pat, and that was what the boys were concerned with. As I said, everybody helped the good cause along. Saying everybody excludes one fellow, Chester McRae.

"He was the mystery of the camp. I reckon that more guesses were made concerning that fellow, and his parents, and etcetry, than were ever made about any one—St. Patrick and the snakes included. All the boys had liked him at sight; but he was so confounded odd, and acted so queer, that they kind of turned against him. There were all kinds of theories about how he happened to join the army. The general idea, which I believe was advanced by Baird, was that he had murdered some one or other out in Arizony, and had to get out on account of the judge being a square man, and being that he didn't have but just enough iron dollars to get his sentence reduced from hanging to a lifer. That was only one theory. They had conjectured. They had woven more fanciful tales about that red-headed, freckled-faced, six-footed piece of humanity than any bard had ever sung of noble knights in the brick castles of the medivul ages. They would have asked him; but none of the boys would 'bell the cat,' as it were, and try as they would they couldn't approach the boundary line of his history in conversation. They would talk for hours on every conceivable subject, and McRae was more than their equal. There wasn't a durned subject, from the Panama Canal to George Ade's latest play, that he couldn't discuss enough to make rings about Joe Fullard, the best talker in the camp; but whenever anybody attempted to probe for facts concerning the mysterious history of Chester McRae, Esq., they would immediately run onto a rock of Gibraltar, armed with thirteen-inch popguns of the latest pattern; and they could have as profitably attacked Morro Castle with a six-shooter for all the good they accomplished. Well, taken from all views, Chester McRae was a puzzle. He seemed to be a bundle of contradictory facts from his head of red hair to his number tens, which served as a foundation for his massive body. It was no wonder that we boys thought he was a puzzle; and our sentiments were all voiced by Joe Fullard when he said:

"'That air fellow McRae is the darndest five-shot, smokeless, repeatin' and ejectin' mystery I ever see.'

"The more they guessed, the more they became confused, so they decided to give it up as a bad job, with no pay; but as he was no hand at anything except soldiering—he was a good fighter—he was kind of ostracized by the bunch.

"Pretty soon he became more unpopular than ever, on account of a scrap he had with Baird. It was a shame the way Baird took every chance possible to pick on him. Must have had some grudge, I decided; and it culminated in a row.

"All the boys, excepting the sentinels—poor fellows!—were down at the river to take their usual duck; and I can tell you fellows we needed it. You can't begin to imagine what a day in the Philippine swamps is unless you've been there. The thermometer would forget to stop almost every day, and run clear up to the regions of 130 or thereabouts. The sweat just ran in streams, until, as Mike Meriton said, we bathed to keep dry. That day was especially hot. The thermometer had been resting day before, and took an extra climb to catch up, so down to the river we trooped, in undress parade, and jumped in.

"We kicked around and cut up as much fuss at our little swim as kids out of school. Baird had rigged up a diving board; he was the fancy diver of the crowd, Baird was. Always stood on the end of the board with his head thrown back and chest pushed out, so that he reminded me of a strong man I once saw at a circus. The board was held down at one end by a big stone, but when anybody took a plunge he had to get one of the spectators to stand on the end of the plank to help out the stone. No one knew just how it happened, but suddenly we heard a smack, and saw Baird going into the water, back down, feet up in the air, and the stone and McRae rolling along the ground like a pair of twin armadillos.

"Baird came up sputtering, and hopping mad clear through. He was ready to wipe the earth with everybody in general and McRae in particular; and as soon as he got the water out of his mouth and caught his breath, he said so—said it with great emphasis, and embellished it with forcible adjectives to give his declarations a solemn impression. The air was blue, and there was a faint smell of brimstone for a moment. He went for McRae, the cause of all the trouble, and would have put his threats into execution, but we jumped on him so as to give his blood a chance to cool.

"Poor McRae stood like a great, overgrown and extremely frightened puppy, looking the very elements of confusion. When Baird began to go for him, he appeared rather ill-at-ease, and he looked mighty relieved when we stopped that worthy in his inglorious pursuit. We held the flustrated fancy diver for a few minutes, and then, concluding that he was cooled off sufficiently, released our hold. He jumped to his feet, and, walking over to McRae, stood before him with his hands on his hips and a curled lip. McRae stood as calm as a clam, although he was a little pale in the gills, and returned the look with a steady stare. We gathered around to see the fun. All at once Baird put on the cussing record and turned the lever—I can hear him yet;" and Jackson smiled at the recollection, then resumed. We jumped at the sudden explosion of choice expletives with which he started, not knowing, for the moment, that they belonged to his story.

"'You —— idiot!' began Baird, his anger seeming to go up by bounds, 'why the — —didn't you hold onto that board? You six-footed ninny. For 10 cents I'd lick you! I'd commit suicide on you with my little finger! Why did you do it? Answer me, you stammering dunce!'

"Poor McRae protested that he had slipped, and seemed extremely confused over the whole business. With that, Baird picked up a dry leaf and put it on his shoulder for a chip. Of course we all expected to see some of the real thing, and I had picked out a referee; but McRae simply turned and walked toward the camp, a prolonged hiss following his big, hulking form.

"As a matter of fact, we were all on needle points at McRae after then. A man who'd turn off a straight challenge like that! Gad, man! why, that broke the record of our camp! We'd pulled off some half-dozen scraps, and no fooling; and then to think of a private having the audacity to disappoint the whole bunch—when he said he was innocent, at that. He was cut. Cut, I say, and cut dead. No one would say a single, solitary word to his scared-out nibs. Reminds me of the poem which goes like this:

'Alone in the dreary, pitiless world,
All day I wander to and fro,' and etcetry. I almost pitied him, but forbade such disloyalty to my company.

"A few days later we were jumped by Aguinaldo and his bunch. 'Twas certainly a hot fight in every sense of the word—weather and fighting. We lay for six hours out under the boiling sun. It makes my head ache to think of it. That day went by like a long nightmare. I seemed to be dazed. First, there'd be a pop of a rifle here and there in the bush, and then a whole volley, until the air was full of smoke. (The government had given us a bunch of these '95 Winchester smokers.) The natives would rush out with their short bolos—going to exterminate anything and everything. We'd let them come pretty near before we fired, and then they'd melt. Kept it up from 11 in the morning till 5 at night, when the enemy retreated, leaving all their dead and wounded—the miserable skunks! People who will go off and leave wounded comrades aren't fit to be served up in boiled stew, à la Francais style." Jackson bristled with indignation. He was very observant of the fine points of war.

"When we called the roll that night, and took account of injuries received, we found three killed, among them Jack Holland, the captain; and two missing, Baird and McRae. Of course, the significance of both Baird and McRae having disappeared awakened much comment, but no one knew for certain. Some one had seen Baird captured. Where McRae was, not one could tell. However, we didn't miss him much; it was Baird's capture that caused the sore hearts.

"The funeral ceremonies of Holland came off next day. Poor old chap!—was one of my best friends. I draped the flag over the rude coffin our cook had made from rough pine boards, and shed tears for the first time in my life. Yes, you may doubt it; but even Tom Jackson, the hardest-hearted lieutenant in the United States Army, shed tears at the sight of Jack Holland, our brave and dashing captain, laid out there so calm and quiet. He had gone to the land where all is peace. The ceremonies were 'most over, and we were just going to fire the salute over his grave, when a man stalked out of the brush at the edge of the clearing, reeling like a drunken man, and singing a drinking song at the top of his voice. He hushed at the sight of us, all assembled with our hats off, and advanced to the camp. The doctor took him in custody, and after burying the dead, we turned our attention to the new arrival and hastened to the hospital tent.

"The man was covered with mud and dried blood; his hair was plastered with the same; his face was all scratched; but his suit, torn and bedraggled, was the uniform of the United States army, and that was what struck us. He was Baird, and out of his head. We were joyful at his return, but also sorrowful. He raved, but would often assume a comical seriousness in his delirium.

"'The Philipps,' he said, sitting up and pointing at the small wounds in his head, 'they stuck forks into me to roast me, and then killed me. Yes, killed me dead and ate me with clam juice and oyster crackers—a nice fat Yankee.' And he laughed heartily. We laughed solemnly, yet were filled with pity at his words; but the Doc soon fixed him up and gave him a sleepy drop of something to put him in the land of Nod.

"The next morning he was sane, but rather weak. He had been captured, he said, and carried off to a little town some thirty miles away—quaint little dump of a place, according to his description—and tied to a post in the square as a kind of side-show curiosity. Even the old women had come and poked forks into him to see if he was a real, live Yankee. Then we knew the cause of his queer talk the night before. It seemed as if the Philipp general had put him at night for safe keeping in a little apartment of the town hall; and that he had aroused the town by ringing the bell by the rope which happened to hang in the corner, and escaped in the confusion, after getting a few knocks on the head by the jailor. Then he had forced a way to camp through underbrush and marshes, until he had gone crazy in despair of reaching it. It was after he had given up hope and lost reason that he stumbled upon the camp.

"His story was very dramatic, and he told it pathetically, until we began to regard him as a veritable hero. Some of the boys would have worshipped him. He was rather puffed up by this new attention, and revised his version of the escape, until I began to wonder if he would stop at having killed off all the Philipps, but would rather follow them to Hades to see that the work was completed in good style.

"That night, as I was keeping guard, I saw a strange object at the edge of the clearing. It moved now and then like a land alligator, and lay huddled up in a heap. I called Stevenson, and pointed out the creature. He looked for a long time. 'That's blamed queer,' he remarked after a thorough view.

"'What?' I asked.

"'Why, the darned thing's got clothes on,' he answered.

"'A man!' we both said in one breath, and started for him.

"It was a man. That is, the body of a man, for he seemed at first to be dead. On first sight, we didn't recognize him; then we noticed a few tufts of red hair stuck out here and there through the plastering of mud. We looked at each other for a moment, the same word on our tongues, 'McRae!' McRae he was, but what a wreck as compared to the McRae who had disappeared two days before! Man, if he had been the greatest scoundrel the world has ever seen, if he had murders to his credit by the dozen, I would have pitied him in that plight. His right leg was broken by a shot from one of those dirty Mausers, and a large gash was festering on his breast; his head was one mass of scratches; and the mosquitoes were flying round and round in swarms and sucking the blood from the wounds. Now and then he would moan half-heartedly, as if exhausted. Suddenly he raised his clenched hands and shrieked:

"'In the name of the merciful Father, give me water—for mercy's sake!' and then collapsed.

"'McRae,' we said, but he did not notice us. He was delirious—far more so than Baird had been.

"We picked him up, and packed him to the camp. I went for the doctor and brought him back in a minute, trying to get him to promise to save McRae.

"'See here, Doc,' said I, 'you've got to save that man.'

"'I'll do my best,' he replied, and set about it. No sleeping dose was strong enough for McRae, and he kept on raving. The more medicine Doc gave him, the more he seemed to need.

"'I'm afraid he had one too many,' said the dispenser of medicine, looking at the gaping wound with its grewsome festering. 'Why, that wound alone is enough to put him out of business.' But he did his utmost. Poor McRae certainly was near the narrow gates. He talked incessantly in his delirium, but everything was rather incoherent.

"'Not guilty,' he would plead, 'I swear!' And then suddenly changing his mood, 'Run, the Philipps! Run, you fool! I'll look out for myself! Run, I say. Run for Effie's sake. Do you hear?'

"He would go on like that for hours at a stretch, talking about things we never thought of, especially cowboys and cattle and Mexicans, until Baird, who was in a cot near by, would go wild at the continual raving and tremble all over. He begged to be put in another tent, and the next morning he was transferred. The morning after the moving of Baird, I happened to visit his tent. No one else was there. Baird was pale and looked pretty sick.

"'Come here,' he beckoned, 'I want to talk to you.'

"'Go on,' I said; and he began, his mouth working in gentle paroxysms at frequent intervals."

As Jackson repeated the story which Baird had told him, he seemed to recall each minute part—each sentence—and he entered into the spirit of the theme, until we could almost see poor, humiliated Baird before us, telling the story of a ruined life with pathetic and dramatic force. Jackson certainly was a genius.

"'Perhaps you aren't aware that McRae and I were once friends,' he began. 'Well, we were, and true friends, at that. We lived together out on a cattle ranch in Arizona, and for years we never saw a thing excepting sage brush, fiery-eyed steers and Mexican greasers. We were friends. Friends, I say. Not what the world calls friends. True friends—from the bottom of our hearts.' He stopped for a moment, and I gasped as the plot thickened in one way and unraveled in the other.

"'We lived together,' he went on, 'cooked together, slept together, thought together. One's grief was the other's, and if one was joyful the other was overjoyed. Nothing entered the life of one of us that did not enter into the life of the other. Those were days! Life was joyous then—one long, continued dream.'

"His pale face lighted up at the memory of those times, and then darkened as he said: 'But Effie came. She came to live out on the ranch, for her health. O God! All my life has been ruined by that one girl. Yet I was powerless. Her beauty entranced me; held me like a captive, bound in chains as fine as spider webs, yet strong as steel. Her wit and versatility fascinated me and wove a subtle chain over my soul. I must succumb, and I did. But McRae also loved her, loved her fully as much as I did; and, what was more, she loved him. Why she chose that slow, red-headed piece of humanity is still a mystery to me; and it stung me to the quick to think she had chosen him instead of me. I was jealous. The same hatred that prompted Judas Iscariot filled my soul. May God forgive me! I plotted his downfall. Yes, plotted the ruin of my only true friend, my childhood friend—my friend who had stuck to me through thick and thin.' The tears were coursing down the ashen cheeks of the miserable man, and his voice trembled. 'Yes, coolly and diabolically, running over all the different ways to find one more cruel than the rest. My chance came and I seized it. A Mexican, a dirty greaser, was killed by a cowboy on the ranch. I bribed the murderer, and together we laid the blame on McRae. Circumstances upheld our testimony. I believe the Evil One aided us. We could have convicted him had he not fled.

"'Effie was indignant and heartbroken that he had been a murderer, and would not believe it until we drew such an imaginary net of evidence around him that she was forced to do so. I received the love that rightfully belonged to——' I couldn't stand it any longer. To think of poor McRae being cheated and wronged like that! My blood was hot.

"'You dirty scoundrel!' I began; but Baird said resignedly as if he did not care for man or devil then:

"'Wait. The worst is yet to come.' I curbed my spirit as best I could.

"'Where he went I did not know. The war broke out, and Effie promised that if I enlisted she would marry me when I came back. God knows that I loved Effie. Perhaps He may forgive me. I would gladly have died for her, so I went. But my crimes followed me. The first man I saw after I arrived at the Philippines was McRae, and he has been with me ever since. Never a word has he spoken about my crime. I trembled daily for an exposure that did not come. I treated him shamefully. Then the fight with Aguinaldo threw us together.

"'We were fighting a little from the main body, trying to pick them off one by one, when a detached band of natives stumbled upon us. McRae escaped, but I was seized and my hands bound. We marched the entire night. The marshes through which we went were dark and dreary, and little creeks ran in every direction. The mud oozed up to our knees, and the moccasin snakes glided around with their red tongues darting in and out. It was a veritable hell; but our guide took us through, and we camped in a clearing beyond. I lay helpless, out beneath the starry sky, and the stars seemed to twinkle for the purpose of mocking me, as they sailed above. I was mad at the thoughts that surged through my brain.

"'Toward morning I fell asleep, and was dreaming of Effie. She was holding out her arms to me, but every time I started to her, a big, grimacing Mexican would block my way. I tried again and again. It was the dead Mexican come back to mock me. I struggled, but was bound. I could hear a hollow laugh behind me; it was mocking, but every time I turned to look I could see nothing. Mockery! mockery everywhere, and I was helpless. Oh God, what a dream!' Baird's countenance was contracted in a look of horror as he spoke. I can see that look yet—it sometimes comes to me when I sleep, like a horrible nightmare.

"'Just as the Mexican was advancing on me, and I was trying to get away, and I could see the horns on his head, I heard some one say softly: "Hush, it is I, McRae," and my bonds were cut. He had followed our party to release me.

"'We fled. Through swamps and bogs we floundered, wallowing up to our waists in mud and slime. The snakes glided under our feet, threatening to bite us at any moment. We crashed through the brush and scratched ourselves fearfully. I wanted to rest, but McRae kept on, saying: "On, keep on!"

"'The natives followed us. Nearer and nearer they came. A few scattered shots and shouts of the men told us they were close on the trail. We were breathless and exhausted, and had lost the way, but McRae led the flight and kept urging me on. All at once a bullet struck him in the leg, and he fell, gashing his breast with the knife he held in his hand.

"'"On," he gasped. "For Effie's sake! Fly! Don't stop for me." I hesitated, and wanted to stay with him.

"'"For Effie's sake go on," he pleaded. "It will break her heart if you are killed." Like a coward I left him, but the cry has been ringing in my ears ever since—"For Effie's sake"—and I cannot get rid of it. I went on and on. I stumbled into bogs and pits. I lost the way, and was desperate. The mosquitoes made me mad with their everlasting torment. I remember seeing a cluster of tents in an opening before me. Then I lost my reason; the reaction was too great. I know nothing of coming into camp as you say I did, but next found myself in the hospital.

"'The devil seized hold of me. He came in an alluring form and whispered in my ear: "Why not bring honor to yourself?" and suggested the way. I yielded to temptation. I feigned delirium, and heard your low comments of pity. Even then I cursed myself. Shame on me! Why did I do it? I have asked myself again and again. I told a lie, a black, revengeful, damnable lie; and you thought I was a hero. I cursed myself inwardly, yet continually enlarged upon it. Why did I do it, and leave, so far as I knew, poor suffering McRae, dying out in the reeking swamps, while you might have rescued him?' Poor Baird was almost weeping; he clutched at the bed cover, and his fingers worked convulsively. I was dazed by what he had said.

"'Then McRae came crawling back—delirious, exhausted, almost dead. The very sight of his bruised, emaciated form sent darts of accusation through my heart. Believe me, Jackson, every drop of blood which trickled from his wounds seemed to be wrung from my veins. His wounds had lips. They cursed me. They cried out against me and my cowardice; and I heard them as plainly as if they had been living witnesses. But his ravings were far more horrible. They filled me with terror, and every word that he uttered brought me back to that scene in the woods; and then still farther back to the plains of Arizona where the unmarked grave of a low-caste Mexican peon was surrounded by imps. The imps danced around me in a ring. They pointed their fingers and scorned me. Peace! My soul cried for it, but try as I would, I could not get it. Nothing but humiliating thoughts, scorn and imaginary mockery. God of heaven! My brain reels at the thought. Then I asked to be removed from his presence. If I had not, I should have gone crazy. You know the rest.' With dramatic force the story had held my attention. He was now weeping, sobbing like a child.

"'Oh, Jackson,' he moaned, 'what shall I do?'

"I pitied the wretch before me, yet despised his infamous deeds. My heartstrings had been touched, but the tune emitted was low and foreboding.

"'Baird,' I said, looking at him in the eyes, at which he turned his face toward the wall, 'you poor, misguided fellow! I pity you; but if this story ever gets out (and it will, for McRae must get his dues,) my advice to you is to leave. I'll attend to your discharge; get out on plea of sickness, and never show your face in civilization again.' I arose and left the tent, leaving Baird in a collapse of mind. The punishment was too great for him; he sobbed.

"It was two weeks later that McRae walked out of the hospital tent, well, but weak. We were to pull up camp next day, and he was out to get a little air and recuperate as much as possible. He attended roll call for the first time in a long while, and as he answered 'Here,' in response to his name, I felt a hearty 'Thank God!' on my lips.

"Roll call was soon over, but before they had dispersed, I climbed up on a cracker barrel and told the whole story of the cowardice of Baird, of the heroic quietness of McRae, and of how the latter had saved the life of Baird and had never kicked when he lied about it. Before I was through, the men were visibly moved. A feeling of hatred for Baird was prominent in every heart, but the largest corner was reserved for a good big lump of love for our hero, our saint, our pride—Chester McRae.

"'And now, boys,' said I, raising my voice to a high pitch, 'let's give three times three, regular Yankee style, for Chet!' And they gave them with a roar.

"Now, what do you think of Chet?" said Jackson, sitting back and surveying us with the satisfactory smile of one who had proved his point. "Do you think I put extra adjectives in connection with his name?" We smiled. "But that isn't all," said Jackson, picking up the paper and handing it to me. "Read that."

All gathered around me and read the paragraph he pointed out. It was the wedding announcement of Effie McArthur and Chester McRae.

Jackson repeated his question.

"I think," said I, slowly and deliberately, "that we shall have to enlarge Webster's Unabridged." And the boys responded with a deep, hearty "Amen!"

H. W. LA DUE.

An All Black Diningroom.

Lord and Lady Drogheda have returned to Wilton Crescent at the conclusion of their honeymoon, which they took, as is the sensible modern fashion, in instalments, a visit to London being sandwiched between sojourns in Ireland and in Italy. Lady Drogheda is at present interested in the finishing touches required by her new house, which is to be unlike any other in London.

A wonderful all-black dining-room is one of its features, and although the effect in daylight may be rather somber, it is distinctly artistic and original in the soft glowing, carefully-arranged electric lights.—[M.A.P.

THE TANK SCRAP AT PURDUE.

WHOLESALE WRESTLING MATCH THAT SOMETIMES LASTS ALL NIGHT.

Of all the rushes and fights with which freshmen and sophomores the country over battle for supremacy perhaps the most original is the tank scrap at Purdue University. It takes place at the opening of the college year, and is the only event of its kind indulged in by the two classes. The one scrap is decisive.

It always takes place at night, says the Wide World Magazine, and instead of the usual flag or color rusa of other colleges, this one takes the form of a tying contest or mimic war, in which each army tries to make a prisoner of the other.

A better comparison would be a great combined wrestling match, where each contestant tries to throw and bind his opponent, thus putting him out of the contest. It is conducted in much the same manner as the athletic games, there being rules to govern every point of the contest.

The scrap is for the honor of painting the class numeral on the city water tank, the winning class being allowed to paint its sign manual on the tank, where it remains until the next year.

The tank is situated on a hill a mile from the university. It is a very prominent feature of the landscape, and is visible for several miles, so that when a class places its numeral on the side facing the campus and the city it can be seen by thousands of people.

The scrap always takes place in a small field surrounding the tank; and although the ground is on a hillside and very rough and broken it seems to serve very admirably for the purpose. The tank site is private property, but the company owning it has turned it over to the students. Even when the tank is repainted, the numeral is left undisturbed.

In the autumn of 1901 the struggle lasted the entire night, and both classes withdrew just before sunrise because many of the men were so completely worn out that they were unable to stand. The sophomores, however, already had their numerals on the tank.

This alone would have given them victory, for according to the rules, the class having its numeral on the tank at sunrise is declared the winner. The freshmen, knowing this, sent two of their number to change the figures, realizing that the sophomores were too nearly worn out to offer any resistance.

The two freshmen soon scaled the side of the great tank and prepared to obliterate the sophomores' numeral and so bring lasting disgrace upon the class. The second-year men, enraged by this insult, bitterly cursed their fate, and tried to think of some means whereby the two freshmen might be dislodged and the honor of their class saved.

At last the leader of the sophomores conceived a great scheme. He rushed wildly to the pumping station, and by bribes and threats induced the engineer in charge to overflow the tank. The idea was a great success; the luckless freshmen were soon enveloped in a small Niagara, and compelled to make a hasty descent.

How the Cows Escaped at Gettysburg.

We had an old cow that had been in the family for years, and the morning of the first day of the fight we had put her in pasture as usual. This pasture was near the edge of town. Of course, we saw nothing of her during the three days of fighting. Often one of us would say: "I wonder what has become of the old cow?" The general opinion was that we had seen the last of her. On the morning of the fourth day, father, my brother and I took a walk over the field to see if we could find any trace of her. We saw many terrible sights. Dead soldiers were lying around thick, dead horses, and many cow skins and heads; from this last we soon came to the conclusion that our cow had been killed for food like the rest, so we gave her up. As we were eating supper one evening a week or more after the battle, we heard a familiar bellowing in the street. Everybody sprang from the table and rushed out. There stood our dear old cow, looking as happy as it is possible for a cow to look at being home again. We petted and hugged her in our pleasure at finding her alive, and soon had her in the stable in her own familiar stall. Then we discovered that she had a bullet hole in her neck and one in her side. She was not severely hurt, however, and both bullets came out eventually. We found out later that all the cows in that particular field had got out in some way the first day of the fight and had wandered off about ten miles from town, beyond the firing line. After the battle they all found their way back to town.—[Albertus McCreary, in McClure's.

Bank Protection.

Like the Bank of England, the Bank of France is now guarded every night by soldiers, who do sentry duty outside the building, a watch being likewise kept inside its precincts; but within quite recent times the officials at the French bank resorted to a very novel method of protecting their bullion.

This consisted in engaging masons to wall up the doors of the vaults in the cellar with hydraulic mortar as soon as the money was deposited each day in these receptacles. The water was then turned on and kept running until the whole cellar was flooded. A burglar would be obliged to work in a diving suit and break down a cement wall before he could even begin to plunder the vaults.

When the bank officials arrived next morning the water was drawn off, the masonry torn down and the vaults opened. Curiously enough, within a few months after this obsolete manner of protecting the bank's cash was done away with, burglars did actually get into the vaults and decamp with about $45,000 in gold coin.—[Strand.

Compiled for The Times.

Something Better.

JOSEPH H. CHOATE said at a recent dinner that within a few years (he was sure) all civilized nations would be compelled to arbitrate their quarrels, as for centuries all civilized men have been compelled to do.

"Patriotism—the Glorious Fourth—all that sort of thing is very good indeed," said Mr. Choate, "but disarmament, universal peace, will be much better.

"In this splendid peaceful future which is so near us, friends of war will seem as uncouth as a young man seemed the other day in my native Salem.

"This young man entered a drug store and said:

"'Gimme a brush.'

"'Very good, sir,' said the polite assistant. 'What kind of a brush? A tooth brush?'

"'Tooth brush? Naw!' snarled the young man. 'What would I want a tooth brush fur? Do ye think I've got hair on my teeth?'"

The Can Opener.

SPEAKER CANNON, at Valley Forge, defended the milder forms of profanity wittily.

"These not irreverent cuss words," said he, "act as a safety valve. A man, but for them, might do shocking things—smash the piano, scissors the portieres."

Speaker Cannon lighted a fresh cigar.

"So many things in the home," he said, "incite a man to—er—let off steam. There's opening cans, for instance—opening these new-fangled cans with patent openers that are always getting lost.

"A Danville man was letting off steam terribly the other day as he opened one of these patent cans. His wife, tired of the noise, called from the next room:

"'What are you opening that can with, dear?'

"'The can opener, of course,' he replied.

"'Oh,' said she. 'I thought you were opening it with prayer.'"

A Fanatic.

"SO Dr. Wiley has been giving the English beans." The speaker, a Washington chemist, looked up from his paper with a chuckle.

"He's been showing the English," the chemist resumed, "that their far-famed Devonshire cream is preserved with borax. "Nasty stuff it is, any way. But this will be a hard blow to Devon. Dr. Wiley, though, spares nobody in his exposure of food adulterators.

"Discussing food adulterators with me the day before he sailed, he said that some of them carried the doctoring of food so far, it seemed to be, one would say, a mania, a disease, with them.

"He said they reminded him in their food-fixing fanaticism of the temperance fanaticism of an old clergyman he used to know in Kent.

"This old clergyman, preaching on temperance one Sunday, actually took the Deity to task.

"'It is to be regretted,' he said gloomily, 'that our Lord and His apostles did so little on earth for the temperance cause.'"

The Pilgrim.

SENATOR BEVERIDGE, in one of his many eloquent Independence Day addresses compared the critics of America to an admirer of the poet Whittier.

"These critics," he said, "fail to bring the necessary sympathy and knowledge over with them, and hence they are unsatisfactory—like the Whittier pilgrim.

"Pilgrims used to visit Whittier continually. A typical one came from Missouri. Though told that Whittier had a headache, he forced his way into the poet's study, where he declared that he adored all Whittier's works, which he knew almost by heart. He asked Whittier to write his name several hundred times on a large sheet of foolscap, so that he could cut out and distribute the autographs among his Missouri friends. In fact, it was all the poet could do to keep the enthusiastic Missourian from clipping all the buttons from his coat as souvenirs.

"'And all the time'—so Whittier would end the anecdote pathetically—'all the time he called me Whitaker.'"

His Reward.

SENATOR DOLLIVER, discussing certain tariff propositions with a Washington correspondent last month, said:

"Those propositions would pay, eh? Yes, they would pay as the Denver man's advertising campaign did.

"'Advertising always pays,' said a friend of this man. 'Take the case of Smith. Smith recently conducted a most extensive advertising campaign throughout the country, and was thereby discovered by his wife, whom he had deserted some ten years before.'"

The Twins.

FRANK WORK, the aged New York millionaire, was talking to a reporter about international marriages.

"I can't understand," he said, "why a beautiful American heiress will marry one of these fortune-hunting, empty-headed foreigners when she might have her pick of a hundred strong, clean, industrious American men.

"The girl who makes an international marriage," said Mr. Work, frowning, "misses the real thing as widely as the Homer twins missed it.

"The Homer twins, aged about 4, got their morning bath, and then were dressed in clean white suits and told to go out and play.

"At the end of an hour or so, their mother went to look for them. She found them in the back garden. It had rained the night before, and a certain favorite hollow under an elm tree was one soft mess of ankle-deep mud. In this mud, on their stomachs, lay the twins, kicking out their legs and brandishing their arms with vigor.

"'What on earth are you doing?' the mother cried.

"'We're learnin' to swim, mother,' the twins answered."

A Just Rebuke.

"IT was William Dean Howells," said a Chicago editor, "who first rebuked us Americans for our spread-eagleism, for our foolish boasting. I see that Mr. Howells has just joined a men's society for the promotion of woman suffrage. Trust him to be in the forefront always.

"I once heard Mr. Howells deliver a Fourth-of-July oration in Maine. The orator preceding him had boasted a good deal. Mr. Howells showed that some of the man's boasts were even impious.

"He said that these spread-eagle boasters deserved the rebuke that the little child administered to the cackling hen that had just laid an egg. The child, angered by the hen's continuous cawk-cawk-cawk, cawk-cawk-cawk, shook his little finger at her and said:

"'You fink you're smart. But Dod made dat egg. You touldn't help but lay it!'"

Labored.

"DO you call that an explanation?" said Senator Aldrich. He referred to a brother Senator's reply to a charge that he had contradicted himself in consecutive tariff speeches. "Do you call that an explanation? Why it is as labored as the Duluth palmist's.

"A Duluth palmist," Senator Aldrich resumed, "said, as he studied the palm of a young Duluth shipping clerk:

"'Useless to pretend that you have a long life before you. The life line, you perceive, ends right here. No, young man, you are bound to die at the age of 40.'

"He babbled on five or ten minutes more. Then, forgetting what he had said first, he declared:

"'And this small line here shows that you will marry at the age of 37, and will have fourteen children.'

"'Fourteen children?' gasped the shipping clerk. 'How the deuce can that happen when I'm to die at 40?'

"The palmist, turning very red, stammered:

"'Why—er—you see—the fact is——'

"Then his face cleared all of a sudden, and he said glibly:

"'You'll marry a widow with twelve little ones.'"

A Thing of the Past.

LEONORA O'REILLY, the vice-president of the Women's Trade Union League, was praising this organization's work in New York.

"And it has a great future before it," she said. "I have no doubt that a century hence the members of the league will regard the woman of today as we now regard the farmer's wife of the early '40s.

"A Maine deacon of the early '40s was talking to the minister. He sniffled and whined:

"'Oh, yes, Job suffered some, I ain't denyin' that, parson. But Job never knowed what it was to have his team run off and kill his wife right in the harvest season, with hired girls wantin' $2 and $2.50 a week.'"

Gay Young Blades.

FROM a crowd of rah-rah college boys celebrating a crew victory, a policeman had managed to extract two prisoners.

"What is the charge against these young men?" asked the magistrate before whom they were arraigned.

"Disturbin' the peace, Yer Honor," said the policeman. "They were givin' their college yells in the street an' makin' trouble generally."

"What is your name?" the judge asked one of the prisoners.

"Ro-ro-robert Ro-ro-rollins," stuttered the youth.

"I asked for your name, sir—not the evidence."—[Everybody's.

The "Still Small Voice."

THE moral of this story may be that it is better to heed the warnings of the "still small voice" before it is driven to the use of the telephone.

A New York lawyer, gazing idly out of his window, saw a sight in an office across the street that made him rub his eyes and look again. Yes, there was no doubt about it. The pretty stenographer was sitting upon the gentleman's lap. The lawyer noticed the name that was lettered on the window and then searched in the telephone book. Still keeping his eye upon the scene across the street, he called the gentleman up. In a few moments he saw him start violently, and take down the receiver.

"Yes," said the lawyer through the telephone, "I should think you would start."

The victim whisked his arm from its former position and began to stammer something.

"Yes," continued the lawyer severely, "I think you'd better take that arm away. And while you're about it, as long as there seem to be plenty of chairs in the room——"

The victim brushed the lady from his lap, rather roughly, it is to be feared. "Who—who the devil is this, anyhow?" he managed to splutter.

"I," answered the lawyer in deep, impressive tones, "am your conscience!" And then he hung up.—[Everybody's.

Examination Gems.

During the reading of the Declaration, the schoolma'am, who knew it by heart, talked.

"I collected this examination season," she said, settling herself more comfortably on the grass, "all the funny answers that my little pupils made. I'll repeat them to you—those, that is, that I remember."

Her pretty lips curved in a smile, and she repeated:

"'Esau was a man who wrote fables and sold the copyright for a mess of pottage.'

"'Divine Right is the liberty to do what you like in church.'

"'A Papal Bull is a kind of cow, only larger, and does not give milk.'

"'Phoenicians—The inventors of Phoenician blinds.'

"'Immaculate—State of those who have passed entrance examination to college.'

"'The heart—The heart is a comical-shaped bag. It is divided into several parts by a fleshy petition. These parts are called right artillery, left artillery, and so on. The function of the heart is between the lungs.'

"'A volcano is a very powerful rock.'

"'Mer de glace—Mer de glace means mother of glass.'

"'Metamorphic rocks are those containing metaphors.'

"'Fort and fortress—In forts men are put, and women in fortresses.'

"'Short history of Keats—Keats wrote a savage criticism on Endymion, which brought on consumption.'"

On Accent.

She was an A.B., Vassar.

"When Henry James," she said, "sneered at our American accent on his American visit, I sneered back. What difference about the accent, I demanded, as long as the grammar was correct? What difference if one talked with a twang like a banjo, as we do, or with a flutey gobble, like a turkey, as do the English? Well, I fear I was wrong."

She stirred her ice-cream soda.

"Neither Americans nor Britishers," she said, "are entitled to say which accent is correct, both being directly interested in the matter. No, the decision must be left to the disinterested nations—to the French, Germans, Italians and so forth.

"Those nations, alas! have decided against the twang. They prefer the gobble. I know this to my cost. With the best of references and certificates I've tried a year in vain to get a place as English teacher in French schools, German schools, Italian schools, Spanish schools—and it's no go. My American accent bars me out.

"For all foreigners who learn English insist on learning it with the English accent. They sneer at our American accent as we ourselves sneer at the Irish brogue."

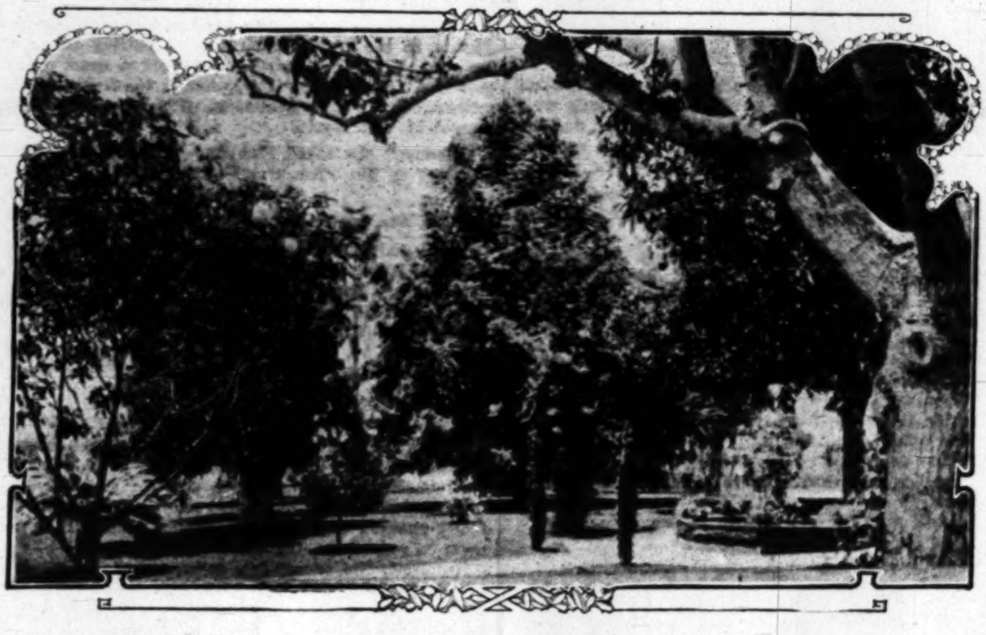
CO-OPERATIVE STREET PLANTING

THE ONLY METHOD TO SECURE HARMONIOUS TREATMENT.

ONE of the most unsatisfactory conditions arising from our present lack of method in street planting is the jumble of all sorts of plants on each block, a most confusing and inharmonious effect that not only is unbeautiful, but all but bewildering to the passer-by. One is led to wonder by what method of reasoning people arrive at such variable results, and why they persist in maintaining such an incongruous horticultural museum. We have often noted, upon a single block, palms, dracenas, acacias, eucalypts, peppers and walnuts, part deciduous, part evergreen, with every variation of form, color and size possible to attain in the total number of trees necessary. There is an added strength and dignity with each block or mile of street trees of one kind that with age assumes a stateliness unapproachable by any mixed or alternative planting.

As a rule, street trees are planted too thickly, so that individual beauty and character are soon lost through interlacing or overlapping of the branches. Where this is done, there is sufficient excuse for demanding mixed planting, so that one may be able to note a change in color and form, for a solid mass of foliage is but little more interesting than a brick or stone wall. Each tree should be outlined against the sky or background so that beauty of form, carriage, color, leaf and blossom may be seen and alternating glimpses be given of the surrounding landscapes or the distant prospect of earth, sea or sky.



A VARIED PLANT COLLECTION.

It must be plainly evident from the foregoing that the only effective means of securing uniform planting is by zealous, well-directed coöperation which, in its final analysis, means organization. In the case of a municipality, it is doubtless best to pass a compulsory street-tree ordinance providing that within a specified time all streets shall be planted, allowing the owners upon each street to petition for the use of their favorite tree and designation by the City Council of an official tree for each street, after which time no other tree shall be planted therein. This is a working of the will of the majority, of greatest good to the greatest number, and is the only way in which the non-resident owner may be brought to terms, for all unplanted frontage remaining at the expiration of the stated term shall be planted by the city and the expense added to the city taxes. The validity of this ordinance has been upheld by the courts and has proven eminently satisfactory wherever tried.

In lesser communities than municipalities or where a tree-planting ordinance is deemed unnecessary or inadvisable, an improvement society or club assuming similar work is a prime necessity. With such an organization the owners on each street may be called together, the merits of their several favorite trees discussed, the matter put to a vote and an agreement made to plant the tree desired by the majority. It will be necessary that some few should yield graciously to the wishes of the many if uniform and satisfactory results are to be attained. This spirit of coöperation should extend to digging the holes, buying and planting the trees and perhaps to the first year's care. All these items may be covered at a less expense collectively than is possible as individuals, and the results will be far more satisfactory to each and all.

Redlands Notes.

Last week the writer was wandering about the charming little city of Redlands, one of the "show places" of Southern California. While the town and country about are unusually attractive, there is nothing else in that section that compares in attractiveness with Smiley Heights. To an Angeleño the topography of this large private park suggests our Elysian Park, but the road system is better and the planting much more skillfully carried out. There is a wildwood charm about the Smiley estate that does not obtain in any of our city parks, though the same results are possible in the same lapse of years.

The parks and gardens of Redlands are, owing largely to the hot summers, very free from scale pests. There the pepper trees and the oleanders thrive splendidly and are as bright and clean as it is possible for plants to be. This freedom from scale, especially the olive or common black scale, is so noticeable to one from nearer the coast that it gives the whole city a brighter appearance, especially in the districts where both streets and gardens are well planted with trees. Redlands claims to be the home of the real pink Cherokee rose, and the rose fanciers there seem to think that we do not have the "real thing" in Los Angeles. Their rose appears deeper in color and the foliage is precisely the same as in the white Cherokee. While our rose is just as ornate and grows fully as large as the Redlands strain, it does not appear to so closely resemble the universally-admired white Cherokee. Much of interest may be found in Redlands to attract the plant lover, even though he does not visit the large fine gardens, of which the city has many. Though the writer has been a frequent visitor to the city for a score of years, every trip brings out new plants or lessons in plant treatment not to be seen at home, and Redlands grows more attractive as well as interesting, with each successive visit.

Power and Telephone Companies Prune.

Previous to the last year or so the street trees of Los Angeles have been at the mercy of the lineman, and right royally has he hacked them. Tops have been cut off with hatchets and large branches half sawn through were allowed to fall and split off as they would. Occasionally some property owner would protest, and if he made enough noise, his trees would be properly pruned, for legally no corporation has a right to cut any tree. A case carried to the highest court a couple of years ago was decided against the company where the franchise provided that no trees could be cut (under protest) unless the company first exhausted "every other means," and this was held by the court to go so far as to cause the wires to be placed under ground; for until this was done, they had not "exhausted every other means."

But the days of hacking and rank disfigurement of street trees by public-utility companies is now a thing of the past in Los Angeles. Having no right to mutilate trees, it only became necessary to have some one in authority take up the matter with them in a friendly spirit, and see that the work was properly done. This matter of diplomacy was taken up by City Forester Harper when he first went into office, and so satisfactory have been the results that this one accomplishment is alone worth to Los Angeles the full salary of the city forester from the creation of the office to the present time. Little by little we shall come to realize that this official is a prime necessity and that the position should have been made and maintained during all of the last twenty years. Had it been done, we should now have a much more beautiful city, and as our people come to realize the many improvements regarding street trees and their treatment that the city forester has brought about we shall find them a unit in demanding a more liberal appropriation for this most necessary and efficient officer.

While upon the subject of improved pruning methods in vogue by the power companies, it is not out of place to say that while all are doing better work, some are doing the best they can. Some line companies have given orders to their tree foremen to prune according to the orders of the city forester, or in other cases as local tree committees from district improvement societies may direct.

Covets a fresh, smooth, satiny complexion and what a satisfaction and peace of mind its possession brings. The lines of age, worry and overwork (deadly enemies of a woman's beauty), are rendered well-nigh powerless by Mrs. Nettie Harrison's Lola Montez Creme. REMARKABLE PALMS.

THE GIANT TALIPOT EASILY THE GRANDEST OF THEM ALL.

By Ernest Braunton.

RESIDENTS of Southern California, who have come to regard all palms merely as ornamental plants should not forget that there are many species of unusual commercial value and that even among the ornamental we do not grow either the finest or the most curious or remarkable. Our climate limits us to hardy species, though in the writer's opinion no Royal Palm can surpass in beauty a well-developed plant of Cocos plumosa, sometimes called, by reason of its grace and elegance, the Queen palm.

No doubt the most remarkable palm, from a purely spectacular standpoint is the giant Talipot palm (Corypha umbraculifera) from Ceylon. The leaves of this palm are often more than ten feet long and nearly twice as wide, so that it is easily the grandest of all fan palms. It differs from all other members of the palm family in that it flowers but once, a supreme effort as in the case of the century plants so common here, and then dies. The preparation for flowering is preceded by thirty or forty years' sturdy growth; then, in the center of the immense leaf crown there arises a shoot of giant "asparagus" in general appearance the same as the flower spike of the century plant (Agave.) It also unfolds as this plant until it is a much-branched giant flower head of twenty-five feet in height, and in sixty days from the first appearance of the bud the myriad of flowers open. About six months from the beginning the flower stalk dies and topples over, and this is later followed by the death of the plant.

SUNSET'S PRUNERS AT WORK.

From a commercial view, no palm is of so much importance as the cocoanut, and it is also, throughout the tropics of the world, the most common. In many lands, it furnishes to the natives food and drink; houses and clothing; firewood, and "firewater;" boats, watering troughs, boxes, trunks, dishes and household utensils; as well as nearly everything we make from timber and fiber plants. The dried meat is the copra of commerce, and we use it in various forms and ways. Cocoanut oil is also much in demand, as is the butter made from it, for the use of those unfortunates suffering from dyspepsia and indigestion. Aside from the meat and milk, the shell itself is put to a great variety of uses, and it is doubtful if any plant in the world furnishes so great a variety of material necessary to mankind. In this respect, the cocoanut palm far surpasses in importance the bamboo of the Chinese and Japanese.

It is a matter of common knowledge that the finest sago is taken from the felled trunks of several species of palms and the date of commerce is nearly as important as a food. From several species is also obtained the "palm cabbage," the tender leaves of the center which are usually taken out before their entrance to the light of the world, a treatment which destroys the plant. The Ivory palm furnishes, in the hard coated seeds, a material very little inferior for many purposes to animal ivory. So, too, are many seeds of palms edible beside the cocoanut, some being used as nuts and the interiors eaten, while others are valued for the edible pulp on the outside of the nut. The Wax palms furnish an article of commerce often used as a substitute for tallow and others furnish "palm honey," "palm sugar," "palm wine," and many sorts of food and drink, while other species give us valuable drugs and medicines. Though we are accustomed to looking upon them as mere ornaments, if the full story were told, it would readily be admitted that the palms are among our most valuable economic plants.

Plant Variety in Gardens.

As a rule, a private garden should not smack of botanic-garden flavor of the extent of having but a single, isolated specimen of each plant. Yet the plant lover often prefers a fine collection of plants to garden pictures, and therein the plant lover predominates over the admirer of the woodland picture. Often a compromise is effected, and the garden is still allowed to be beautiful. It also occurs that persons come into possession of old gardens planted with a jumble of trees and shrubs where no attention was paid to landscape features—no open lawn centers—it then becomes proper to add to the plant collection by the planting of better material.

The Banana Shrub.

One of the rarest as well the choicest of all our garden shrubs is a handsome evergreen closely allied to the magnolias and often so classed, known to the layman as the "banana shrub" because of the delightful fragrance of its blossoms which emit a strong banana-like odor, though far surpassing in both strength and delicacy of aroma the finest banana that ever grew. This excellent shrub (Michelia fuscata) grows very well in a deep, well-drained, friable loam, planted in whole or partial shade and given frequent and copious waterings during the summer. Lack of proper treatment is largely, if not wholly, responsible for the failures with this plant of which so many complain. The writer calls to mind many fine plants in Los Angeles and vicinity that have thrived little short of the marvelous, proving that any one can grow them by the exercise of a little care. One at the Weeks place, in Alhambra, has attained a large size, flowered most abundantly and always remained in perfect health, though not by any means planted in an ideal situation. When upon a visit to the place, Mr. Weeks told the writer that no special preparation was made in the soil, and that no special care had been given. Those viewing this plant when in full bloom would certainly be moved to procure one, no matter what the cost or care involved.

Plant Asters Now.

Now is the golden time to plant China asters if you wish flowers from them at the very best season. Asters should have a rich, friable soil, retentive of moisture, but land that was manured last year or if it was fertilized this year, it should have been with very thoroughly-rotted stable manure. Soils for asters are best turned over several times before planted to get thoroughly aired, for this will often protect them from fungous disease, which is in some years very prevalent.

Planting Rural Parks.

Rural parks and those in small towns are usually planted out in a day by an enthusiastic crowd and generally it is very illy done. How can it be improved? By placing in charge of each piece of work the keen-eyed observer and admirer of the beautiful, the one who can select the best points of observation, the future house sites, the places where one would linger and drink in the grandeur of the views. Have him along with your load of trees and give him full charge of saying "leave that vista open," "don't plant there; you shut off my view of that river, lake, woods or distant hill." Again he is valuable, as he sees the objectionable features, the thing that mars the landscape. Here he plants thickly and hides from view that which repels the esthetic nature of man. How can this all be accomplished? By planting in groups, groups set with an eye to the artistic; groups set by themselves, with open space where full sunshine breaks through and gives light and a circulation of air to the open interior.

The Underworld Is at Your Elbow.

"The under world," says Charles Somerville, in the July Everybody's, "has no separate topography. It moves constantly at the elbow of respectability. Its infamous aristocrats are ever in the haunts of fashion, and its low-browed, humble toilers in the crooked lanes are living cheek by jowl with the decent poor.

"This is what your all-seeing eyes could surely show you of the under world; and more startling still, perhaps, might be the discovery that its inhabitants are not so altogether different from you and me. More willful in their weaknesses, certainly, they are; more hysterical in their hilarities; blinder in their loves and bitterer in their hatreds; supinely subject to all emotions, good or bad, undoubtedly. . . . I remember so well the first time I saw a burglar in flesh and blood. His black mask was off, his revolver was in the possession of the police; he had just been sentenced to ten years' imprisonment, and was saying good-by to his wife and three little children. He was wholly like any other grief-stricken human being. His sob was the same. He was a sandy-haired man with rather large, foolish blue eyes. It was hard to imagine those same large, blue eyes looking very terrible, even behind a black mask."

Practical Poultry Culture in the Southwest.

DEVOTED TO THE INTERESTS OF STANDARD-BRED POULTRY AND THE PEOPLE WHO GROW IT.

THE HEN AND THE CITY.

AN ORDINANCE THAT IS CONSIDERED TOO DRASTIC.

By Henry W. Kruckeberg.

NOTE.—Short articles of a practical nature are cordially solicited from breeders and fanciers, relating their experiences with poultry, giving their successes as well as failures. The writer will be glad, in so far as lies in his power, to answer inquiries of public interest bearing on any phase of an enlightened poultry culture, such as feeding and management, disease and its prevention, market conditions, fancy points, etc. The co-operation of utility breeders and fanciers is cordially solicited, to the end that the best thought and practice in an enlightened poultry culture may find a healthy expression in these columns.

TO eliminate the American business hen from the corporate limits of the city of Los Angeles is certainly a big job for even the municipal government to undertake, for it means to exclude her from a thickly-populated territory of over thirty-six square miles. The bit of municipal legislation that is presumed to do this is contained in the following paragraph from Ordinance No. 18,038:

"Section 2. It shall be unlawful for any person to keep or feed any chickens, ducks, geese, turkeys, or other fowls within thirty-five (35) feet of any door, window or other opening of any dwelling within the city of Los Angeles."

The reason for such legislation, we are told, is that Chanticleer rises too early in the morning to suit the average person, and that because of his early and vociferous crow the poultry business must be eliminated from the back yards of city dwellers and the family hen becomes only the lore of books and the records of the past. That breeders and fanciers resent this class legislation is a foregone conslusion; but there are also economic reasons why it should be removed from the statute books. Roughly estimating, there are probably over 100,000 head of poultry within the city limits, the major portion of which are laying hens. To cut this number off means a decrease in egg production which will enhance the cost of hen fruit to consumers; eliminate all this poultry and the poultry-supply business will suffer; but most of all, the law in its operation is not only unjust, but works a hardship to a large number of taxpayers who are deprived thereby of a source of livelihood as well as of pleasure. In its last analysis it is simply drastic and sumptuary legislation impinging on the rights of the individual and confiscating his property. For to limit the keeping of poultry to within thirty-five feet of "any door, window or other opening of any dwelling within the city of Los Angeles" is to make city-lot poultry culture obsolete. We understand a number of arrests and fines have already been made, and that flocks of fine birds have been forced to the market at great losses to their owners. A former ordinance limited the keeping of fowl to within twenty feet, which served every purpose of good sanitation and safety to the city's health; the present law should be so amended.

The Big Event.

Late advices just received from Seattle are to the effect that the forthcoming Alaska-Yukon Poultry Show will be a pronounced success. The plans for the building call for a structure 152 by 208 feet, affording a floor space of 31,616 square feet. The cooping is to be done by the Spratt's Company, who have probably handled more poultry shows both in England and America than all other cooping companies combined. Entries will close August 27, and the management will be ready for the reception of exhibits as early as September 25. In addition to the show proper, visitors especially interested in poultry culture are assured a series of lectures and actual demonstrations in judging, handling birds, etc.

Beauty Is as Beauty Does.

It is a noticeable fact among breeders and fanciers that the reports of the Revision Committee to the American Standard of Perfection have kindled a lively discussion between the utility man and the breeder with an eye to beauty of plumage and symmetry of form. Let it be remembered in this discussion that the illustrations in the new standard are to be half-tones made direct from photographs of living specimens, which naturally enough leads to the question: "Shall the types chosen for these new illustrations be typical of meat birds and the egg machines, or shall they be strikingly individual for beauty of plumage and form?" To put it conversely, have breeds deteriorated in economic values since becoming standard? If so, the book and its teachings have failed in an important point. As a matter of fact, the type of beauty should conform to the type of greatest economic value, whether it be for carcass or eggs. It is idle folly to breed to feather points alone, if thereby we lose in practical values; it should be the province of the standard not only to conserve and augment the economic values of the bird, but supplementary thereto in a secondary sense, uniformity in type and color of plumage, head and leg points, should also follow. It may be gratifying to one's sense of the beautiful to see correct feather markings in a Brown Leghorn or Plymouth Rock, but if it is at the expense of hen fruit and meat, it certainly is detrimental to the industry. Utility and beauty should go hand in hand.

Let us view the subject at closer range. Is it not a fact that under color of plumage in standard breeds is a matter that has been exaggerated? What does it matter if a fowl has slightly faulty undercolor if surface color is good and satisfying to the demands of beauty. And is it not a fact that the long-bodied hen with graceful keel-shaped back possesses the elements of gracefulness and is at the same time the egg-laying type? Let the standard of the future describe that shape which produces the greatest results to the breeder, just as the form of body and udder and milk veins indicate the premium dairy cow.

Poultry culture is as much a part of commercial agriculture as dairying, fruit growing, and truck gardening; it is subject to the same competitive atmosphere in the market-place; to maintain a foremost position it must afford economic results along similar lines, or else those following it for a livelihood will fail in the attainment of the highest results. By all means give us a standard that will give more and better poultry and eggs at less expense of feeds and labor, at the same time maintaining uniformity of size and type and beauty of plumage. It can be done—all it requires is studious application and an appreciation of the eternal fitness of things.

Does He Make $1500 Per Year?

P. N. Leach of Santa Ana takes exception to some of our strictures on the "get rich quick" systems so prolifically advertised in the poultry press in the following letter of protest:

"The writer is a constant reader of the poultry department in the Los Angeles Times Magazine. While not a practical poultryman, he feels he must take exception to your adverse criticism of the 'Philo' system in yesterday's paper. Mr. James M. Kanouse, No. 608 West Second street, this city, has over 500 chickens, ranging from three weeks to two months, on a plat about 150 feet square, and has had over 650. He uses the Philo system, although not in its entirety, owing to other business demands. He has used this method for over a year, and has experienced A1 results. He now has chickens only two months old weighing in excess of two pounds, live weight. His fowls are all apparently in A1 health—no lice, filth or disease. He claims better egg results from seventy-five hens in fifteen coops of the Philo type than he ever secured under former methods."

Many of these so-called systems possess merit here and there, more or less as the case may be. What the writer objects to strenuously is the fabulous sums said to be realized from their successful practice—sums which are only possible at best under the most intensive culture and under the most favorable circumstances and conditions. They are not even average rare cases, hence are not to be met with once in a thousand times. To do so would put half the population into the chicken business with the result of overproduction in a comparatively short time. As in mercantile and manufacturing enterprises, it is only the comparatively few who make big money in chickens. There is no "sure" method. One breeder attains fine results by one method of feeding and management, and another breeder does equally well with methods radically different. It is a question of conditions and environment, coupled with personal aptitude to the business and constant application. These advertised methods offered for good money are to be the business what patent medicines are to the ailing population. We presume they will have to be tried out by the curious, but for our own part we believe to be a matter of individual initiative and continuity of purpose, rather than a bit of white containing certain "directions" for which the author wants $100.

A Case of Gape Worms.

A reader under date of June 20 writes The Times as follows:

"I am a poultry fancier living in town, and have lost a good many little chicks from a disease unknown to me. They are kept in a good clean pen and fed regularly a variety of food. When about four weeks old, they started gaping or trying to loosen something in the throat and die in about forty-eight hours."

Your birds are suffering from the gapes caused by the presence in the windpipe of a small thread-like worm, usually found in chicks. The affected birds are less lively, extend the neck and gape, lose flesh and strength, stand around with closed eyes and die. One remedy is to insert a small feather with oil of turpentine into the windpipe, give it a slight turn and withdraw. Often the worms come with it, or it causes their expulsion. Another remedy is to place a few birds at a time in a large box covered with a coarse cloth, having a door at the side; dust air-slaked lime on the cloth. The lime breathed in by the birds causes the worms to relax their hold and they are coughed up.

Down to the Earth Earthy.

So reliable an authority as Ernest Kellerstrass, probably the leading breeder of White Orpingtons in America, claims to have discovered a simple preventive for the large mortality among brooder chicks. Briefly stated, he is of the opinion that board floors are too hard and unnatural for the feet of young chicks, and that soil being soft and natural to them should be substituted. By standing on a board floor, the chicks acquire leg weakness resulting in the white bowel trouble and a general weakening. With loose, dry soil as a floor, the chicks will early learn to scratch and become active. Through scratching and exercise the infant birds grow strong, and hence more resistant to disease. Through exercise all the vital organs are brought into play, and susceptibility to disease is reduced to a minimum. A loose, pliable loamy soil should be provided and the brooder floor covered with it to a depth of a few inches. As soon as the earth becomes foul it should be cleaned out and replaced with new earth, every few days. If this new remedy proves as successful as it is claimed to be, it will certainly prove a boon to the poultry business.

The Wind Prophets.

The city man, on the honeysuckle-clad porch, smoked and listened to the farm hand's talk.

"Weather vanes is wind indicators," said the farm hand, "but chickens and turkeys, by crinus, is wind prophets."

"Come off," said the city man.

"Gospel truth," declared the farm hand. "In a cam, when there ain't goin' to be no wind, the birds allus roost on the tree boughs with their heads alternatin' each way—number one faces east, number two west, number three north, and so on. That's a sign of cam.

"But supposin' there's goin' to be a strong, high wind. Then, by crinus, they all roost, every mother's son of 'em, facin' it. Accordin' as they face, so you can prophesy the wind will blow before mornin'.

"I figger it out," said the farm hand, "that in a cam the bunch faces different ways so as to look out for danger better. But if it's goin' to blow up in the night, then they face the blow so's they can best hang on to their perch. What I can't figger out, though, is how in the mischief they smell that wind five or six hours before it's doo."

Midland Poultry Food No. 4
Will Make Your Hens Lay Better

It is a scientific combination of egg and feather-producing food elements—and when intelligently fed—will bring your hens up to their maximum laying capacity and keep them there. It is a great plumage producer, and should always be fed at molting season. It will carry the hens through the molt in much less than the usual time, and thereby shorten their non-productive period. As a producer of eggs and plumage, there is no poultry food on the market to compare with it. Its cost is trifling as compared to the results it brings.

How Women Get Rich

It is a curious fact that every year hundreds of ladies are entering the profitable profession of manicuring, and with only a fortnight's instruction are working up businesses which pay well right from the start. There is not a town in the United States of five hundred inhabitants or more, where a manicurist is not needed, and thousands of women from these small towns are also finding places in the big cities, where a few hours easy work a day yields a splendid income. There is an institution on the Pacific Coast where any woman more than eighteen years of age, can have the necessary instruction, and the professional manicuring outfit furnished by mail with no money in advance. It is the California Institute of Beauty Culture, 830c Market Street, San Francisco, Cal.

Comfort in Summer.

HELPFUL SUGGESTIONS FOR DWELLERS IN DESERT REGIONS.

By a Special Contributor.

SUMMER days are here again, and some of us must stay in the warm valleys part or all of the time. This being our third summer on the Colorado Desert, it may be that some of our methods for keeping cool and lightening housework may be of help to others. Experience has taught us many things, and we have managed to keep well and fairly comfortable during the four warm months, when at times the thermometer reaches 118 degrees and even higher. Little expense or work has been expended to attain these simple summer living devices.

First of all, we sleep outdoors, not in a screened room, but out in the open where we get every breath of air that stirs. This is a far better way, for often it takes till midnight for the air to cool in a porch or even under trees. So take the whole family right out under the stars; it won't hurt one of you, and we guarantee that the sleep you get will be more restful than any you ever got before. Caution: Don't put cotton in your ears or tie towels around your heads, for, like wearing a chest protector, you will be driven to the habit.

One certainly can get through the day better if he rests well at night.

Yes, we have mosquitoes out here; they breed in the reservoirs. To protect the sleepers, we nail two small posts about three feet long to the two head corners of the beds and two more, one on each side, about one-third of the way down on the sides of the beds. A nail is driven part way in on top of each post and strong twine is tied around on which is strung netting, leaving it full enough in front to be lifted up so one can crawl under cosily when retiring or "doing" the beds. Over the top we throw a piece of dark green sateen or netting, in each corner of which is fastened a stone to hold it in place.

There you may rest and laugh at all the bugs and mosquitoes.

For single beds we find the folding wire cots more satisfactory, and for the double beds we bolt legs on ordinary bed springs. All are fitted with rollers so in the day time the beds may be easily shoved into the shade.

We are blest with some fine cottonwood trees, and between two of these swings the baby cage. It is made of narrow inch boards, and is 18 inches deep, 31 inches wide, 47 inches long on the outside. The 4-year-old also takes his siesta in this while the baby plays awhile. The sides are covered with wire screen, over the bottom is stretched strong canvas, and over the top is thrown a piece of soft, dark green sateen weighted at the corners. We are not cruel to our babies, making them lie and look up at the glaring light which we older ones would not endure an instant.

The cage is swung by strands of cable drawn through the ends in two places, as a hammock is balanced.

Swinging gently creates a draft. The baby is never annoyed by flies, and he may sit in it and play with his toys.

"To keep things," we have a pair of shelves fastened under the arm of a tree where a breeze from any direction strikes them. They are made of wide boards and fitted in a screened frame; screened because the flies are such thirsty things they would otherwise be thick on the damp cloths sucking up the moisture.

The food is placed in covered stone jars, wrapped in several thicknesses of cloth and placed in granite pans of water in this swinging screened cupboard. Even in a very warm day, when the breeze is burning hot as it blows across the sands, the food keeps fresh, the butter firm and milk sweet for eighteen hours.

The drinking water we keep in ollas set on upright cement pipes directly under these shelves, the cups hanging by hooks underneath. We use several three-gallon ollas, as they are easier handled in cleaning. They are filled at night and covered with wet sacks. The water is always as cool as one should drink for health's sake, and far more satisfying than ice water. Our well water is hot (102 degrees,) and the greater evaporation causes it to get much cooler than when cool water is placed in the ollas. Try warming the water before putting it into your ollas—not boiling, however, for boiling ruins water unless it is filled with vileness.

As to the cooking, any wise housewife will prepare very different foods in the warm months. Fruits, melons, salad vegetables, nuts and plenty of milk form a better diet than heavy meats and pastries, which are bad enough when we have more ambition to digest them.

We have good milk, cream, eggs, melons, figs, grapes and honey through the summer on the desert, and always have English walnuts and almonds. Salad vegetables are not obtainable, as the hot sun and winds scorch them, so we can tomatoes and asparagus, and of course have potatoes and cabbage stored away.

We rise early, at daylight. The one fire in the morning usually answers for the day. (It is surprising what a nice hot dish one may prepare with twisted newspapers, which leave no coals to heat the room.) Our breakfast is quite a hearty meal—usually cantaloupes, cereal and cream, potatoes with bacon and eggs, hot biscuit or corn bread and coffee. We have one hot dish at noon, which is prepared in the morning and finished in the fireless cooker. Beans or lentils with olive oil, macaroni with cream sauce and cheese, rice with beaten eggs, and many such dishes, with fruit for dessert, make a satisfying dinner. Strange as it may seem, we are ravenously hungry in this hot, dry climate, and chilis, fresh or as seasoning, and hot soups seem to "just touch the spot."

Our supper is usually soup, bread, or its substitute, and milk. Light bread is about out of the question, for it sours and molds so quickly. We use soda and sea biscuit, dry cereals, graham crackers, etc. Occasionally in the morning we make baking-powder biscuit, leaving out the shortening, molding and cutting out as for baking. These are placed on the top of the dinner dish, allowed to boil in the closely-covered pot about ten minutes, and placed, without lifting the cover, into the fireless cooker. They will be light, dry and warm at noon. Stewed dried fruits are excellent in the fireless cooker, with the same dough as above stewed on top, and all served with cream.

We make a confection for the big and little children which makes a very complete luncheon when served with a glass of milk or fruit juice. It is composed of equal quantities of dried figs, dates and seeded raisins; one-third the whole amount of nut meats, all put through the food chopper, then mixed with beaten egg white. Butter a tin having straight sides and pack in the mixture so solidly it will hold its shape when turned out. With a sharp knife cut in small cubes and roll in powdered sugar or dip in chocolate as creams. The children are not allowed to "piece" on these, but are given a glass of milk and buttered biscuit or some fruit once between meals if desired. They are never cross or ill. Cross children are suffering from wrong diet or the need of a nap—even big children show this symptom.

To go back to the pantry—did you ever try a bowl of rich milk with crisp hot popcorn?

Personally, in hot weather I have more energy if I eat but two meals a day—the morning meal of fruit, cereal and hot milk, the second meal at noon, eating what the rest do, or even less.

About the house, on the grass or hard ground we wear sandals, no stockings. No one knows the actual discomfort of leather and stockings till sandals have been adopted. Our summer garments are of the coolest and lightest material—union suits of gauze underneath to save extra bulk around the hips, and the female dress cut in one piece as much as possible. The pleated-to-the-figure princess dress is more neat in appearance than the wrappers.

Of course here we never go out in the summer, so do not suffer the shock of really "dressing up." But we keep clean! A plunge in hot water at night and a cool shower in the morning, with fresh underwear twice or three times a week and a good egg shampoo every two weeks ought to keep us decently clean. The whole egg is beaten for the shampoo, and no soap used. The hair then does not "crawl" when dry, and the scalp is kept oily and free from dandruff. The garments to be worn again next day are hung on a line over night to freshen.

Ironing was a problem, but is no more. The pieces that would, could or should be ironed are carefully hung nearly dripping, and nothing starched, but in this way they seem to have "dressing" in them. When partly dry, they are pulled, shaken and straightened till when put on they look surprisingly well. (Our line is stretched in the shade for this process.) The ironing energy is divided between a ride or stroll after sundown, and good reading.

Here is our luxury! Good books, the best magazines and the best music for our "Edison." Pleasure and instruction help us to forget bodily discomforts.

The floors are kept free from dust by merely dampening the broom occasionally while sweeping. After all, summer doesn't last long, and one may iron and scrub all the rest of the year.

We live during the day under the trees and on the verandas. Our "rustic" furniture consists of a home-made table covered with white oilcloth, large-sized children's rockers which are easy to move about, folding chairs, and hammocks of barrel staves or canvas.

Our sympathies go out to the men who have to labor in the fields in the glaring heat; yes, and to the patient, fly-pestered, toiling horses—but all these summer comforts are more than welcome to the tired men, and the ladies of the house and children are more fitted to make home cheerful if they are comfortable.

After all, isn't the simple life the ideal life?

Asked If He Were Blind.

There is a story of an elderly lady standing on the curb by a crowded crossing in the height of the season, too nervous to venture off the pavement. She was anxious to get to her destination on the other side of the thoroughfare, but hesitated to risk the journey. Presently, she perceived a stranger offering his hand. She seized it and they both plunged into the traffic. A motor bus all but ran over them; a taxicab whizzed past so close that the lady fancied her last moment had come. She clung tighter to her guide, who never flinched, but went madly on under the heads of the horses. Then they all but collided with a bicycle, and the wheels of a hansom twisted the feathers of the lady's toque. A tram car at that moment passed an inch from their toes and a butcher's cart knocked her handbag yards away. A motor horn at her ear nearly frightened her out of her wits, and the pole of a bus, catching her in the back, pushed her on to the pavement. By this time, she had found voice to upbraid the man to whom she had been clinging.

"Oh, dear! Oh, dear! It's a wonder I'm alive! What do you mean, man? I might have been killed a dozen times over. Are you blind?"

"That's just what I am, marm," replied the poor fellow; "so I held out my hand for some one to lead me across."—[Harry Furniss, in Strand.

A Question of Courage.

you of the Black Death?" he added, turning to the Mexican.

"Luz, Señor. It is the esposo of Luz who——"

"Good God!" exclaimed Grahame. "And Luz came to Buena Vista—she spoke to——"

He checked himself, and crossing to where Roderick Casewell stood, drew him aside.

"You must get out of the country at once, you and Mary and the girls," he said, "or you'll be held in quarantine. This is the only case we know of, so far; but the country may be rotten with black smallpox in a fortnight. I don't anticipate any danger for you, but there is no use in taking chances."

Casewell, his pomposity collapsing like a toy balloon, rubbed his hands nervously together.

"We'll catch the first train north," he hurriedly assented.

Grahame raised his voice and called to Standford, who was giving low-toned orders to the major-domo.

"You, Standford, sign health certificates for these people and see them off. I must get to Buena Vista at once. Will some one bring my horse?"

As Standford turned quickly, his eyes met Gracia's. She was looking at him curiously. His boyish face whitened under its tropic sunburn, and he stood irresolute.

Here was his chance—his chance! He could serve her and those she loved, could prove to her that he was brave enough to risk his honor and his future, to forget duty, for her sake. Never had she seemed so dear to him, so desirable. Beside the dusky prettiness of Helen, who stood near her, she bloomed, a white, flower-like thing—something fragile, tender, to be protected, sheltered from breath of harm.

His troubled, anxious gaze swept the circle of tense faces and came back to Gracia's; but she had turned away. His eyes encountered Bostwick's, hostile, a gleam of malice in their depths. If he refused to do this service, then, indeed, would Bostwick triumph.

"I——" he began, and stopped.

From the sala came the stirring strains of "The Stars and Stripes Forever." Overhead, Old Glory flapped in the gentle breeze. Standford straightened.

"I regret it very much," he said, in a low tone, "but I must refuse to sign health certificates. A number of those here were exposed to possible contagion. I must place the people of Buena Vista in quarantine for ten days. I'll ride over to the hacienda with you, Mr. Grahame. I may be of some assistance."

Young Fuller accompanied him to where the horses were waiting.

"I say, you had nerve!" was his comment.

Standford did not reply. The outer door had swung behind a slender, white-clad figure. Gracia stood before them, a vision in the silver moonlight. In her hand was a withering cluster of oleander blossoms.

Standford took a step forward.

"Don't make it so hard for me!" he pleaded. "I can't do it—not even if you ask it."

"But I don't ask it. I"—the soft voice broke—"came to—to tell you—to give you these."

She laid in his outstretched hand the withering cluster of oleander blossoms.

A Dance in a Trance.

And now they have a dance in London which is called the "Hypnotic Dance." The lady who does this hypnotic dance is known as Madam Magdeleine. In an interview printed in the Tattler of London, Madam Magdeleine says: "I am no automaton, I am an artist; only I require to be put in the trance before I can carry out my art." Now if this isn't exciting, I should like to know why. Think of it—a lady who dances in a trance!

Having suffered many things of many physicians, she finally consulted Prof. Magnin, who had made a great reputation as a healer of nervous diseases. He was a psycho-therapeutist and hypnotized her three times a week. Soon she was well again; and meanwhile he had made a great discovery. At the chiming of a certain clock in his consulting-room, Prof. Magnin noticed his patient's features assume an ecstatic expression. A few weeks later he got a musician to play a Chopin waltz while she was in one of her trances, and she danced it magnificently. It is through the hypnotic suggestion of Prof. Magnin that Madam Magdeleine does these dances which have set London quite mad. Probably by the time this paragraph is in print, some enterprising American manager will have secured Prof. Magnin and Madam Magdeleine. Her dancing is said to exceed in grace and charm that of any dancer that has been seen on the London stage. Whether Madam Magdeleine could dance and act without the influence of Prof. Magnin remains to be seen. She is apparently the Trilby to his Svengali. Her case has been investigated by the best-known medical experts in London, who pronounce it a genuine one of hypnotic condition. —[The Lounger, in Putnam's Magazine.

Thrips Can Be Controlled.

FRUIT GROWERS of California will receive with much gratification the authoritative information we are able to give that experiments by the United States government thrips investigators have proven entirely successful and Mr. Dudley Moulton of San José, under whose direction the experiments have been made, states that the thrips pest can be absolutely controlled by plowing and other cultivation in the fall, followed by spraying during February and March.

Heretofore, while many methods seeking to control thrips have been tried by individuals and officials, sufficient success was not apparent to warrant any one in claiming that thrips could be exterminated, and those who found the pest in their orchards faced a particularly vexatious and serious situation because of the fact. To learn that a successful method has been found to combat the insect will cause much relief in all sections.

Mr. Moulton expects to prepare a bulletin to be published by the United States Department of Agriculture within a few weeks in which will be given the results of this year's experiments on thrips. The publication will be anxiously awaited and will be reprinted for the benefit of our subscribers in California Fruit Grower at the earliest possible moment.—[California Fruit Grower.

Government Whitewash.

WHITEWASH, as used by the government, is prepared as follows: Take one-half bushel unslaked lime, slake it with boiling water, cover during the process to keep in steam; strain the liquid through a fine sieve or strainer, and add to it a peck of salt previously dissolved by soaking in warm water, three pounds ground rice boiled to a thin paste and stirred in while hot, one-half bushel Spanish whiting and one pound clean glue, previously dissolved by soaking over a slow fire in a small pot hung in a larger one filled with water. Add five gallons of hot water to the mixture; stir well and let it stand a few days, covered from dirt. It should be applied hot, for which purpose it can be kept in a kettle or portable furnace.—[Government Bulletin.

Acclimatization of Plants.

IT is more difficult to establish alfalfa in a new location or climate than it is to make the same change with Indian corn. One is a perennial and the other an annual plant. The perennial can be made to bear the change in time, but it will not do so at once. For example, box elder, red cedar and many trees from seed produced in the south are short-lived and delicate when planted in the north, while trees from the same species of northern origin are hardy in the north. Hence in the case of alfalfa, it is no doubt futile to try to establish the warm country species in a region of the north, at least until the regular but prolonged course of acclimatization can be brought through.

The explanation of the ease with which annuals such as corn or wheat can be established seems complicated in terms, but it is simple in principle. A species of corn is not an entity, but an aggregation of more elemental species. These elemental divisions may exist in large corn, not recognizable, however, in the grains to the most critical observer. It is not strange that these elemental characteristics manifest themselves when the seed is planted in a new climate. If this bushel of seed corn is planted far northward from its origination, the extra early elemental species will mature corn, while the late will fail from frost attack or more fundamental cause. Here is a fine example of adaptation, or acclimatization, and while the bushel of seed is all of the same species, the varietal or elemental habits permit the establishment of perhaps a successful corn the first year. In other words, the systematic species has been broken up into its natural divisions by environment, and by elimination the fittest has produced a generation capable of maintaining itself in the new location.

The wild species of animals do not seem subject to these mutations, because, perhaps nature is more certain in her selections than is man in his manipulation of cultivated species. It is a fact that the northern limits of wild plants have not changed within a thousand years. Applying these premises to alfalfa, which are much less subject to change than annuals we must look to the extreme northern limits of the old world for plants that will survive the extreme climates of this continent. If selection will not breed hardiness in plants, the geographical limits must be applied. There is more hope from hybridization, for a variety may be improved by crossing through the fact that hardiness of one parent may be transmitted along with the superior quality of the other.

A Complaint Settled.

ONE of those questions to which there seems no determination in the public mind has been concluded as far as the law is concerned. The University at Berkeley has a small dairy farm, used primarily in giving instruction to students in the dairy course. In this instruction it is of course necessary to produce milk and its manufactured products. For some time the regents have been selling these products to the public and this caused the dairymen of Berkeley to ask the courts for a restraining order preventing the university from selling the products of its dairy. The complainants claim that the defendants, being subsidized by the State, are in position to undersell the regular dairymen to the extent of 3 to 4 cents on the quart of milk. The defendants state that in fact they are doing the reverse, and, on account of the certified character of their milk they find a market for it at a higher than current rate.

The trial of these issues recently came before Judge Wood of Amador county, sitting for Judge Waste at Oakland. His decision is in favor of the university, and is in fact a decision that the Berkeley institution is not a "subsidized dairy." In other words, that the university dairy's being in receipt of financial support of the State does not prevent the public sale of its products. It is a decision of great interest, as many counties maintain dairies and stock-breeding institutions at their farms. In Los Angeles county the "Poor Farm" supplies milk, eggs, etc., to the County Hospital, which of course is merely a matter of book-keeping as far as the principle is concerned. Judge Wood's disposition of the university case seems final, though the plaintiffs have a way open for appeal.

Boom Literature of Value.

THE Alaska-Yukon Exposition Committee, composed of Gov. Gillett, J. A. Filcher and Frank Wiggins, has just issued a book of nearly 200 pages, entitled "California." Contributors numbering twenty-five of our most eminent people furnished the material for this work, and the text is of rare interest and value. From the historical sketch of the first pages to "The Call to the Immigrant" of the last, we find every industry of the State treated by men competent to set forth the truth in an attractive and useful manner, and they have done so without stint. Of all the literature that will be handed out at Seattle this summer I think this book will rank first in value to the State, and I commend it to the perusal of the native as well as the prospective dwellers in the Golden State.

Mr. Powell Returns.

ONCE a year, at least I am favored with a long interview with G. Harold Powell, whose name is synonymous with careful investigation and substantial progress in anything he may undertake. He was on his way East for the summer and paused in the central valleys of the State to leave some directions regarding the work of his department in the handling of table grapes. I am aware that Mr. Powell is one of those fortunate individuals with whom everything seems to go right from start to finish, and that he needs no encomiums from any one to increase his prestige. But such a quiet, progressive and helpful force is sure to engender a great amount of personal admiration, and there is no impropriety in voicing it in behalf of so many friends.

We are all sorry that Mr. Powell's work takes him away from the State a portion of the time, and had even thought to make a Californian of him sometime. Of this he has given no positive assurance. It is one of Powell's pleasantries to say that he would have become a citizen of Riverside long ago had not the qualifications of citizenship there been too high for him. However imperfect this good friend of the fruit grower may be, I know that his imperfections, if he has any, would not be counted as barring him from permanently enjoying the beauty and fellowship of that enterprising city. Jealousy as to which city should secure him might cut some figure should he decide to locate permanently in the Golden State, but wherever the location he would still be claimed by all California.

Fungus Blight on Sycamore.

A SUBSCRIBER noticing the defoliation of large sycamore trees in the Arroyo Seco running from Los Angeles into the mountains north of Pasadena sent samples of the leaves and asked if there was any way of preventing this defoliation. The leaves were curling up and dying, and some were eaten apparently by insects and were occupied by small white worms. The matter was referred to Prof. R. E. Smith of the Southern California Pathological Laboratory, and he writes:

The sycamore leaves which you sent me recently are affected by the fungus blight which is universal on these trees all over the world. The disease varies in intensity from year to year, but almost always defoliates sycamore trees everywhere at this season. A new crop of leaves is at once put out and there is no very serious damage.—[California Cultivator.

A New Selling Agency.

THE central State press has given plenty of notice lately to the new plans of selling prunes and raisins. One may see the need of this discussion, and the gravity of the problem of selling these products without having provided some means of doing so more or less under control of the growers. There are approximately one-half as many acres of prunes as of oranges in the State, and the prune is usually a prolific bearer. These acres represent about 5,000,000 bearing prune trees, an immense investment in lands and accessories and yet the prune men all admit that their industry is in a deplorable condition.

The raisin problem is just about as acute, and in neither do the growers see very clearly how they are to get the industries upon a firmer basis. The prune men, however, are reorganizing upon a plan that promises some relief, and the raisin growers thought they had placed their business upon a better foundation through affiliation with the Farmers Union. It is over this arrangement that the controversy is being maintained with some vehemence by the central press, as the prune organization is only now forming and has not excited much opposition. The Farmers' Union is under fire for consigning the raisins of its patrons. Just how it appears worse to try to sell the raisins by shipping them than to let them lie in the packing-houses, we are not informed, but the experiment has not been successful as was predicted in these columns weeks ago when the union first contracted to dispose of its charge. I am sure it takes no prophet to foretell that an agency without the right kind of selling facilities cannot make good in handling any product that is not in continual and lively demand.

The critics have been bearing down upon the union for consigning its raisins. It is not the act of consigning that is reprehensible. It is consigning without having first established adequate means of selling the fruit that seems to be the weakness of the union and the real cause of failure. We hear no criticism of the citrus fruit exchange of delivering so much of its fruit to the market without orders, for it had provided the agencies years ago and perfected them to the point where they have the market in control. It matters not that the Farmers' Union is an honest institution, or that it has revolutionized the handling of some classes of farm products in other States. The vital question is: "Is this organization in possession of the proper facilities for selling raisins?" I know of no question so paramount in the great valleys of the State, as is the organization of a system of marketing that will kill speculation among the producers and provide for the sale of fruit upon a basis that will stand the test of common sense.

The North Dakota Seed Law.

MANY persons, both farmers and seedsmen, are evidencing interest in the provisions of the act. The point of first interest to be noted is that it does not apply to seeds being sold for the present season's crop. This is but fair to all concerned as it is obvious that seedsmen could not be expected to conform to the special provisions required on short notice. It is next to be noted that its provisions should be kept in mind by all persons preparing to lay in seeds for sale in the State for sowing purposes after the date of July 1, 1909. The bill, as passed, is in all essentials identical with the bill as introduced in the Senate and published at the time by several state papers with the exception that garden seeds in packets of one pound or less are not subject to the requirements as to labeling, and noxious weeds.

Summarizing: In its essentials the law demands that persons selling or exposing seeds for sale shall attach a label which shall show the name of the person, firm or corporation responsible for the seed and also the name of the kind of seed offered; prohibits the sale of seeds containing seeds of quack-grass, sow-thistle, Canada thistle and dodder; and demands that varieties shall be reasonably true to name; establishes a seed testing laboratory at the Agricultural College and provides for the inspection, testing or analysis of samples to be sent in by citizens or collected by inspectors.—[Rural Californian.

Gladiolus and Their Care.

ONE of the most popular of bulbous flowers is the Gladiolus, especialy the new hybrid varieties, which show handsome spikes of large, richly colored flowers, many strikingly marked and variegated. The plants are erect in growth, about two feet high, and often develop one or two branches. They begin to open their flowers within a few weeks after planting, the lower buds developing first, and the others successively as the plant grows and matures, so that the blooming season is greatly prolonged. The colors range from pure white, very slightly tinged, to deep crimson and purple, and most of the varieties exhibit attractive combinations of colors in the same flower. Grouped in a bed they make a grand display, and elicit unbounded praise and admiration.

The culture of Gladiolus is very simple. The bulbs or corms are placed about six or eight inches apart, in rows eight or ten inches apart, and covered to the depth of six inches. The bed should be rich and deep, and in a sunny place. Every bulb will bloom, and the better the soil the more handsome the flowers. By deep-planting the plants do not suffer from the extreme heat of summer, and by planting at intervals of two weeks a display of the flowers may be enjoyed from March until late Autumn. A mulch of fine stable litter will be found beneficial to both plants and flowers.

In the fall, if you wish, take up the plants, remove the tops with a sharp knife, dry the corms, and store in a dark, cool cellar, where they will be well ventilated. The bublets may be stored with the others, but in planting these remove the outer covering, as this will forward growth. The bublets, being small, and slow in starting, cannot always be depended upon to bloom the first season.

New varieties are rapidly raised by hybridization, and seed-planting. If started early some of the seedlings may bloom the first season, but, as a rule seedlings do not bloom till the second year.—[Rural Californian.

The Farm Wood Lot.

WHILE only one generation from the time when the finest of our hard-wood forests were considered an encumberance, to be got rid of as rapidly as possible, we can hardly realize how very small a remnant of those forests is left in anything like the early condition as regards stand or quality of trees. However, there is yet to be found on most Ohio farms an apology for a forest in a piece of land that does double duty as a pasture and wood-lot.

There are some people who yet laugh at the idea of Ohio being short on timber-supply or that the next few decades will find us in the midst of a timber famine, so far as our home supply goes. And yet such is surely the case if the present management of Ohio woodland continues.

This statement is capable of mathematical demonstration in many instances, and even as a rule. To illustrate, a neighbor has ten acres in timber, containing four hundred grown trees, without a single young seedling coming on to take their place, because closely pastured. His needs for fuel and timber for farm purposes require at least twenty of these trees to be harvested each year. Now, the life of this wood-lot is reduced to a simple division of twenty into four hundred, when there will be one more Ohio farm without a wood-lot.

We believe the farm wood-lot is almost indispensable to any farm, and if rightly managed it will be the source of supply for all the needed fuel, the posts for all fences on the farm, the timber for the new barn or house, and boards for gates and for all needed repairs about the buildings. So it becomes not only a great convenience, but a very valuable asset of the farm as well.

To have a wood-lot thus valuable it is necessary that there be a succession of trees coming on of all sizes, from the seedling to the grown tree that is ready to harvest, and that there be sufficient variety to fill all the needs of the farm, from post timber to finishing lumber for the fine house; and we believe that the average farm wood-lot, if rightly managed, will do all this with a not very large outlay in money and labor.

We as farmers have learned that it is becoming more important each year that we apply business principle to our farm operations. When we are ready to apply these same business principles to the control of our wood-lots, they will become what they were intended to be, a possession that we can use each year as long as we live, and leave not only unimpaired, but much more valuable, to our successors.—[Rural New Yorker.

Beautifying the Home Grounds.

THE trees and plants surrounding the house are analagous to the frame of a picture and should be so arranged as to give a good back-ground to the buildings and help to present a natural view of the place.

The soil in which the trees are to be planted is a very important consideration. If the soil is too sandy and gravelly, so as to be deficient in plant food, good success with trees will be hindered unless the soil be well fertilized. On the other hand, the soil may be too heavy but this condition can be overcome somewhat by the proper application of stable manures.

A good loamy soil is conceded to be the best for trees and ornamentals, and in some cases it would pay to haul this kind of soil to start the trees in.

The size of the hole to dig for the trees depends on the size of the plant. However, one rule can be given: Be sure to dig the hole large enough to accommodate all the roots without crowding them. Before selecting your trees, take a drive through the neighborhood to see what trees and plants are already growing with success in the yards of your neighbors; also write to your experiment station and get its list. From the two sources you can make a list of the ones that would suit your site best. Now you can go to your nursery catalogue and order your trees and plants with a feeling of assurance that they will grow if you give them the proper care and attention.

In ordering trees, do not select those that are too large, because it has been found that the best success has been secured with smaller trees.

All plants, to insure the best success, should be transplanted during the dormant season, and while they can be set out in the fall or winter, spring planting is preferable.

In transplanting, do not place the trees too close together or where they will obstruct the front view of the house. Plant shrubs and ornamentals in front of the trees, also near the house to soften the outlines, and in the sharp angles made by the walks or beds. To prevent shading of shrubs and ornamentals they should not be planted too close to the trees. When flowers are planted they should be placed in front of the shrubs, to finish the background. It is not a good plan to cut up the lawn in front of the house by trees or shrubs; a few small groups of shrubs planted in the proper places will break the monotonous outlines of the lawn.

After planting the plants they should receive good care and attention. Plenty of water must be supplied to them either naturally or artificially. The soil should never be allowed to become dry. The time to irrigate can be determined by examining the soil. If the soil around the plants cracks open too much after irrigating, the cracks should be closed by filling with soil or tamping it down. This should be done until the trees or plants are established.

Pruning the trees and shrubs should be practiced only when necessary. Plants should be pruned, to give them form, to remove extra growth and dead branches. The natural form of the trees, shrubs and ornamentals should be preserved as much as possible. Limbs removed should be cut off close to the trunk to insure quick healing of the wound.—[J. E. Mundell in New Mexico College Press Bulletin.

Hardwoods in California.

THE Pacific Coast will soon be the scene of an interesting tree-growing experiment. The United States Forest Service is planning to introduce a number of the more important eastern hardwoods into California, and writes us that the service will this year experiment with chestnuts, hickory, basswood, red oak, and yellow poplar or tulip trees. Small patches of these trees will be planted near the forest rangers' cabins on the national forests, and if these do well, larger plantations on a commercial scale will soon be established on wider areas.

There are over 125 different species of trees in California, a number of which produce some of the most valuable varieties of lumber in the country. Although considerably over one-half of the species are hardwood or broad-leafed trees, yet, with the exception of the exotic eucalyptus, there is not a single species of hardwood here ranking in commercial importance with the leading eastern hardwoods. Climatic conditions in many parts of California are undoubtedly favorable for the growth of a number of the valuable hardwoods, and the absence of these trees is due mostly to unfavorable factors of seed distribution.

If the experiments are successful, a valuable asset will have been added to the forest resources of this State, which should prove of special benefit to the local furniture and vehicle industries. Chestnut and red oak are highly esteemed for furniture, while with hickory, basswood, and eucalyptus at its command, California should lead all other States in the vehicle industry.—[California Cultivator.

Care of the Body—Suggestions for Preserving Health.

Care of the Child.

THE following dispatch from Chicago was recently published:

"Study the souls of children. That is one of the purposes of the Juvenile Psychopathic Institute, organized in Chicago by philanthropic citizens and prominent settlement workers. Its final objects are to obtain for juvenile offenders proper treatment, according to their mentality and surroundings, and to achieve a diminution of juvenile criminality by eradicating the contributing cause in individual cases. The organization has employed competent medical talent and each child brought into the Juvenile Court will be examined physically and mentally, and his home surroundings, and even his ancestry, inquired into with a view of determining a cause of delinquency."

It would be well not to wait until children become criminals before undertaking the training of their moral faculties. Prof. Fröbel, the great Swiss educator, a father of the kindergarten system, said: "Give me the child from his fourth to his tenth year and I shall feel safe about his citizenship."

California has a new law, providing for health and development supervision in the public schools of the State. Boards of school trustees and city boards of education are authorized to establish such supervision and to employ the necessary examining staff and other employés. It is understood that the passage of this law is largely due to the efforts of George L. Leslie, M. A., of Los Angeles, head of the science department in the Los Angeles schools.

It is well that California should take an advanced step in this direction, for California leads all commonwealths of the Union in crime, and crime is largely due to defective care of the child.

This law will provide employment for a number of political doctors. Whether it will have any further good effect depends largely upon the manner in which it is enforced. It is a good thing to attend to such matters as defective sight, and hearing, and poor chest development, and deformities, but all these things are of minor importance in comparison with the subject of diet—of the material out of which these young growing human beings are formed. When children are fed on starches, and sweets, and slops, or overstimulating foods, and of food lacking in organic salts that feed the nerves, is it any wonder that they are not what they should be? When one inspects the average lunch of the average school child, the wonder is not that things are thus, but that they are not much worse.

Ten thousand school children in Chicago are reported to be insufficiently nourished. Doubtless. Many thousands of persons who habitually overeat are undernourished, because they do not eat the right material to make brain and brawn. There are very, very few who actually do not, for any length of time, get enough of food, by weight. Seamstresses and other poorly-paid workers starve themselves on white bread, doughnuts, bacon. tea and other so-called food that does not nourish, or only partially nourishes, when for the same amount of money they could buy nourishing food. It is a fact that a man doing ordinary work may, if necessary, keep up his physical and mental strength at a cost of 5 cents a day for food or even less. He must, however, know how.

In McClure's Magazine for June was an article by Marion Hamilton Carter on "The Conservation of the Defective Child." The author refers to the fact that in Chicago it was recently found that on entering school at the age of 7, 32 per cent. of the pupils had defective eyesight. He describes a school in Philadelphia where the minds of defective children are made over. It was established in 1907 through the liberality of Mrs. J. Lewis Crozer, and is in charge of Dr. Lightner Witmer.

It is encouraging to note that this important subject is beginning to receive attention. It is also, of course, desirable to do everything possible for defective children. Do not, however, forget that prevention is better than cure. Of much greater importance is it that men and women should be taught the great and sacred importance of properly begetting, conceiving, and training young human beings. This care should begin before the conception of the child, not after that child goes to a public school as a "defective."

Instead of this, what do we see? While men expend a vast amount of study and money in the raising of first-class live stock, it is probably safe to say that not one young human being out of a thousand is deliberately planned, begotten and conceived. They come into the world as little accidents, often unwelcome. If a child is begotten of a father who is half-intoxicated and is conceived by an unwilling mother, can you wonder that it is a defective, and perhaps a degenerate? Surely this is one of the most important of all social questions. Yet it has hitherto been almost entirely ignored, and even of late, when some people have taken up the subject of "eugenics," or the right bearing of children, they confine most of their discussions to the question of the relations between the sexes.

Elizabeth Towne gives the following advice in regard to the treatment of hysterical children:

"First. Never by any chance allow the hysteric to gain anything by hysterics.

"Second. Give her no sympathy and let her severely alone for at least twenty-four hours after each spell; she needs at least a day's absolute rest to recuperate from one such spell; and she needs a day alone in which to realize what a disgusting fool she has made of herself, and to resolve that next time she will get her way honestly or not at all.

"Third. Have it out with her at once, no mincing, then forever after treat her as if she never had a hysteric fit in her life.

"If a spell recurs, go off and leave her to have it out alone.

"Under this treatment, she will quickly outgrow the habit.

"And it will never come back unless somebody spoils her over again."

It is rather surprising to find the above, published without comment, in that excellent little weekly the Battle Creek Idea. Children are not hysterical for nothing. If the child has been wrongly fed—if as above suggested, it has been overfed of starches and sweets, and slops, and fed on food lacking in the necessary organic salts, its nerves are starved, and the poor little thing cannot well help being hysterical. In such cases, it would be cruel to treat the symptoms in the manner suggested by Mrs. Towne. Instead of thus punishing the symptoms, remove the cause.

Writing in the Ladies' Home Journal, W. L. Howard, M. D., recently said: "Would you expect to cure epileptic fits by a spanking, by locking the child up in a room, or a closet? No. Well, these unreasonable and uncontrollable fits of anger in a child are precisely the same—that is, they are symptoms of psychic epilepsy."

Sometimes there may be eye strain, or there may possibly be a lesion of the spine, in which latter case a few osteopathic treatments would work wonders.

Such an hysterical condition is often due to abuse of the young brain by overstudy. Not infrequently we see reports of suicides from this cause, and in Germany such suicides are quite common. This is a subject which should certainly have the earnest attention of any examining boards that may be appointed.

Never let your children study at home, under any circumstances, or whatever the consequences may be.

England has begun to wake up to the evils attaching to the neglect and ill-treatment of children. Last year, Parliament passed a "Children's Act" which came in force in April, this year. Among other things, the act provides a severe penalty for giving a child under the age of 5 any intoxicating liquor "except upon the order of a duly qualified medical practitioner." Always the same foolishness. Poison is no less poison when "prescribed by a physician"—perhaps a youngster who has managed to squeak through a medical examination a few weeks previously. What right has any physician to prescribe alcohol for a child under 5 years of age?

Dr. Walter Lindley of Los Angeles, who recently visited Europe, to study the problem of the treatment of deficient or morbidly-disposed children of the poor, was quoted as follows, in a special dispatch from London to The Times:

"I have been deeply impressed by schools in London of this kind. London is in this respect, far in advance of any American city, and has established outdoor schools, which I consider most beneficial for children of the poor, who are weak, abnormally backward or inclined to disease.

"I can speak only with the utmost admiration of such schools, as that in Lordship's Lane, Stoke Newington, where ninety unfortunate little ones, besides receiving ordinary mental instruction, are taught gardening and other outdoor work.

"They receive wholesome and hearty luncheon at school, and before returning to their homes are made to lie down and rest two hours in the afternoon, either on cots or on the ground, according to their bodily condition.

"The effect is to correct morbid physical tendencies, to strengthen the body, gradually to inure the child to fatigue and exposure, and to stimulate mental action at the same time. I hope very strongly that this method will be adopted soon in America."

While upon this subject, the editor of the Care of the Body would once more urge that a simple inexpensive uniform should be adopted for public school children, especially in the case of the girls. Few stop to think of the heartburning, jealousies, envies, and actual suffering, entailed upon children of the poor, or moderately well-to-do, by the overdressing that is permitted on the part of school children whose parents are rich. Indeed, this may easily lead to immorality and crime. In Japan they are ahead of us in this direction. There, in the public schools, the child of the millionaire, or the lord of the manor, wears the same simple uniform as the laborer's child. Following are extracts from an article that appeared a few days ago in a local contemporary:

"In a school not a hundred miles from Los Angeles graduation exercises were marked by several novel features. The fair girl graduates were attired as if for a premiere at the Metropolitan Operahouse—all excepting one. She was 17 years old, sweet 17, and sensitive. She wore cheap, plain clothes, the best her hard-working, poorly-paid parents could give her. She did not look comfortable or at ease among all the brilliantly-attired maidens who flashed and coruscated on every side. How could she? A woman is a woman for a' that, with all a woman's sensitiveness about her appearance on a critical occasion. . . .

"In one school—not a hundred miles from Los Angeles—the graduates were allowed to accept presents in honor of their graduation. One girl received a diamond ring from her fond parents. Others received valuable gifts of various kinds. Those who did not receive gifts from their parents, because their parents were too poor to buy gifts, naturally felt lonesome—not envious or jealous; just lonesome."

On the other hand, read the following dispatch from Chicago recently published in The Times:

"Three dollars and fifty cents will represent the total expenditure on forty-seven handsome gowns with lace garniture and trimmings, to be worn by forty-seven girl graduates of the Wentworth public school tomorrow. The Wentworth graduates have broken all records for economical gown-making. They have done all the work themselves under the general direction of the sewing teacher in the school. One day each week for the last two months has been devoted by the girls to the making of their graduation gowns. All of the work has been done secretly at the school and the parents of the graduates will see the gowns their daughters are to wear for the first time at the graduation exercises."

Sensible girls these. And sensible teachers.

In Everybody's magazine for July, there was a heart-rending description, with photographs, of the manner in which unfortunate little children of both sexes are stunted mentally, physically and morally by being overworked long hours in factories and mines of the Southern States. In permitting this, we are not only outraging childhood and depriving these young people of their right to enjoy life, but we are storing up a magazine full of terrible explosives that one time will shock the social fabric, unless this thing is stopped. The people at large will have to pay, and pay dearly, in the shape of enormously increased expenditure for reformatories and prisons and insane asylums, for the grasping greed of these selfish manufacturers and mine owners who thus exploit human flesh and blood.

To return to the subject of the new California law above referred to. If it were possible to obtain the services of such intelligent and rational physicians as Prof. Gulick, who is at the head of the physical culture department of the New York schools, and Prof. Chittenden of Yale and Prof. J. H. Kellogg of Battle Creek and Dr. Tilden of Denver and Dr. Sager of Canada, all of whom are eminently well informed and entirely sound on the important subject of diet—if it were possible to obtain the services of such men as these, to give a course of lectures to the mothers of our school children, then, indeed, we might hope for encouraging results. What, however, are we to expect from the general run of a profession that produces a man like Woods Hutchinson, who, through the columns of popular magazines, tells people to eat white flour and pork, and advises mothers to give their children more candy? Of late, some lectures have been given to mothers of Los Angeles school children by a lecturer who is thoroughly well informed and sound on the subject of diet. This is a plan that should be extended as much as possible.

Meantime, however, let the mothers—aye, and the fathers, too—not wait for teachers, and lecturers, and magazine writers to urge them to do their duty to their children. The responsibility lies with them. Especially let them be careful in regard to this all-important subject of diet. If children are fed largely on such starvation foods as sweets and white flour, you cannot expect them to be anything but nervous and irritable, and lacking in application, and if they are fed on stimulating foods, such as eggs, and fish, and meats, or overfed on any food, it is not only unreasonable, but cruel to punish them for physical and mental and moral sins, which are the natural consequence of such an unnaturally stimulating diet.

A Suggestion for the Fourth.

INSTEAD of Denis Kearney's old war cry, "The Chinese Must Go," wouldn't it be a good idea to introduce, as a modern declaration of American independence, a revolt against the absurd, objectionable and dangerous practice of firing of Chinese firecrackers and giant bombs—yes and American imitations also—that annually claim their hundreds of victims.

• • •

Cats and Rats.

REFERRING to a projected tax upon cats in Los Angeles, a correspondent of The Times recently protested against such a tax, on the ground that the cats check the spread of disease, that is said to be carried from one place to another by rats.

Yes, but the learned medicos tell us that the fur of the cat is one of the most favorable breeding-places for "infectious" diseases. How about that?

• • •

A Day of Rest.

THE barbers of Los Angeles recently requested the City Council to adopt an ordinance closing the barber shops on Sunday, so that the men might have one day's rest in the week. The City Attorney, however, advised the Council that such a law would not be constitutional. ,

Everybody should rest one day in the week. Like many others of the Mosaic laws "six days shalt thou labor" is a good one, from a hygienic point of view, although it does not matter which day you choose for your rest day. A man cannot accomplish so much good work in seven days as he can in six. During the French revolution, when they tried to upset everything relating to Christianity, they adopted a rest day once in ten days, but the scheme did not work well.

The Los Angeles Police Commission also was recently requested to allow the policemen one day's rest a week, and the request was denied. The work of a policeman is not so confining as that of a barber. Still, as stated, every man should have a day of rest once a week, in order to be able to do the best that is in him.

"Have a Handful of Raisins With Me."

SOME of these good reformers are very funny—only they don't know it. Protesting against a proposition advocated by some Los Angeles women to establish "soft-drink" shops along the line of the Los Angeles aqueduct, a correspondent in a local contemporary—after correctly stating that these drinks are harmful—goes on to suggest that instead of drinks, "hard" or "soft," raisins should be issued to the laborers.

Fancy two hard-working sons of toil coming in from their day's labor under a desert sun, with the thermometer at 110 in the shade—and no shade—remarking to one another: "Have a handful of raisins with me."

In the Good Old Summertime.

AMONG the pleasing features of life in Los Angeles are the midsummer outings, or "jinks" indulged in by some of the social clubs and other organizations, where you can see "most grave and potent segniors" unbending and playing leap frog and marbles—figuratively and sometimes literally.

This is a good thing for these old boys, for one of the surest ways of growing old is to permit yourself to get into a rut and to take yourself "too damned seriously."

Unbend! Relax! Make believe you are a boy again. All this is good medicine.

Oxypathy

The new 20th Century method of fighting disease with OXYGEN.

Nature's Own Method of Freeing Herself from Disease Without Drugs.

MANY invalids believe that remedies necessarily imply medicines, and medicines only. This is a serious mistake, for it not only leads them to be content with such limited effects as drugs are able to produce, but prevents them from acquiring a proper knowledge of the remedial resources which exist within the organism itself—the very agencies by which, in health, the vital powers are developed and maintained.

We have no hesitancy in saying that the Oxygenator is the most complete, most perfect and simplest method ever placed in the hands of an intelligent person as a means for self cure.

We have not the slightest hesitancy in asserting that this is the finest treatment known today for the relief of suffering. It cures where all other methods have failed.

The Oxygenator treatment has been fully investigated and has been found to be a positive cure for all chronic nervous diseases such as NERVOUS DEBILITY, NERVOUS PROSTRATION, LOSS OF MEMORY, INSOMNIA, RHEUMATISM and all functional troubles.

A Proven Success

The Oxygenator is not an experiment, or an instrument of doubtful merit, but a tried and proven apparatus for alleviating suffering, curing the sick. It has restored thousands to good health and happiness, and the possession of one in the home inspires a feeling of security from attacks of illness. It places the entire family in constant reach of a cure upon which they may safely rely in case of sickness.

To all suffering from disease of any nature, no matter how discouraged you may feel, we extend a cordial invitation to come and see us. If you want to cure yourself, to keep healthy and happy, come and we will gladly explain this wonderful drugless method of healing and what it will do for YOU. Oxypathy will cure where drugs have absolutely failed. If you cannot call, send for literature.

TESTIMONIALS

LOS ANGELES, CAL., FEB. 27, 1909.
MR. H. H. GUSTIN, Manager,
THE STOLZ ELECTROPHONE CO.,

Dear Sir:—The Electrophone I purchased of you two months ago has been such a boon to me that I am impelled to confer what benefit I can upon those afflicted with deafness by urging them to give your Electrophone a trial, especially since you offer free tests.

I have experimented with many "Helps to hear" for several years, but have discarded them all but yours, which fits my case exactly. Those who daily have to converse with we are as enthusiastically pleased with the instrument as I am.

By permitting you to use this I feel I am only doing a duty to my fellow-sufferers. I think they will agree with me that the genius who invented this instrument is entitled to our everlasting gratitude.

Very respectfully,
JOSEPH T. TATUM, City.

ite summer and health resort of the north. Its climatic conditions are unexcelled for health, rest, and recreation."

Now, what do you think of that?

Here are extracts from a Chicago dispatch, dated June 23, published in The Times:

"Less than a week ago, Chicagoans were shivering under a temperature of 59 above zero. Today the temperature went to 83 above, and resulted in three deaths and eight serious prostrations. . . .

"There is great distress in the Ghetto and other congested districts, where the populace is sleeping in doorways, on roofs and any other place where air can be had. Many sufferers are sleeping in the parks and along the lake front. Relief societies have begun the free distribution of ice, and all the bathing beaches and municipal swimming resorts are crowded day and night."

Good Work by Rich Women.

WHILE so many rich American women are frittering away their time and money in foolish dissipation, it is pleasing to be able to note some who better utilize their time and money. For instance, it is announced that Miss Mary Harriman, eldest daughter of E. H. Harriman, has taken one of her father's Erie ferryboats and turned it into a resort for consumptives. It will accommodate 300 men, women and children, who will sleep in the open air. Also, Helen Frick, the daughter of H. C. Frick, the steel magnate of Pittsburgh, has leased the big Stillman farm, in Massachusetts, for the accommodation during the summer months of orphans of Boston and vicinity. A thousand or more orphans will benefit by this worthy charity.

Good examples, these, for wealthy women to imitate. In addition might be mentioned the unostentatious good work being done by Helen Gould and Mrs. Russell Sage. Let us not confine ourselves to criticizing folly, but also give credit for virtue, where credit is due.

Another Professional Prononciamento.

ANOTHER American professor has opened his mouth wide—and put his foot in it. He belongs to Rockefeller's Chicago institution, which seems to be prolific in mental freaks.

This man, Frederick Starr, described as a "famous scientist, and ethnological explorer," recently informed an astonished public that women are "not civilized," that their religion is "notably that of a lower culture," and that they have never achieved anything actually first-class in literature, science, or art. Prof. Starr added:

"Savage ingenuity in gaining ends through deception and ruse and treachery has become proverbial. Civilized woman retains these practices of savagery. When it would seem equally easy for her to gain her end by straightforward and direct methods, she delights to resort to sinuous means and duplicity."

Well, and if this is to some extent true, why is it? Simply because, since the dawn of history, women have been kept in subjection by the stronger being, man, and therefore, have been forced to use their wits against his muscles, and resort more or less to deception—or diplomacy.

If this sort of thing continues, the public will soon have as little respect for the utterances of American college professors as they have for the testimony of medical experts.

The "Holy Sacrament of Matrimony."

IN San Francisco recently a young couple applied for a divorce. It seems that the man had met the girl in Arizona, and one evening, after indulging in several drinks, they decided to be married "just for a lark."

Yet some good people affect to be awfully shocked at the doings of the "Lady" in "Three Weeks."

As already mentioned here, the State of Washington recently passed a law requiring physical examination of applicants for marriage licenses. One result of this has been that the applicants for marriage licenses have greatly fallen off in Washington, while Portland, Or., near the border of the State, has become a sort of Gretna Green for Washington couples who cannot obtain a license in their own commonwealth.

This was to be expected. No laws of this kind can do much good so long as they may be avoided by skipping over a theoretical border line. It is about time that we should have a uniformity of laws in this country relating to marriage, divorce, bankruptcy, and a few other things.

Bogus Whisky.

FOR some time past the President has been laboring with the weighty problem, What is whisky? The Solicitor-General of the United States recently submitted to the President a long opinion as to what the word "whisky" means, in law. The opinion leans somewhat in favor of the recognition of mixtures, or "blends" as the manufacturers call them. However, it is announced that the President desires to hear further testimony from the distillers of real whisky. That is right.

Surely, it should not need the services of a Philadelphia lawyer—or a solicitor-general—to find out that a compound, manufactured from neutral spirits, flavored with a number of substances some of which are much more injurious than prune juice, cannot properly be called whisky. Unfortunately, however, this is another case where the Almighty Dollar gets in its heavy work. It is something like the benzoate of soda business. About 85 per cent. of the whisky manufactured and sold in the United States is bogus. It is the manufacturers of this injurious stuff that are making the fight to have their product recognized as the real thing.

As previously suggested here, it is a disgrace to a great and wealthy country like this that it should consent to put its stamp of approval and derive a large part of its revenue from adulterated beverages, sailing under false colors. A large proportion of the brutal and violent crimes committed by people under the influence of liquor are due, not so much to the alcohol as to the vile compounds with which the alcohol is adulterated. In the olden days, when whisky was pure and cheap, you rarely heard of such horrible crimes as are now of daily occurrence.

In these days of pure-food agitation, it is surely most illogical, unreasonable, and unjust for the government

Tuberculosis

"I am convinced that in Mercury we have a specific for tuberculosis." (U. S. Naval Medical Bulletin, Washington. Government Printing Office, 1908.) This statement, which could hardly be made stronger, is occasioned by the almost incredible results obtained at the U. S. Naval Hospital, Los Animas, Colo., where a careful and scientific investigation of the treatment of Tuberculosis by Imido-succinate of mercury is being conducted. The improvement in many cases is almost startling: In one, death was expected in a few days, but after less than six weeks' treatment the patient had gained 28 lbs. The report adds: "This transformation from a dying condition to one of such marked improvement in so short a period is most gratifying." The latest bulletin (April, 1909.) states that of the 83 patients under this treatment 89.16 per cent. have improved, several discharged cured. "The results obtained by this method of treating tuberculosis have been exceedingly gratifying, both to the patients and to the staff of this hospital." (1908 report.) As but few of the general public have, as yet, even heard of this treatment, and realizing its great importance, it has been decided to open a department at the Los Angeles Dispensary, 214-215 Columbia Trust Building, 312 West Third street, where a physician will be in attendance from 2 to 4 daily (except Sundays) to explain the method (no fee charged,) and treat those suitable cases who may desire it.

EyesAche? Headache? Nervous?

Painful vision, headaches and general nervousness are more frequently the result of eye-strain than of any other one thing. Dr. De Schweintz, Professor of Ophthalmology of the University of Pennsylvania, says that "fully 60 per cent. of functional headaches are caused by astigmatism alone."

Almost all eyes possess more or less of this refractive error. You probably have it.

The Cure For It

The only cure for this kind of eye strain is properly fitted glasses. Medicine will not reach it.

Miss Jennie Williams, a former Los Angeles school teacher, says of my work: "Previous to coming to you I had taken a year's vacation because of continuous headaches and nervousness, but with no relief when school work was resumed. Your treatment effectually cured me of these disturbances."

Mrs. McBride, N. Grand avenue: "Your glasses have entirely cured my headaches, and I can see perfectly."

Dr. Biel, Whittier: "The glasses you made for me are the most satisfactory of any I have ever had."

Rev. Mr. Lord, Alhambra: "Your glasses give me the best service I have ever been able to obtain. My eyes were in bad shape before you took hold of them."

to continue to permit the sale of this adulterated rotgut as genuine whisky.

If manufacturers of jams, and jellies, and catsups may use unlimited quantities of benzoate of soda, and other dangerous preservatives, and distillers may put forth doctored "dope" as pure whisky, then, indeed, the pure-food law will have become a "blooming" farce, even before it has been thoroughly put into effect. Literary Work and Fatigue.

A LARGE number of letters are received every day by the editor of the Care of the Body department. One fact made prominent in these letters is that in these days of public schools and higher education only a very small proportion of Americans know how to write good English. It would be better if our schools would leave out some of the "frills" and teach children at least how to spell and how to compose a simple letter in decent English.

Oscar Schleif is a versatile individual. He is a pianist, an author, a lecturer, and an athlete. He is interested in hygiene, occasionally contributing to hygienic magazines. Last summer he reëntered the athletic arena after an interval of sixteen years, making second place in a mile swimming championship.

Mr. Schleif was formerly a resident of Los Angeles. He has written a little book entitled "The Technic of English." (Published by the author, 1526 N. Park avenue, Philadelphia.) In this, he gives a number of suggestions in regard to the construction of English sentences and paragraphs, with examples. Also analyses of the words used by noted writers.

In regard to the influence of fatigue upon style the author says:

"Among the various causes of undesirable repetition we must mention fatigue. In analyzing style, one of our first observations is the high average vocabulary of introductory paragraphs. While of subsequent repetition much may be due to the natural limitations of a subject, and to the involved reintroductions, yet in accounting for the decreasing vocabulary we must look largely to the elements of carelessness and fatigue, one or both of which tend to appear and to become more noticeable as work progresses. At the beginning of a subject or chapter the writer is likely to have in mental readiness a certain amount of material which has already received technical care, but in putting down subsequent matter he is obliged, as regards both ideas and phrasing, to rely more upon inspiration. A parallelism in progressing deficiency may be found in handwriting. Here the factors of carelessness and fatigue are similarly active, introductory lines and paragraphs showing greater clearness and legibility than is displayed by subsequent passages. Indeed, graphologists claim that fatigue, when present, is unfailingly indicated by a drooping tendency toward the end of any sustained piece of writing, even if this tendency is noticeable only in the final downward stroke of a signature."

Mr. Schleif may be a good composer, but he is a "bum" speller. He adopts that hideous style of misspelling some words such as "thruout," "brot," "thots." He would probably spell that classic sentence, sent as the first message over the telegraph wire thus: "Wot hath God rot?"

This is sufficient to induce "fatigue" in the mind of the normal person—even at the beginning of a sentence.

Osteopaths in Los Angeles.

THE recently-issued city directory shows that there are 120 osteopathic physicians in Los Angeles. In this, as in so many other things, Los Angeles undoubtedly leads the world. There is probably no other city in the world that has anything like so many osteopathic physicians as Los Angeles. In the great city of London there are said to be only two.

This is undoubtedly, to some extent, due to the teachings of the Care of the Body, in regard to the value of the osteopathic system of adjusting the spine, and so overcoming unnatural pressure on the nerves. Ten years ago, when the Care of the Body department was started, osteopathy was comparatively unknown to our people. Now it is a household word.

Remember, however, as frequently stated here, that osteopathy is only one of the many natural methods of aiding nature to eliminate morbid matter, which is what we call disease, from the system. The broad-minded osteopath realizes this, and recognizes the great importance of diet, exercise, breathing, hydropathy, etc. No other kind of osteopath should be employed.

  It was the year you died.

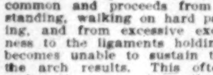
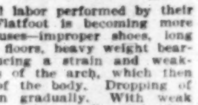
Rheumatic Feet





HOW IT RAISES THE INSTEP

Most people are not aware of the actual labor performed by their feet until they become troublesome. Flatfoot is becoming more common and proceeds from various causes—improper shoes, long standing, walking on hard pavements or floors, heavy weight bearing, and from excessive exercise, producing a strain and weakness to the ligaments holding the bones of the arch, which then becomes unable to sustain the weight of the body. Dropping of the arch results. This often comes on gradually. With weak arches the person loses that elastic step, tires easily and often complains of great pains in the heel, instep and ankles. The next stage is flatfoot, and as the disease advances severe, excruciating pains radiate up the limbs, and as a rule unfit the sufferer for work. The first thought is rheumatism, and in many instances they resort to liniments, bandages, mud baths and taking medicines internally.

The trouble lies entirely with the severe strain on the muscular and nervous system through the arch or instep.

Army recruiting surgeons reject one-third of the applicants for this one ailment. My properly fitted NON-SPRINGY Arch Supports afford immediate relief and effect a permanent cure by supporting the arch in a natural, easy manner, gradually raising the bones to their normal position, relieving all the strain on the weakened and relaxed ligaments until they are capable of resuming their natural functions. Price $2.00, $2.50 or $3.50 per pair. Consultation free.

Gentlemen—In July of last year Mrs. Patrick bought an Acousticon, Class L. T. No. 2. In order to test it we attended the theater the same night, and our seats were so badly situated that I could hear nothing and left the theater after the first act. My wife heard every word of the play, however. Since then she has been able to attend lectures, hear plays, listen to sermons and enjoy other pleasures of which she was for years deprived. We are both satisfied that the Acousticon has certainly improved her hearing; she now finds herself when not using the instrument hearing conversations which she could not hear before. This I think is not due to any improvement in the condition of her ears, but because she now has confidence in herself and has overcome the nervous fear that she could not hear. You are at liberty to use this testimonial in any way you see fit and we gladly extend you the permission to do so for the reason that we are quite sure that a great many deaf people who are being deprived of many of the pleasures of life would have these restored to them by a thorough trial and use of your instrument. Yours truly, [Signed] EDW. T. PATRICK.

We are Sole Agents in Southern California for this wonderful little instrument, which has been tried and tested by the most noted people in the world. Any one afflicted with deafness may try the instrument free of charge. Hearing Instruments of Every Description.
